THE THREE SONS.

A DRAMA IN THREE ACTS.

Translated from Le Figaro of Paris, for THE TIMES.

BY JAMES PENNY.

ACT THE FIRST.

With its lofty windows overlooking Varenne street, its massive stone steps and its profusely ornamented ceilings the hotel—the silent hotel—notwithstanding its silence and quietude still appeared to be inhabited.

Three men seated in the drawing room of the first floor listlessly looked at one another without uttering a word. They were three brothers, Monsieur le Marquis, Monsieur le Count, and Monsieur le Viscount. They calmly and nonchalantly awaited the termination of a medical consultation held in an adjoining chamber.

At any moment they might learn from the senior of the consulting physicians if any hope remained of prolongation of the life of Gabriell Anne Sophie, Dowager Marquise de Guebrianges, relict of the late Marquis Hercules de Guebrianges.

The eldest of the three sons the Marquis was tall and slender with a highly gentlemanly appearance, and dressed comme-il-faut. A glance would shew that he was scarcely thirty years of age. His hair was aristically cut and combed and not being either strong or abundant covered but sparsely the surface of his cranium in itself of small dimensions.

He wore an eyeglass, a simple oblong crystal, inserted beneath his left eyebrow, without either setting or cord. In falling off his horse one day he was unfortunate enough to break his leg, but his glass was not displaced—budged not a whit. His friends and acquaintance cited that fact as a distinguihing trait in his character—a trait of coolness and aplomb—which was almost beyond the bounds of belief.

The Count, the second son, who was more florid in his appearance and character than the elder brother, bore with all due equanimity the ennui and lack of excitement of his twenty-three years. His auburn red moustachios, worn in a soldierly fashion, a-la-militaire, indicated an open impulsive nature, burning to distinguish itself in the world, and he bore the reputation of being the most intelligent of the family.

The youngest brother the Viscount, scarcely arrived at the verge of his twentieth year, appeared to be already old. The wrinkles on his beardless face accented themselves with a fearful precocity. He was of an astounding delicacy of frame, and frequently afflicted with a cough which seemed to tear his narrow breast in twain. His head was ever thrown back and his mouth distorted, whilst his lips and compressed jaws were ever the color of pale violets.

The door was gently opened and four gentlemen entered in Indian file holding in their hands immensely oppressive looking hats, hybrids between fashion and quakerdom.

The eldest, the president, the specialist, the one to whom the others deferentially bent their heads and listened, and even regarded his movements with demonsrations of respect, expressed himself with great gravity, weighing his words as carefully as a preacher on a dogma broached by an antagonist in polemical strife,

He gave a succiend history of the malady, expanded on the ulceration of the trachea, touched slightly on the atrophy of the kidneys, and tersely combined all their conclusions, from a medical point of view, pure and simple.

His colleagues nodded their sapient heads in sign of approval. When he had finished he rose up and his chest expanded while he heaved a deep sigh. Then turning towards the three young men, he said, with the sound of tears in his voice, "Gentlemen, however painful it may be for me to speak—but—but—you are men—you will be men—will you not?—THIS IS THE END."

He paussed here, then added in continuation, with his eyes thrown up towards heaven, and in the low impulsive tones of a grand climax of pious entreaty, in which his medical subalterns immediately by soft murmuring sounds concurred, "unless we should see another miracle."

They retired without another word.

The doors closed softly after them. Professional etiquette was now quickly emancipated from thraldom, and as they stepped along the passage and across the vestibule their voices became high, strong and distuct to the listeners in the chamber.

"You will come along with me to the musical matinee?"

"No, I cannot, it is totally impossible to-day."

"Well, well, on Tuesday we will go to the Palais Royal together."

"Adieu—Adieu—Adieu—Au revoir."

The three brothers quickly entered the sick chamber, where the gloom was intensified by closed shutters and carefully drawn curtains, and was lighted only by a small wax candle in an antique brass candlestick. They held themselves motionless, side by side of each other, near the bed where thir mother listlessly lay extended on her back, wrapped in the extreme unconsciousness of appracbing dissolution.

The eldest who seemed to speak for himself and his two brothers, said, "Do you suffer much my mother?"

With her long pointed fingers, as attenuated as the fragile body of a starved worm, she made a negative sign; the next moment here arm raised but for one instant fell lightly upon the silken coverlet and she resumed her mummy-lik attitude of both mind and body.

Her skin appeared to be emaciated, wrinkled and yellow—but she still displayed and an abundance of fine white hair.

A warm ray of affection shone out of her blue eyes which seemed to laugh at the bottom of their orbits as the eyes of a illyosotis at the bottom of a well. It was easy to see a whole lifetime of unhappiness and of incessant sacrifices, borne with patience and resignation, in the expression of those now quivering eyelids. Her teeth were cliched and she respired in the faintest manner possible, economising the last moments of her life as though she did no care to exaust by the slightest effort the little of here-below which reigned in her lungs and delicate body.

The Marquis spoke once more, "Mother, do you recognize us?"

An almost undistinguishable whistling noise escaped from her lips. It was the faint sound of her reply. Each of her sons bent slightly over the bed and lent an attentive ear to catch her last words.

"My children" at length murmured the dying lady, "I am about to die, I feel it, I know it."

The eldest son interrupted her with the soft low exclamation "Oh! mother! My mother!

They listened with wet eyes and in an attentive and respectful attitude.

She continued, "Do not wee—wee—weep for me, rather pra—pray for—me. Oh! yes, fervently! I am a—a—bad—bad—mother, I have committed a grave fault—yes a sin—a crime. Oh! I have frequently beg—begged God's pardon. And now, yes,—before I meet him face to face, I ought—I know, I ought—I must—I am bound to make confession to you all—to say—wherein I sinned."

She hesitated a minute, yes minutes, from extreme emction and exhaustion, then lowering her eyelids as though to soften or hide some deep feelings of shame or regret, she said.

"I have been unfaithful to your—father—your good father—I sinned—I deceived him—one—of you—is not—is not—his son—not his son. It is—it is—it is——."

She hesitated—stopped—bent slightly on one side—and expired with her face turned slightly from her children and towards the lone dark narrow lane on that side of the mansion.

ACT THE SECOND.

They soon paused, however, and posted themselves in an adjoining apartment.

The Marquis who showed some slight symptoms of emotion commenced to speak. "We have just heard the preliminary of a sad and astounding avowal that the rigid hand of death has not permitted our poor mother to finish."

'I am quite certainthat the idea of accusing the one who is now departed from us would never enter the minds of either of you, my brothers, nor of myself.

"The dreadful secret which has been only partially revealed to us will remain a secret for us alone for ever.

"The world will not—cannot suspect anything so outrageous of our house, of our family. Behold everything promptly and naturally arranged.

"To the eyes of all others I, John, am still and ever the Marquis. Rene will be Count, and Francois, Viscount de Guebrianges. But to us who know that one amongst us has strange alien blood in his veins, less pure, possibly than that of our father, will it be possible to remain vis-a-vis of one another in such a false embrrassing and annoying condition of affairs?

"Will not our very ignorance, our almost voluntary ignorance of the facts be in itself culpable and a crime? Is it not our common interest to dissipate within the limits of a clear and logical possibility those doubts which hang over the legitimacy of our birth, even though it should bring to one a change from an unhappy uncertainty to the sharp pangs of a painful and poignant certainty? I, for one, demand to be purged of the uncertainty and consequently of the stain?"

"What think you of it? Say! Speak!"

"I think responded the Count Rene, "that you are right, and if I read the thoughts of the Viscount aright he is entirely of my opinion. If you had not spoken my dear brother, I was ready—nay, anxious—to express the self same opinion that you have expressed upon the blow which has attainted our honor and the honor of our ancient family.

"You have forestalled me but I could not have better thought out, the idea nor better expressed my thought, and I thank you for it. So in order to give you here, absolutely at once, the proof of my sincerity you must permit me, although I shall suffer deeply by it, to put a stop for ever to all your anxieties and annoyances.

"I believe that my mother intended to designate me—me—alone—in the painful revelation that she has not had sufficient strength to conclude

"I will try and explain myself briefly.

"You, John, our eldest brother, came into the world only just within the year which followed the marriage of our late father and our lamented mother, consequently you have the fullest right to demand that your legitimacy and your name shall not be attainted by the least suspicion.

Rumor shall not have birth.

"You Francois, the youngest, the one who is cherrished by us all, you have been born some months after the death of our sister Bertha; of that dear sister that our mother has not ceased to lament in sorrow every day and every night since the sad event.

"You cannot, without insulting the memory of her who reposes in eternal sleep within a few steps of us, I say, you cannot believe yourself the offspring of a a maternal fault. Whilst, as for me—let a half word, an allusion suffice—save me and save yourselves those researches so full of poignant anguish and regret. I accept the situation and though it be.

"I was born out of France, when our father Monsieur de Guebrianges was ambassador at St. Petersburg. My mother was beautiful and attractive—was twenty-nine—highly intelligent, spirituelle—was the ambassadress Sophie, as she was generally called—in fine, she intended to, designate me as the stained one, I feel it a certainty past contradiction, and, oh! I pray that my mother may pardon me for evoking into the light of day that vital error of her otherwise blameless life.

"I carry out her latest, yes her very latest, wish in speaking as I have done.

"SHE WAS MY MOTHER.

And now I await your decision as to what step shall be taken in respect to our own future intercourse and line of conduct."

The eldest and the youngest brothers the Marquis and the Viscount, had, during this impassioned speech gradually approached each other both in person and in sentiment.

The Marquis—priority of birth counts for something nay, counts for much, very much, in La Belle France as well as in Old England—the Marquis stretched his figure to its full height and said in tones studiously cold and cautious, "Monsieur Rene, I and my brother sincerely thank you for your frankness. For us, and not for us alone, for the public, you will remain Count de Guebrianges. Only, and mark my words, only, we cannot any longer inhabit the same mansion together.

"WHEN SHALL YOU SET OUT."

ACT THE THIRD.

"But, But, But, Oh! after the funeral, after the obsequies of my dear mother."

Simply saluting one another by a cool shake of the head, without another word, without another look, all three passed into the chamber of death and bent their heads and their knees by the side of the corpse of their mother, but as promptly sprang up and drew back in the utmost terror.

La Marquise, their late mother, moved. Visibly she was not yet dead.

She had ostensibly died, but in reality had only fainted and became unconscious from extreme weakness when they had last left the chamber.

Now as her three sons stood rigid as statues with their dilated eyeballs riveted upon her pallid features, she fairly raised herself upon one elbow and almost instantly fell back upon the pillow, dead, dead without a shadow of doubt, having first articulated in clear although extremely tremulous tones.

"It was the Marquis, I meant to say.

"It was John, my first born, who was the son of another father.

"OH! GOD!——G-O-D!"

Immagination must paint the scene that followed this avowal, and imagination alone could pourtray the chagrin, the crest fallen appearance of the arrogant Marquis at this astounding revelation.

No pen could limn even the faintest outlines of the tableau.

Pride shall have a fall! This fall was immense and notwithstanding all the care taken by the family rumor caught an inkling of the facts and blazoned them forth with all the embellishments of her thousand tongues, so that the alliance of the Soi-disant Marquis was rejected by several of those who pride themselves in the purity of their blue blood, and who had formerly sought and rejoiced in his acquaintance.

RESIDENCE LIGHTING.

Progress of the Peterborough Light and Power Company, Ltd.

In June, 1892, this company first commenced supplying electric light to residences by meter, charging the price which was found to be usual at that time in other places of a similar size. On the first of January, 1893, the rate was reduced 35 per cent. in consequence of the increasing number of consumers, and at this rate the light was being supplied more cheaply in Peterborough than in Port Hope, Belleville, Kingston, Chatham or Hamilton. The number of consumers has since increased considerably, and on this account the Company are again able to make a reduction in their price; and with a view to induce a large number of people now using other forms of illumination to adopt the electric light, they have decided to allow a cash discount of 33 1-3 per cent. from all accounts for current supplied by meter in residences, on and after January 1st, 1895, if the monthly account is paid within the first ten days of the following month.

This reduction will make the price charged for lighting 16 per cent. lower than is charged in the city of Toronto, and 33⅓ per cent. less than charged in Montreal and Quebec, and should bring electric light within the reach of every household in Peterborough.

Refused Grants.

The County Council has refused the grants asked for by the Agricultural Societies of East and West Peterborough. The plank of economy which is conspicuous in the platforms of corporations both private and public these days, seems to be sticking out more prominently than usual this year.

Another Case of Smallpox in Guelph.

Provincial Health Officer Bryce has been notified of another smallpox case at Guelph Experimental Farm. The patient was a daughter of Green, at whose house William Swartz, the student afflicted with the disease, boarded. The patient was removed to the city hospital.

To Meet on February 21st.

The Ontario Legislature has been called together to meet on Thursday, February 21st next. The date was decided on at a meeting of the Council on Wednesday afternoon, and a proclamation will be immediately issued to that effect.

Married at Twilight.

On Wednesday evening, at the residence of Mrs. Bates, Stewart st., the marriage of Mr. Charles N. MacWilliams to Miss Jessie Bates was solemnized, the Rev. A. MacWilliams, of St. Andrew's church, officiating. A large number of friends of the bride and groom were present. Following the ceremony the party satedown to an enjoyable wedding dinner. The young couple received many costly presents.

Amended Jurors Act.

A proclamation, dated January 24th, has been issued by the Provincial Government, calling into effect on the 26 instant the Act which was passed in the session of 1893, and by which the number of grand jurors was reduced from fifteen to thirteen. The amended Acts directs that wherever the words "twenty-four" appear in schedule B of the Jurors Act, they shall be replaced by the word "thirteen," and also directs the reduction of the requisite number of jurors, as cited above.

Married in Keene.

A very large and pleasant affair took place in Keene Thursday, the occasion being the marriage of Mr. Thomas Armstrong to Miss Aggie Miller, eldest daughter of Mr. William Miller. Mr. Armstrong is an old Ashburnham boy, while the bride is well known in town. About 250 invitations were issued and the gathering was both large and fashionable, quite a number from Peterborough attending. The newly wedded pair received a shower of congratulations and presents. They left immediately for points west.

A Dangerous Habit.

Some people have the habit when they go to the depot to see their friends off of accompanying them on board the train and remaining on board until the train is in motion and then having to jump off. The practice is a most absurd as well as a dangerous one, especially if there is a crowd. One evening lately a gentleman at Port Hope accompanied a lady friend on board and remained on board until the train was in motion, and in jumping off slipped and fell, and had one arm taken off by the train. Several other accidents of the same nature have occurred quite recently and should prove a warning to those who indulge in the silly habit.

"Henry B" Won.

News was received last night that "Henry B," owned by Mr. H. LeBrun, won first money in the principal event at the Port Perry races yesterday, winning a purse of $150. There were 11 horses faced the wire, but they weren't in it with "Henry B" who made a clean run from start to finish, spurting in the stretch in a manner that won the admiration of the spectators. The track was in fine condition, very fast, and there was a big crowd in attendance. This was the first race and first time "Henry B" ever trotted for money. His owner is justly proud, but took it coolly—as he was not there. The horse trots again today.

Mr. Cavanagh's Case.

It will be generally regretted when it is learn that in the case of Timothy Cavanagh, no appeal can be taken from the Magistrate's decision. Mr. Cavanagh was liberated under the misapprehension that an appeal could be entered. In consequence he will have to serve the term the Magistrate imposed. The police have been notified by Sheriff Hall to apprehend Mr. Cavanagh on sight. Had the Chief of Police allowed the conviction to go as a first conviction, as a less vindictive person would have done, Mr. Cavanagh's case would have been settled by the payment of a nominal fine, a punishment, which in effect would have carried out the intent and purpose of the law. There is a great deal of spite vented in the guise of duty. Mr. Cavanagh has the sympathy of a large number of citizens. To a man of his age, imprisonment means loss of health, perhaps permanently.

WEDDING BELLS.

Mr. Alfred Parker and Miss Minnie Frise United in Wedlock.

A very pretty wedding took place at 9 o'clock Wednesday at the residence of Mr. John Frise, McDonnel street, when his fourth daughter, Miss Minnie, was joined in holy wedlock to Mr. Alfred Parker, the well-known and popular proprietor of the Peterborough Dye Works. The Rev. W. R. Young officiated.

The bride was assisted by her sister, Miss Lillian Frise, while the best man was Rev. D. G. Harrison, of Albert College, Belleville. The bride wore a neat travelling suit of grey material. The newly wedded pair were the recipients of many and beautiful presents. They are both well-known and popular in social and church circles. At noon they took the C. P. R. for Montreal and Ottawa.

MANY COMPLAINTS

About the Loose Delivery System in the Post Office.

A number of anonymous communications have been received at this office complaining of the loose manner in which the mail delivery at the post office is conducted. While there is a great deal of truth in the complaints, the letters will not be published, but will meet the fate of all anonymous communications.

In addition to these letters, several complaints have been made in person by citizens. A well known merchant showed THE TIMES a letter stamped with the Lindsay postmark on Jan. 21st and also the Peterborough postmark of the same date. He did not receive this letter until the 27th, six days later, although he visited his post office box several days in the interval. The letter was from a business firm in Lindsay, telling him not to go to Lindsay as had been arranged. In consequence of not receiving the letter, he went to Lindsay and had the trip for nothing. The letter reached the Peterborough office on Jan. 21st as evidenced by the postmark. Looseness in the delivery department is the only solution of the delay.

WEDDING BELLS.

A Norwood Young Lady Well-Known in Peterborough.

Uptergrove, Ont., was the scene of a very pretty wedding on the 16th, when Miss Carry B. Renwick, formerly of Norwood, was united in the bonds of wedlock to J. P. Thomas, of Niagara Falls, N. Y. The groom was supported by the Rev. Dr. Crawford, of Niagara Falls, Ont., Miss Barbara Thompson assisting the bride. Rev. Dr. Bell welded the link that made them man and wife, after which he made a few well-chosen remarks. The bride and bridesmaid looked extremely pretty, and were, of course, the central point of attraction to the admirers of well-gowned womanhood.

After a very excellent entertainment at which the forty guests satisfied their inward craving for a manifestation, the wedding party drove away to Atherby Station and from there took the train for Toronto. The popularity of the bride and groom was well indicated in the many pleasant and handsome rememberances of which they were the reciepients. They will make their home in Niagara Falls, where the best wishes of the Register and the bride's friends will follow them.—Norwood Register.

MARKET FEES.

The County Council Will Amend the By-Law—Important Changes.

The market bylaws of the town met with objection on the part of the Special Committee of the County Council, and some amendments will be made. The report of this committee was as follows:

Your special committee appointed to consider the market bylaws of the town of Peterborough beg leave to report as follows:

1. Your committee met a special committee of the Town Council who discussed with us objections to the present bylaws and who asked us to place in writing any reasonable amendments which we would consider fair and desirable.

2. Your committee consider that in many respects the town bylaw is not in itself over exacting, but that in the interpretation thereof the town officers overconstrue the bylaw to their own advantage. For instance, a farmer brings in a load of say 20 hogs. For weighing this load, which only requires one draft, the market clerk taxes him 5c each hog or $1 for the load. In order to obviate the state of things your committee would recommend that section 16 of town bylaw, No. 434, be amended as follows, viz:

For each load of hay, including market fees	$ 15
For each load of straw, including market fees	10
For each head of cattle, horses, etc	10
For all other drafts up to 5 lbs	01
For all other drafts over 5 lbs up to 20 lbs	02
For all other drafts over 20 lbs up to 100 lbs	03
For all other drafts over 100 lbs	10

3. Your Committee would also recommend that the said bylaw be amended so as to make no charge for a market toll on each waggon, sleigh, etc., with oats, barley or peas for sale.

4. Your Committee would recommend that a copy of this report be sent to the town council.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

JAS. MIDDLETON,
Chairman.

County Council Chambers,
Peterborough, January 26th, 1894.

The report was adopted.

A PROSPEROUS CONCERN.

In another column appears a synopsis of the annual report of the Temperance and General Life Assurance Company, one of the most prosperous assurance company's in existence to-day. The progress of this company during the year 1894, has been phenomenal, considering the prevailing hard times, and the managers and directors are to be congratulated upon the most excellent showing made. A perusal of this interesting report will show that the company's assets are of such a favorable character that it had not one dollar's worth of interest in arrears nor one dollar's worth of real estate on hand at the close of the year. The company has steadily and largely increased its business in every important respect, and its experience has justified it in paying one-third larger profits to total abstainers than to non-abstainers. The officers of the Temperance and General are: Hon. Geo. W. Ross, president; Hon. S. H. Blake, Q. C., and Robt. McLean, Esq., vice-presidents; H. Sutherland, manager; J. G. Beggs, secretary.

Is it this Kelleher?

A few days ago THE TIMES published a letter from A. C. Schnell of Guthrie, Oklahoma, stating that one John Kelleher had died and left considerable property, which was waiting claim by his relations who were supposed to reside somewhere in the vicinity of Peterborough. Yesterday afternoon Mrs. Whelan, of Lakefield, armed with the copy of THE TIMES, called at the police station for further information. She remembers a cousin named John Kelleher who left Canada years ago when a mere lad, and went to the States. He had not been heard from since. She believed his father to be the late Denis Kelleher, of Otonabee. She thinks he has two brothers in California, and she intends writing to them.

MR. GARVIN DISMISSED.

HIS ENGAGEMENT AS INSPECTOR OF PETERBOROUGH SCHOOLS WILL TERMINATE APRIL 30.

Lack of Harmony Between the Teachers and the Inspector the Reason Assigned for His Dismissal—The Inspector Given a Hearing in Committee.

At a special meeting of the Board of Education held last night, the Committee on Appointments brought in their report recommending the dismissal of Inspector J. W. Garvin, and put to a vote, it was adopted unanimously. Inspector Garvin's engagement will terminate on the 30th of April next.

There were present at the meeting Dr. Burnham, in the chair, and Trustees Hill, Hartley, Boucher, Ferguson, Hamilton, Edgecombe, McBain, Law, Wrighton, Denne, and Hayes.

Chairman Hill read the report immediately after the Board was called to order. He moved its adoption, and was seconded by Trustee Denne. The report read as follows:—

FRICTION IN THE SCHOOLS.

To the Chairman and Members of the Board of Education:—

GENTLEMEN,—Your Committee on Appointments beg leave to report that a meeting of the Committee was held on the 18th day of January, inst., for the purpose of considering the relations at present existing between the Board of Education and Inspector Garvin.

It was felt by the Committee that it was absolutely necessary, in the interest of the public schools, that the Inspector and the Board should be able to work together in harmony, and that the constant friction which has existed for a very considerable time, and which has now become chronic, can only be terminated by Mr. Garvin's resignation.

The chairman of the committee was therefore directed to ask Mr. Garvin to hand in his resignation by the 31st instant, to take effect upon the 30th of June next.

A subsequent meeting of your Committee was held this evening for the purpose of further considering the matter, when it was decided, that whereas the Inspector has not handed in his resignation, though requested to do so by an all but unanimous decision of this committee, composed of the whole Board, that the Board be recommended, and the Committee accordingly do now recommend, that the engagement of Inspector Garvin be terminated upon the 30th day of April next and that notice to that effect be given to him according to the terms of his contract.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

W. H. HILL,
Peterborough, Jan. 31st. Chairman.

Before the report was passed Mr. James Stevenson moved an amendment in effect that owing to the necessity for cutting down expenses and a more economical course, Inspector Garvin be dismissed.

"I don't think economy has anything to do with this report," said the chairman.

"But I do," retorted Mr. Stevenson, independent of any opinion you may have, Mr. Chairman. I think I am doing an act of justice in trying to place this amendment on the minutes, and if I can get a seconder, I want it put to a vote,

The amendment failed to find a seconder, and consequently was lost. The report was submitted to a vote and carried unanimously.

GIVEN A PATIENT HEARING.

Before the Board met in regular session, and at about 7.30 o'clock, the Committee on Appointments convened in the board-room and gave Inspector Garvin a patient hearing. The latter spoke earnestly for nearly an hour, defending his course and the work he had done in the schools. This meeting was private and the reporters being excluded, the text of Mr. Garvin's remarks could not be learned, nor the deliberations of the committee. It is presumed, therefore, that the only charge against the Inspector is embodied in the committee's report.

"Brer" Scriver's All Right.

This is the way the Hastings Star talks subscription to the public: Any man can take a newspaper. It is the cheapest thing he can buy. Everytime a hen chucks and has laid an egg his paper is paid for that week. It costs less than a postage stamp, less than to send or receive a letter. What good does it do you? It instructs you and your wife and pleases your children; it comes to you every week, rain or shine, calm or storm, bringing you the best news of the neighborhood. No matter what happens in enters your doors a welcome friend, full of sunshine and interest; it shortens the long summer days and enlivens the long winter nights; it is a good adviser, your gossip and friend. No man is just to his children and wife who does not give them the home paper to read.

MAN AND BOY.

Peterborough's Chief of Police, a man supported by the corporation, and who himself supports a "corporation" indicative of much strength, but which, seemingly, is misleading, made a fine record for himself yesterday. He made a record and also broke a record, the latter feat being evidenced by the fact that he actually went alone, absolutely unattended by any of his staff, to make an arrest.

Sometime yesterday J. Steele, barber, made complaint at headquarters that a pair of clippers, used in cutting close to the cranium refractory hair, had been surreptitiously taken from his shop. Early in the morning two young men had entered his shop, and after they had left he missed his hair mower. Mr. Steele's tonsorial emporium is located adjacent to the Carew House, and upon enquiries he learned that the same youths had been in that hostelry shortly before entering his place, and that the Carew House was minus a bottle of seven-year-in-the-wood whiskey, the disappearance of which could only be connected with the young men.

The brave chief immediately essayed to track and capture the thieves, and, strange to say, soon located them in a hotel where they were imbibing unlimited quantities of corn-juice. They were recognized as Fred Baker and Frank Tully, well-known youths about town. Tully immediately bolted, and the chief turned his attention to Baker, whom he endeavored to arrest and take to the cells.

And then happened an encounter that called forth the jeers of the crowd which soon gathered. Baker, who is only 20 years of age, and slimly built, proved the toughest customer the chief ever tackled. He fairly walloped the street with the big burly man of 230 lbs avoirdupois, and the latter realizing that his strength was inadequate to the task, called for assistance in the name of the Queen, and in Her Majesty's name a by-stander interfered and Baker's arrest was accomplished. Then Right Bower Stewart appeared and took the lad in charge, landing him safely in the cells. Tully was captured later on and both will have a hearing this morning.

The chief's coat was badly torn in the fray. Baker used his tongue pretty freely and hurled taunts at the big policeman. "It will be something for me to say," he said "that I, a boy, prevented you from arresting me," and Baker is right.

LOCAL AND DISTRICT HAPPENINGS OF THE DAY.

An Important Report.

The Committee on Appointments and Supervision of Police met last night and passed an important recommendation to the Council. It will come up at Monday night's meeting.

The Mail and Empire.

Street talk, that cannot be confirmed, conveys the impression that the Mail-Empire amalgamation may be affected almost immediately, with the Mail as a survivor.—Telegram.

Baker Sent Down.

In the police court yesterday morning Fred Baker and Frank Tully were placed on trial for the theft of a pair of clippers from J. Steele, barber. Both pleaded not guilty. The evidence against Baker proved a conviction. Baker who has a previous criminal record was sent to the Central for 6 months, and Tully was discharged with a warning.

Railway Accident.

The Lindsay Watchman says: While a special snow-plow train was coming from the north for Whitby on Sunday last, an accident occurred about two miles from Lindsay. Master P. Leddy while walking on the track was struck by the hidden snow-plow and had his leg broke above the ankle. The young fellow was taken to Lindsay where medical aid was at once obtained.

A Popular Paper.

Mr. John Dougherty, of the Westwood Hotel, Westwood, called at THE TIMES office yesterday to renew his subscription. Mr. Dougherty says THE TIMES is the popular paper in Westwood. It is eagerly sought for when the mails arrive, and well spoken of by everybody there. Reports of this nature are not infrequent at this office, and are not only encouraging but go to show that THE TIMES is recognized as the leading newspaper in this district.

A Sudden Death.

Thursday morning, about 9.30, Mr. Wm. Parker, a prominent and highly respected citizen of Stirling, left his residence to go to his brother's barn, about half a mile distant, to look after some hay. His non-appearance at dinner time was not noticed particularly, as he had often been so engaged that he was late. As the day wore away and he did not return, his family became alarmed at his long absence and made enquiries. About 7 o'clock in the evening his brother, Mr. F. B. Parker, started in search with a lantern. He found him lying dead, face downwards. The deceased had been gathering up hay which had been scattered around a stack, and becoming exhausted, from a severe rupture, had perished in the snow near the stack. He had apparently been dead only about one or two hours as parts of his body were yet warm. The deceased was 64 years old. He leaves a widow and daughter and many relatives to mourn his loss.

A Burglar Was Suprised.

Tuesday night a burglar or burglars entered the store of Mr. James Dunfee, next the Times office. An entrace was effected by breaking a pane of glass in the back window. To reach in a hand and open the back door, was then an easy matter, but to get to this window the midnight marauder must have got his feet wet, for the water in the creek was high. It would have been as good as a circus to have seen that burglar after he got into the store and started on his quest for wealth. Mr. Dunfee has been waiting for two years to see how his patent burglar scare would work. The burglar had not gone far when he touched an ingenous device. This communicated with the electric switch and in an instant the whole eight incandescent lights were ablaze and he found the shop as light as day. It is unnecessary to say that he did not take advantage of this light, as nothing is missing—except the burglar—and no doubt he vanished with surprising rapidity. Mr. Dunfee will forgive him if he will only step in and tell how he felt when he found himself in daylight instead of darkness.—Port Hope Times.

McGongial, jobber for the Rathbern Company on the Lavant operations. It is the largest tree taken out in that district this season. It measured 4,391 feet broad measure, or twenty-one standards and twenty-three feet.

AN ENJOYABLE EVENING.

Printers' Night at the Y.M.C.A.—An Intellectual Evening Spent.

A large number of the printing fraternity gathered in the Y.M.C.A. rooms last evening, where they had been invited by the members of the association to spend a social evening. Mr. E. A. Nott, of the Examiner office, officiated as chairman and successfully presided over the following programme:

Introductory Remark	Mr. Crowe
Address, "Past and Present"	Mr. W. Menzies
Song	Mr. A. E. Benton
Address, "Thirty Years Experience"	Mr. F. H. Dobbin.
Duett	Messrs. Crowe & Miller
Song	Mr. Miller

Every number on the programme was well rendered and enthusiastically received. The address of Messrs Dobbin and Menzies proved especially interesting, in comparing the offices of by-gone days with those of the present. Both speakers gave their experience in the business since boyhood up to the present day, and reviewed the many changes that had taken place in the mechanical operations of the craft. Their addresses were interspersed with humorous incidents that had come under their observation, and Mr. Dobbin's vivid pictures of his first initiation into a printing office, and the eccentric characters with whom he had since come in contact kept the audience convulsed with laughter. The remarks of both gentlemen were instructive to the company, and pointed out where the introduction of modern improvements and conveniences had in a great measure lightened their daily labors.

At the conclusion of the program a vote of thanks was tendered the entertainers of the evening, after which the company adjourned to the dining hall, where a sumptuous lunch was enjoyed at the expense of the members of the Y.M.C.A.

Mr. Menzies then moved, seconded by Mr. Dobbin, that a vote of thanks be tendered the members of the association for the cordial treatment received at their hands.

Mr. Crowe, secretary of the Y.M.C.A., responded in fitting terms, in which he cordially invited the company to make free use of the rooms at any time, and explained that they were not actually the property of the association, or of the directors, but of the young men of Peterborough.

The visitors then dispersed, after spending a most enjoyable evening, one and all entertaining the hope that this occasion may but prove one of many such pleasing events, when the members of the arts preservative may meet in unity and fellowship to spend a sociable hour or two with the members of this deserving institution.

SPORTING CHAFF.

The Bank of Toronto Hockey Team Will Play Tonight.

The hockey match on the rink tonight between a team from the Bank of Toronto, Toronto, and the Peterboroughs, promises to be very interesting. The game will be closely contested.

On Saturday the Collegiate teachers of Peterborough will play a friendly game against the teachers of our Collegiate. The Lindsay team will be composed of Messrs. E. A. Hardy, J. T. Harrington, W. H. Stevens and J. C. Harstone.—Lindsay Post.

It is likely that the first and second team of the Volts will play a match on the rink between 5 and 6 o'clock this afternoon.

Pugilist Dempsey is said to be a physical and mental wreck, superinduced by worry and drink.

At Guelph yesterday the Seaforts and Galt Granites played a game for the Sleeman trophy. Seaforth won by the close score of 27 to 23.

The curling colts of Belleville and Campbellford played at the latter place Thursday, the home team winning by a total score of 26 to 14.

At Alexander Island yesterday the winning horses were as follows:—Civil Service, 8 to 5; Walcott, 4 to 1; Quilla, 20 to 1; Syde, 8 to 1; and Bobolink, 2 to 1.

At the Port Perry ice racing yesterday Harry B won the 3 minute trot, and Fred O the 2.20 event. Over 2,000 people were present, and the weather and track were perfect.

Beheld a Ghost.

A few nights ago, while a number of our citizens were returning home they beheld what was taken to be a ghost coming down George street, in front of the Canadian Express office. When the being beheld the gentlemen it turned around and went down Brock street, where it was followed by two gentlemen who were curious to see what would become of it. After following it all over town for about an hour, they decided to bring the matter to a focus, and they endeavored to catch hold of the apparition. They had nearly done so, when, to the surprise of the two gentlemen, the person, either male or female, turned around and stated that they need not be afraid, as it was only preparing for the Sons of Canada carnival on Friday, February 22nd, the prizes for which are in Gough Bros.' window.

THE WEATHER.

Probs: Westerly winds, fair and colder; local snow flurries.

A Metal Breadboard

THE WOMAN WHO HAS BEEN USED to kneading dough on the old fashioned wooden breadboard knows what a bother it is to get them clean and how cumbersome and heavy they are. When they begin to crack or check it is almost impossible to thoroughly cleanse them, and they may easily become dangerous conveyances of disease. It was left for a woman, of course, to remedy this state of affairs, and Mrs. M. M. Everhard, of St. Joseph, Mich., has patented a metal bread-board, which is one of the greatest labor-savers imaginable. It is light, does not absorb grease, dough does not adhere to it, and while it possesses all the advantages of the marble bread-board it is much cheaper and, of course, far lighter and easier to handle. If readers want to confer a favor upon their wives that will be forever appreciated, let them send $1 to the manufacturers, 101 Bay street, Toronto, for one of these boards.

Special to the Times.

NEW YORK, Feb. 2.—The agents of the North German Lloyd line today received the following from Bremen: Today's London Standard says a good deal of comment has been made on the fact that of the survivors no fewer than fifteen are officers and seamen of the Elbe and that of five passengers saved there is only one women and no children. The testimony of several of the survivors justifies the belief that all the women and children, or at any rate the majority of them would have been saved had there been time enough to lower the starboard life boats. The captain did consider that there was time and his orders to the women and children to all gather on the starboard side of the steamer, while the male passengers shifted for themselves on the port side, but at a critical moment, after two boats had got clear from the port side, it was found impossible to lower the lifeboats on the starboard side owing to the deep leer of the vessel, caused by the enormous weight of water which had poured into her and which continued to rush in in large volumes. Attention was then directed to the other boats, but the steamer had then commenced to sink, and there can be little doubt that the women and children were huddled together on the starboard side, with the captain directing the operations for their succour, when the Elbe foundered.

A SERIOUS CHARGE.

LONDON, Feb. 2.—According to Hoffman, the American who was rescued from the Elbe, and who gives a graphic description of the wreck, the crew acted in a disgraceful manner. He said he was among the first to reach the Elbe's deck after the collision, and did not see the Crathie answer any of the Elbe's signals. He noticed a small steamer, apparently the one that had struck the Elbe, steaming away. As regards the behavior of the Elbe's crew, Hoffman says:

"I seized a life belt as soon as I got on deck, but a sailor demanded it, saying that it belonged to the crew. I gave it up with the remark, 'Well, I hope you will save yourself,' but he did not. The crew did their best to keep the passengers out of the boats."

A HEART-BROKEN MAN.

"I was born among the Indians out west," he said, "I have gone through rough times with my family there. Now it is all over with them and they have been sacrificed by the carelessness of these men. I do not value my own life now; I can think only of my loss."

Hoffman's description of the final settling of the ship was vivid. "I could see her sinking rapidly as we pulled away in the small boat. Her bow went up steadily into the air. The deck grew steeper and I could see the poor wretches aboard her climbing and crawling toward the prow, until suddenly all were engulfed."

A SELFISH CREW.

Vevara, another of the rescued passengers, says:

"There was a lot of green hands in charge of the lifeboats. They were so excited they did not know what they were about. They filled one boat and then they dumped all the occupants into the water. The crew in our boat were very reluctant to admit Miss Boecker. Hoffman and I dragged her in without any aid from the seamen."

Both Vevara and Hoffman attack the third officer, Stollberg, the first engineer, Neussell. They say that both acted selfishly after the rescue and that Stollberg made no effort to command the boat, but gave the whole responsibility to the steerage passenger, Boethen, who had been cook on a French steamer. They speak highly of Boethen's coolness and skill and give him the whole credit for managing the boat.

THE CRATHIE'S CAPTAIN.

ROTTERDAM, Feb. 2.—Captain Gordon, master of the Crathie, the steamer which is alleged to have sunk the Elbe, the man who was at the wheel of the first named steamer when the collision occurred and the members of the crew of that vessel, whose watch on deck it was at the time of the accident, have been examined judicially and they have all affirmed that they did not see the vessel with which the Crathie collided.

They add that they did not see a vessel sink and that they did not hear any cries of distress.

THE ONLY WOMAN SAVED.

LONDON, Feb. 2.—Miss Anna Bucckner, the only woman passenger saved from the North German Lloyd steamship Elbe, in an interview, has added the following to the statements she has already made about the disaster:

Miss Bucckner says that when the first boat capsized she swam until she caught one of the oars of the other boat which had been launched, and then somebody on board of the latter craft shouted, "Push her off!" She also says they tried to push her off, but she held on so firmly to the oar that she was finally pulled on board.

MISCALCULATED THE TIME.

Continuing, Miss Bueckner says that the officers of the Elbe miscalculated the time that the steamer could keep afloat.

The skipper of the fishing smack Competition, which has arrived at Lowestoft, has reported that in addition to a mail bag, he saw near the scene of collision a quantity of wreckage apparently from a big steamer, and he picked up a platform used for painting ships' sides.

EMPEROR WILLIAM ANGRY.

LONDON, Feb. 2.—The German Consulate has received a message from Emperor William in which the latter is said to have expressed surprise and displeasure at the fact that only one woman was rescued from among the passengers of the Elbe.

Dissatisfied Missionaries.

TORONTO, Jan. 31.—At a meeting of the Methodist Missionary Board today a joint letter was read from the six missionaries in Japan, asking to be recalled from that field owing to the reflections passed on them at the General Conference. Rev. Dr. Macdonald, treasurer and secretary of the Japan mission, also wrote, offering to resign if that would help matters. The general secretary, Rev. Dr. Sutherland, was instructed by the board to write the Japan missionaries, asking a detailed statement of the grievances, and meantime urging them to continue their labors. Dr. Macdonald was asked to hold his resignation in abeyance for the present.

QUEEN LIL JAILED.

Arrested as a Common Conspirator—The Rebels Scattered—Imported Arms Some Found in the Ex-Queen's House Seized.

Special to the Times.

AUCKLAND, New Zealand, Feb. 2.—The latest advices received here from Honolulu under date of January 19, announce that ex Queen Liliuokalani has been arrested on the charge of complicity with the insurgents in the recent rebellion.

In addition, all the insurgent leaders have been taken into custody and are being tried by courtmartial. Three of the leaders pleaded guilty of treason. Martial law is maintained.

A COMPLETE FIASCO.

The rebellion turned out to be a complete fiasco. After the first engagement the rebels scattered, and some time later Wilcox, Mowlin, Butelmann and others of the leaders of the insurrection were captured. Shortly after Queen Lil was arrested. Her house was searched, and in it were found stores of arms and dynamite bombs. The arrests have resulted in the restoration of order in Hawaii.

Later advices, dated January 27, say that quite a large quantity of arms, imported for the use of the rebels, have been seized, in addition to those found in the house of the ex-queen. Savais, the importers of the arms, have been fined.

HAWAII'S TROUBLES.

Letters and newspapers from Honolulu have arrived in Toronto by last mail giving some additional information in reference to the late Hawaiian uprising. The matter is not viewed in a very serious light by the Honolulu press. An investigation was in progress when the papers were mailed.

Col. Volney A. Ashford and his brother Clarence are in the hospital. They were merely held lest they should take any active part in the rebellion. It is said that nothing can be proven against them.

The Ashfords are old Port Hope boys, and have many friends in Toronto. Their mother resides in Thorold.

TAKING OF WEI-HAI-WEI

Skilful Manouvering Won the Victory Over the Strong Defence of the Chinese—It Was an Old Time Battle.

Special to the Times.

HIROSHIMA, Feb. 2.—Nearly all the official despatches received here show that the capture of the forts at Wei Hai Wei was due to the skilful combined movements of the Japanese.

It is added that the defence of Wei Hai Wei, in view of the strength of that place, is feeble. The chief forts at Pai Chi Iiyaiso were taken after a few hours fighting; but, some of the others were stubbornly defended. The Japanese sixth division was under arms at 2 o'clock in the morning and the advance was immediately ordered.

BEGAN AT DAYLIGHT.

The assault on the Chinese defences began at daylight, and by 9 o'clock the outlying batteries and trenches were almost all taken. In the meanwhile the second army corps was assaulting the Pai Chi Hyaiso forts on the southwest. These defences were of great strength, and had precipitous sides 100 feet high. The attack was make under cover of a furious bombardment from the Japanese fleet.

Here was the main point of the Chinese resistance. After the fighting had proceeded for some hours, the Sixth division, having driven back the enemy, made a detour, and advancing behind Mount Ku, which hid the Japanese troops, made a strong attack from that side on the Pai Chi Hyaiso forts, which were captured by 12.30 p. m

A PRECONCERTED ARRANGEMENT.

The Japanese fleet then, by preconcerted arrangement, proceeded to take possession of the eastern entrance of the harbor, and by 3 p.m. all the forts about Pai Chi Hyaiso, to the south-west, were captured, and the Chinese were retreating towards Fung Ling Chu.

At 4.30 p.m., when these de-patches were sent, the battle was still raging. The Chinese fleet and forts Yatao, Taomao and Wang Tao, and the well armed batteries on the Island of Lou Kung Tao were furiously replying to the Japanese, whose ships were manoeuvring so as to block both entraces to the harbor.

SHANGHAI, Feb. 2.—It is stated on good authority that the British, French and Russian Ministers at Tokio and at Pekin have received instructions from their Government to advice Japan and China to arrange terms of peace.

ANOTHER VERSION.

CHEFOO, Feb. 2.—The western forts of Wei Hai Wei were taken by the Japanese on January 30 in spite of the good resistance made by the Chinese. One Japanese gunboat was sunk after having been badly damaged. A shell burst in the magazine of one of the Chinese forts and the whole store of powder blew up and is believed to have caused great mortality.

The eastern forts were bombarded for hours by the Japanese cruisers Naniwa, Akitsushima and Katsura. The Japanese fire was well directed and dismounted several guns, but neither the eastern forts nor the city of Wei Hai Wei were captured.

The authorities of Chefoo are seizing and beheading runaway Chinese soldiers who fled from Wei Hai Wei. Further operations are impossible for the moment owing to the severity of the weather.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Feb. 2.—The B. and O. express from Cincinnati was wrecked at Woodell, three miles west of Washington, Pa., at ten o'clock this morning, and by a miraculous escape none of the passengers was seriously injured.

Ed. Robinson, a freight brakesman, was instantly killed and Frank Kelly, another brakesman, was badly hurt. The express was running at a high rate of speed and when near Woodell it jumped the track and collided with a freight that was standing on a siding.

Robinson and Kelly were in the caboose of the freight. The baggage car rolled over one side of an embankment and the smoker went over the other side. None of the occupants were seriously hurt. The sleeper did not leave the track.

Special to The Times.

TORONTO, Feb. 2.—One of the best windfalls which have come to a workingman in Toronto for some time is the legacy of seventeen houses to Richard Watson, a lather who resides in a cottage at 23 Euclid avenue.

The property has been left to Mr. Watson by John Bainbridge, an old man who had boarded with him for many years and who died last Sunday. The estate is worth probably $25,000.

HAD NO RELATIONS.

Bainbridge came here many years ago from Cleveland, Ohio, and appeared to have no relatives. He brought his money from Cleveland. The old man was somewhat eccentric in his ways. At one time he had made a will leaving his property to another family in the locality where he lived. He stipulated, however, that the legatees were to reside in a certain cottage in which they were not to place a furnace. Neither were they to go to England on a trip. He had them bound down to live economically.

Later on he made the will which now gives the property to the Watsons.

Bainbridge was a member of Euclid avenue Methodist church, at one time being a trustee. He left the church nothing.

STRUCK BY A MOTOR CAR.

About 7.30 this morning a young man named Richard Donohue, living with and working for D. Manning, coal and wood dealer, Yonge street near St. Alban street, was struck by a motor car and seriously injured.

He was driving into the yard from Yonge street when a south bound car on Yonge street hit the rear end of his sleigh. He was thrown out against the curb and knocked senseless. The sleigh was smashed and the horses slightly hurt.

Donohue was removed to St. Michael's Hospital. He is a young man of about 20 or 21 years of age. No blame is attached to anyone.

THE MAIL-EMPIRE DEAL.

The approaching amalgamation of the Mail and Empire is a settled fact. Tuesday will see the last issue of the Empire, and on Wednesday morning the Mail will contain a leading editorial, stating that the step of November, 1887, when the Mail cast aside its allegiance to the Conservative party, has been retracted, and that the journal is to henceforth be known as the organ of the Liberal Conservatives.

Yesterday Mr. David Creighton, managing director of the Empire, wrote letters to every head of department in the building. The purport of these communications was that the services of all of the members of the Empire staff would be dispensed with after Tuesday next. The majority of the employees will be given two weeks' bonus, and on Tuesday afternoon they will bid a long farewell to the Empire building.

It is stated that the name of the Mail is to be changed to Mail-Empire. It is known that Mr. Bunting is opposed to the change but the proprietors of the Empire will insist upon the retention of the name of the defunct journal. Mr. Bunting would like to see victory wholly on the side of the Mail.

PETERBOROUGH, FEBRUARY 4 1895.

A PROSPEROUS YEAR.

Central Canada Loan and Savings Co's Report.

SATISFACTORY YEAR'S WORK.

Promptness Shown in Meeting Obligations.

Full Details of the Annual Meeting—An Excellent Showing—Figures of the Year's Business.

The annual general meeting of the shareholders of the Central Canada Loan & Savings Company of Ontario was held in the company's offices, No. 347 George street, Peterborough, on Wednesday, the 23rd day of January, 1895, at 1.30 o'clock p.m.

The President, Mr. Geo. A. Cox, having taken the chair, the Manager, Mr. F. G. Cox, acting as secretary, the following report and financial statement were read:—

The directors have pleasure in laying before the shareholders a statement of the the affairs of the company for the year ending 31st December, 1894.

The earnings for the year amount to $271,975.28. Deducting cost of management, interest on debentures and deposits and all other charges, there remains a net profit of $99,777.92, which has been disposed of by the payment of four quartely dividends at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum, amounting to $72,000, the transfer of $15,000 to the reserve fund (making that fund now $315,000), and the balance, $12,777.92, to the contingent fund, which now stands at $30,234.71.

The result of the year's business has been satisfactory. The rigid economy being practised by nearly all classes, and especially by the farming community, is enabling borrowers to pay their interest and maturing instalments of principal with more than usual promptitude. This effort upon the part of a large proportion of the community to discharge their existing liabilities, rather than incur new obligations, while contributing to the prevailing depression in many kinds of business, is resulting beneficially to loan companies.

The decreased rate of interest obtainable on desirable loans has been met by the lower rates payable on debentures and deposits. Our earning power for the past year has thus been fully maintained being the best in the history of the company.

The directors are pleased to be able to report a steady growth in the business of the company as evidenced by a substantial increase during the year in invested funds, sterling debentures, currency debentures and deposits.

The somewhat excessive losses of $6,659 78 charged against the contingent fund during the year have been very fully provided for by an addition of $12,777.92 to that fund from the profits of the year, after making the addition of $15,000 to the reserve fund. The latter fund is now equal to 26¼ per cent. of the paid-up capital.

The Inspection Committee have made a careful examination of the securities, checked the same with the mortgage register, and report everything satisfactory.

The report of the Auditors is apprehended to the financial statement annexed.

Respectfully sumbitted on behalf of the directors.

GEO. A. COX, President.

AUDITORS' CERTIFICATES.

We hereby certify that we have carefully audited the books and accounts of the Central Canada Loan & Savings Company of Ontario, Limited, at Toronto and Peterborough respectively, for the year ending 31st December, 1894. The postings and balances of the company's ledgers have been examined, and we find the whole correct, and in accordance with the above statements.
HENRY M. PELLATT, WILLIAM MANSON, Auditors.

INSPECTION COMMITTEE CERTIFICATE.

We hereby certify that we have made a careful examination of the securities of the Central Canada Loan & Savings Company of Ontario, Limited, that we have checked the same with the mortgage register, and find them correct, and in accordance therewith. E. S. VINDIN, F. C. TAYLOR, Inspection Committee.

Peterborough, 23rd January, 1895.

In moving the resolution for the adoption of the report the Chairman said:—

"I have pleasure in briefly directing your attention to the operations of the company for the past year. We have, after deducting all expenses of management, providing for interest on deposits and debentures and the payment of four quartely dividends at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum, made the substantial addition of $15,000 to the reserve fund $12,777.92 to the contingent fund. This, I think, you will regard as satisfactory. It is also gratifying to note that the prevailing depression of the past two years has not retarded the steady progress of the company. During that time our assets have increased from $4,186,63 676 on the 31st December, 1892, to $5,200,830,09 on the 31st December, 1894. The earning power of the company has also been fully maintained, the lower rates paid on our deposits and debentures covering the reductions made in our loaning rate.

"The agricultural community have no doubt suffered from the sharp decline in the price of wheat, and have been more or less inconvinced by the expenditure necessary to stock their farms, adapted themselves to the changed conditions and enter upon more diversed farming, such as dairy products, stock raising, fruit growing etc. Where this policy has been intelligently pursued, and where that industry and economy prevails that characterizes such a large proportion of our Ontario farmers, we find they are able promptly to meet their obligations, and our experience in that respect during the past year has been quite satisfactory.

"The steady accumulation of funds seeking investment in the hands of our insurance companies, trust companies and private capitalists makes it more difficult, and requires increased activity upon the part of our officers, to keep our funds profitably employed. The advantage that well organized loan companies have in securing applications, making valuations by their own salaried officers, the periodical inspection of the mortgaged properties, and the prompt collection of interest is gradually leading our own people and our own financial corporations, whose chief business is other than that of loaning money, to invest in the debentures of loan companies. If this policy were more generally pursued, as it no doubt will be, it will lessen competition, lead to the more profitable employment of Canadian money, and decrease the amount now being borrowed in Great Britain on the debentures of Canadian loan companies. In the case of this company, of the $5,200,000 we have investe dover $3,000,000 is represented by Canadian capital, the interest paid on that amount remaining in the country to help increase its wealth.

"Before closing my remarks I desire to refer to the valuable services of Messrs. Finlayson & Auld, writers, Glasgow, the company's representatives in Great Britain. They have during the past year, as in former years, given their very best attention and care to the company's interests, and the steady growth of our sterling debenture business from the inception of the company to the present time is the best evidence of the confidence placed in them and the company they represent by the investing public of the old land. Mr. Finlayson and Mr. McKechnie are both able from personal visits to this country and personal inspection of the company's securities to intelligently discuss its affairs with intending investors.

"I will now move, seconded by Vice-President Mr. Richard Hall, that the report be adopted and distributed among the shareholders, depositors and debenture holders of the company." The motion was seconded by the Vice-President and unanimously adopted.

The usual resolutions were carried, and the scrutineers reported the following gentlemen elected directors for the year 1895:—Messrs. Geo. A. Cox, J. R. Dundas and Robert Jaffray, Toronto; Richard Hall, D. W. Dumble, Wm. Cluxton and James Stevenson, M. P., Peterboro'; Mr. Edmund S. Vindin, Port Hope; Mr. F. C. Taylor, Lindsay, and Mr. Henry J. Lefevre, Lakefield. The meeting then adjourned.

At a subsequent meeting of directors Mr. Geo. A. Cox was elected President and Messrs. J. R. Dundas, and Richard Hall Vice-Presidents.

MARINE GRAVEYARD.

SAWYER'S BEND, NEAR ST. LOUIS, AND ITS HIDDEN WEALTH.

The Fatal Locality In the Mississippi Where Some of the World's Finest Boats Went Down—Millions of Dollars' Worth Buried In the Sand.

"The recent discovery of a sunken raft by Mayor Walbridge in the channel of the river above the Chain of Rocks," said Street Commissioner M. J. Murphy, "will bring to the minds of many of our old steamboatmen the disasters that befell the marine craft of this city in that portion of the river now included in the harbor of St. Louis. The charter harbor of the city includes that stretch of the Mississippi river between the mouth of the Missouri and the mouth of the Meramec. That portion of the harbor under the care and control of the harbor and wharf commissioner lies between the Chain of Rocks and the Rivee des Peres. From the upper mouth of the Missouri to the foot of North Market street there are now lying under the silt and sands the wrecks of over 60 boats and barges. Many of these steamboats were the largest, best equipped and speediest that ever walked the navigable waterways of the country. They were in reality marine palaces, such as this generation has not seen. Sawyer's bend was the fatal locality where nearly all these splendid crafts foundered and settled under the shifting sands of the treacherous channel. Among the boats that were lost many now living will recall the following: York State, Southerner, Mary Blain, Highland Mary, Grace Darling, Alleghany, Federal Arch, C. Buln, Yuba, Baltimore, John B. Carson, Philadelphia, Edinburg, Challenge, Moderator, Nebraska, Sioux City, White Cloud, Omaha, New Admiral, Geneva, Warsaw, Empire City, Governor Sharkey, Submarine No. 13, Saranac No. 2, War Eagle, Ben Jonson, Gerard B. Allen, Fanny Scott, Henry Adkins, Columbia, Silver Bow, R. J. Lockwood, Wild Duck, Nile, Victoria, Champion, Blue Lodge, Calhoun, Alma, Central City, Raven, Salvor, J. W. Garrett, Hudson, Beaver, John P. Keiser, Pacific, Lulu Worth, Cornelia, Badger State.

"The above were sunk between the years 1855 and 1888. In addition to these, there were 20 barges lost north of Bissell's point within the same years. No record was kept of the sawyer or cut lumber rafts that were lost south of Alton, but it has been estimated that the aggregate value was over $1,000,000. Only two of the above named boats, the Calhoun and Alma, were raised. The bones of all the others lie many feet beneath the sands, petrifying under the action of the waters. The actual loss in marine property to the merchants of St. Louis by the sinking of these boats was over $5,000,000. Many of the owners in the loss of this property lost not only all they had, but also lost courage because of the increasing dangers to the marine commerce of the immediate harbor of St. Louis. To add to the pathetic story of these disasters, many of them fatal to life, it might be stated in passing that during the period named above 58 splendid steamers were destroyed by fire within the charter harbor of the city. The hulls of many of them lie just outside of the present water line and form the retaining dike for the granite wharf. Many of the grandfathers and grandmothers of today will remember with varying emotions their bridal trips on the James Howard, the Leviathan, the Bismarck, the Grand Republic, the Carrie V. Kountz and others equally grand. It will be noted above that I used the term 'the upper mouth of the Missouri.' I did this advisedly, because of the fact that within the past 40 years that river, where it empties into the Mississippi, has changed its location four or five times, and its present mouth is several miles south of the one that existed a few years ago. Opposite these various mouths, and for one mile southward, many of the disasters named above occurred. The outpouring of the Missouri waters was swift, the eddies and current were treacherous, and the snags and other obstructions so numerous at that point that unusual care was necessary in order to avoid the fatal places.

"The conditions that existed in Sawyer's bend 40 years ago exist practically today and are still a serious menace to the marine commerce of the city, with the added dangers to the important municipal and railroad interests that have grown with the requirements of the water supply and the transportation demands of a great metropolis.

"In 1837, when Robert E. Lee, afterward the great Confederate general, was assigned by the war department to the work of improving the harbor of St. Louis, he outlined to congress what should be done for its permanent fixation. These plans involved the securing of regular and parallel shores on the Missouri and Illinois sides of the river and the regulation of the bed of the river above the city so as to deflect the water in a direct line into the channel under favorable conditions. If he had been allowed to carry out his plans, there would be no marine graveyard in Sawyer's bend today, and it is difficult to estimate now what would have been the marine destiny of this city if President Polk had not persistently vetoed every bill that was passed for our harbor improvements and for the improvement of the inland seas of the west. I had occasion in 1887 to make a survey of the charter harbor of St. Louis for the rivers and harbors committee, and I found north of the city the same obstructions that were noted on a map prepared by Lieutenant Lee and filed with the war department in 1837. If the proper and necessary improvements were made in Sawyer's bend now, I estimate that 3,000 acres of solid land could be reclaimed to the riparian owners, worth at the present valuation $3,000,000. Putting entirely aside the question of re-establishing the former shore line, the present rapid erosion must be stopped, or great damage will result to the railway terminals now being constructed there. The water department, too, may be confronted in time with the serious problem of retarding the encroachments of the mouth of the Missouri on the immediate site of the new waterworks, and the erosion of the banks along which the conduits are constructed. If the waters in Sawyer's bend could be rolled backward, as the waters of the Red sea once were, the sands cleared away and the skeletons of our former palatial steamers photographed, what a terrible object lesson would be conveyed from a spot that is now the most thickly settled marine graveyard in the world!"—St. Louis Globe Democrat.

INDIAN GAMBLERS.

ALWAYS READY TO RISK THEIR ALL IN A GAME OF CHANCE.

Sometimes Whole Villages Are Impoverished by a Streak of Bad Luck—They Rely Upon Charms and Their Ability to Cheat—They Are Good Losers.

As eagerly as a duck flops into the water does an Indian jump into a game of chance. Unbounded belief in luck and perhaps the natural deviltry of the race make Indians inveterate gamblers. There is nothing in an Indian's possession that he will not readily wager on a game of chance. Nearly every noble red man is the possessor of an individual charm or fetich which enables him to do things that other Indians cannot do. This fetich is of value exclusively to the owner, and according to their belief would be of no use or advantage to any other Indian. No person besides the possessor knows what the fetich is and were it to become known it would immediately lose its power for good. No Indian will knowingly steal another Indian's fetich. Such theft vitiates the power of the thief's fetich and casts over him a hoodoo.

Having full faith in the ability of his charm to bring luck to him, the Indian never fails to place all his possessions in the balance when there is a bet on. If he loses, he takes it philosophically and attributes his bad luck to the greater power of his adversary's charm. If he wins, he has added faith in the power of his own charm. Indians have been known to wager all their earthly possessions, even to their squaws and children and tepees, on the fall of a stick in one of their games. Indian villages have become pauperized and dependent upon charity for months because the inhabitants bet everything they had on the result of games with other villages. Such occurrences were common several years ago, and were it not for the restrictions of government regulations would be so still.

Gambling is not a secret vice among the Indians. It is indulged in by all the members of the tribe, and the more expert the gambler the higher he stands in the estimation of his fellows. To have the fame of being a successful gambler causes an Indian to looked up to almost as much as if he were a successful warrior. There is no fear of shocking the morals of even the highest chief by proposing a game with him—in fact, the invitation pleases him. One point of advantage held by the red man over his white brother is in the fact that when he loses everything he possesses he is not much poorer than he was before, and he can readily recoup himself by making a raid upon some unfortunate white settler or upon a weaker tribe. The white man may commit suicide, but the Indian simply looks for a victim and seldom fails to find him.

Before the government tightened the moral lines on the Indians professional Indian gamblers were plentiful. Of late years their number has decreased rapidly. The most famous Indian gambler of today is Quelepah, a Comanche. His game is monte. He is about 30 years old, tall and straight, with a thin, narrow face. His eyes are sunken like those of a consumptive. He never smiles and seldom speaks. Like all Indian gamblers, his dress is rich in bright colors. He usually rides a white pony and is attended by two Apache Indians, both famous for deeds of prowess. He travels from village to village and from tribe to tribe. Everywhere he is well known. When his approach is made known, the Indians wait for him to appear, saving their money to play with him, for it is an Indian maxim that "in the game of Quelepah the play is honest, and the stakes are what you please."

Quelepah once appeared at the Cash creek village. He rode into the village shortly before sundown. One of his companions spread a bright red blanket on the ground. Quelepah knelt before it. As he settled down on his haunches and brought forth a new deck of Mexican monte cards the blanket was surrounded by Indians crouching three and four deep. And behind them stood other Indians eager for an opportunity to play. The long, lean fingers of Quelepah shuffled the cards with marvelous rapidity. The interest in the game waxed as the light waned. Candles were procured as night fell and were fastened in sharp pointed green twigs stuck in the ground.

By their flickering light Quelepah could be seen paying his losses and pocketing his gains. He was both dealer and banker. Behind him on his right and on his left crouched his two Apache fellows. As dawn was breaking Quelepah looked about him. He had stripped all save two Indians. One of them was a heavy winner. Laying down $100 for each of them to cover, Quelepah announced that it was his last bet. The cards left were the queen and the deuce. Both Indians laid on the queen. The deuce won. Quelepah pocketed his money. The village, save for the two Indians, was penniless.

Squaws also are inveterate gamblers. It is a common sight to see a dozen squaws, young and old, their papooses lying neglected on the ground, crowded around an old shawl, busy over a 10 cent game of monte. Their play is persistent, and many of them are marvelously clever gamblers. But they seldom have money of their own sufficient to play for high stakes.

One peculiarity of Indian gambling games is their intricacy. In several tribes the writer has seen Indians playing games with sticks and stones for hours at a time. Notwithstanding the closest attention he has been unable to discover the system used, nor has he ever met a white man who could explain the game. There are several games of this kind, and among the Pacific coast tribes they are common.

In addition to his faith in his charm the Indian places great dependence on his ability to cheat. To the best cheat are accorded the highest honors when gambling is indulged in. There is never a thought of getting angry over deft tricks or unfair methods so long as the perpetrator is not caught in the act. If he is caught, he refunds his gains and is laughed at for clumsiness.

Since playing cards have become common, games taught by the whites and Mexicans are generally the favorites among the red men. Monte is played for large amounts. Sometimes an Indian with hundreds of dollars will become impoverished in a single evening by trying his luck against a skillful player. An especially deft monte dealer, more skillful even than Quelepah, has been known to go from tribe to tribe in the mountains of New Mexico and return home loaded down with his winnings. Many Mexican gamblers devote almost their entire time to traveling among the various tribes in the Sierras. They win large sums, but lose them again in Mexican cities.—Fort Sill (O. T.) Cor. ALL HOPE IS GIVEN UP

THAT THE ELBE'S SECOND LIFE-BOAT AND PASSENGERS ARE SAFE.

No Trace of it Can Be Found—The Number that Went Down is 393—The Crathie's Captain Tells of the Collision—Other Vessels Founder.

Special to the Times.

LOWESTOFT, Eng., Feb. 1.—It is still blowing hard and the terrific weather of the past forty-eight hours continues along the east coast of England.

Visits made this morning to all of the various life saving and coast guard stations show that no additional news has been received in regard to the loss of the North German Lloyd steamship Elbe, and no trace has been found of the missing lifeboat supposed to contain survivors of that ill-fated steamer.

However, the sea is so rough that many of the fishing smacks are unable to make port, and are beating up and down the coast waiting on some chance to run into some harbor

HOPE NEARLY GIVEN UP.

NEW YORK, Feb. 1.—At the North German Lloyd steamship offices this morning there was no more news of the Elbe.

Hope was all but given up for the people on the second boat. The officials do not think that the small craft could live in such a heavy gale or that the passengers could survive the cold and exposure.

The only hope was that they had been picked up by a fishing vessel.

THE CRATHIE'S CAPTAIN.

ROTTERDAM, Feb. 1.—Captain Gordon, of the British steamer Crathie, which is generally admitted to have been the vessel which ran into and sunk the Elbe, has made a statement to Lloyd's agent here in which he says he was knocked down by the force of the collision and that when he regained his feet the two ships were some distance apart and the Crathie was so damaged that he expected her to sink at any moment.

In spite of this, Captain Gordon added, he followed the other steamer but found that she went faster than the Crathie and so he thought the vessel she had collided with was safe.

ANOTHER HOPE SHATTERED.

NEW YORK, Feb. 1.—The custom of the North German Lloyd Steamship Company, to which the steamer Elbe belonged, of selling tickets in Europe for America, which may be used on any of their steamers, gave rise to the hope here that some of the passengers who booked to sail on the Elbe might have taken passage on the Ems of the same line which sailed from Bremen on January 22 and arrived here last night. A careful comparison of the names on the Ems' passenger list, however, with those reported on the Elbe proved this hope to have been without foundation.

HAVE GIVEN UP ALL HOPES.

LOWESTOFT, Feb. 1.—In reply to a message of sympathy from Queen Victoria, the agent of the North German Lloyd Steamship Company has telegraphed to Her Majesty from here saying that no hopes whatever are entertained of any more of the passengers or crew of the steamship Elbe having been saved.

THE FULDA GROUNDED.

NEW YORK, Feb. 1.—The ship Fulda sailed from New York on January 21, bound for Southampton and Bremen. She arrived at the former port on Wednesday, January 30th, and, after landing the English mails and passengers, proceeded to Bremen and grounded while going up the river.

Tugs are alongside of her and she will probably float at the next high tide. There is no danger.

The Fulda was floated without any damage having been sustained and she proceeded to Bremen.

FOUNDERED OFF THE AZORES.

ST. MICHAEL'S, Azores, Feb. 1.—The British steamer Ituni, Captain Smith, grounded and foundered off this port.

The Ituni sailed from London November 29, for Demerara and put into St. Michael's in distress. Repairs were made and she proceeded on her voyage December 16, arriving at Barbadoes on December 28. She was probably on her return trip to London when the present disaster occurred.

The Ituni was a screw steamer of 779 tons net register. She was built at Newcastle, England, in 1884, and was 237 feet long, had 32.2 feet beam and was 15.5 feet deep. She hailed from London and was owned by the Demerara and Berbice Steamship Company (Limited.)

CARRIED HER PILOT ACROSS.

QUEENSTOWN, Feb. 2.—The Cunard line steamship Lucania, Capt. McKay, arrived this morning from New York and reports that light to strong gales and rough seas were encountered throughout the entire voyage.

Pilot Lyons, of New York, who could not be transferred from the Lucania to the pilot boat after the steamship cleared Sandy Hook bar on account of the dense fog which prevailed on the day the Lucania left New York, will return on the Umbria from this port on Sunday.

THE RIFONDO STRANDED.

LIVERPOOL, Feb. 1.—The Norwegian bark Rifondo, Captain Olsen, from Savannah November 30th, stranded when entering twenty minutes after a collision with British on the North Sea.

Garston Harbor. A portion of her cargo is damaged.

HOME, SWEET HOME.

REMOVAL OF THE REMAINS OF JOHN HOWARD PAYNE.

Brought From Tunis to His Native Land. Pathetic Scene in the Little Protestant Church—Something About the Last Days of the Sweet Singer.

I chanced upon Mr. John Worthington the other day just after his return from Malta, where he has been United States consul since his appointment to that position by President Arthur in 1883. From time to time I have noticed extracts from his consular reports in the newspapers, but I particularly remembered his connection with the removal of John Howard Payne's remains to this country from Tunis at the instance of Mr. Corcoran of Washington.

Mr. Worthington said that one of the earliest and most interesting duties he had to perform as consul was to go to Tunis and exhume the body of John Howard Payne, the author of "Home, Sweet Home." This was on Jan. 5, 1883. Payne had been the American consul at Tunis and died there in 1852. His body lay in St. George's cemetery, in the heart of the town of Tunis, for 32 years, when Mr. Corcoran, the Washington banker, obtained permission from the state department to take it up and bring it to America.

"When I arrived at Tunis," Mr. Worthington continued, "it was noon—the exhumation was to take place at 1 o'clock. At the grave I found assembled Sir Thomas F. Reade (the British consul general), one or two gentlemen connected with the American consulate and about 20 other gentlemen, some of them Tunisians, dressed in the costumes of the country. Among the latter was Payne's old dragoman, who had been present at his death and funeral.

"There was nothing whatever left of the body except the skeleton, and in removing this skeleton from the grave to a coffin we had to put some of the earth in with it, as the coffin in which the body had been buried had crumbled away, the earth and bones becoming mixed.

"In stooping over the grave I noticed that the root of a tree—a pepper tree—had just begun to creep over the forehead. This I pulled away, and in so doing exposed a piece of bone as white as ivory, which, together with a branch of the pepper tree, I sent to Mr. Corcoran at Washington. I also obtained five or six brass buttons from the uniform in which Payne had been buried, one of which I sent to Mr. Corcoran, one to the secretary of state —in fact, I gave them all away, not keeping even one for myself.

"The body was then taken to the little English Protestant church at Tunis, where, the coffin having been covered with an American flag, we placed it on a table at the foot of the chancel and directly under a window which had been erected to Payne's memory by English and American residents, and on which was inscribed: 'To the memory of John Howard Payne, author of "Home, Sweet Home."'"

This was just about sunset. The ceremony which took place was of a simple nature. An English naval officer played the air of 'Home, Sweet Home' on a little American melodeon which stood there, and after considerable urging I induced my wife to sing the words. This she at last consented to do, and standing there in the beautiful twilight singing helped to make one of the most pathetic scenes I have ever witnessed. At first she sung in brave tones, but gradually, as she began to think how this little scene might some day become historic, her voice trembled and trembled—which only added pathos to the scene—until there was not a dry eye in the church. Arabs, foreigners and all were wiping away the tears. It was simply overwhelming.

"There we left the body all night. The next day, at noon, we again assembled, when the coffin containing all that was left of Payne was carried to the Mariana, whence it was put aboard a French ship bound for Marseilles. It was then transferred to a ship coming direct to the United States, where it was taken to Washington and buried.

"The people of Tunis, as I learned afterward, felt aggrieved that even the old tombstone which had covered the grave for 30 odd years had been taken away to America. This was done by a mistake. Mr. Corcoran wrote me, and when he was informed of their feeling he at once authorized me to have a monument put up over the empty grave in Tunis. This I did, duplicating the one in Washington, except instead of putting a bust, as on the Washington moument, I had a little group of symbols cut for the top, one a ribbon, on which were carved the first few notes of 'Home, Sweet Home,' and the inscription (from Mrs. Ray Riley Smith's poem, 'Sometime') 'Then Be Content, Poor Heart,' and the others a lute and a book."

"I suppose, Mr. Worthington, you obtained considerable information regarding Payne's life in Tunis?"

"Yes, I did, particularly from a Mr. Alfred Chappillie, the present United States vice consul in Tunis. He knew Payne very well and was very kind to him. It was through Mr. Chappillie largely that Payne was enabled to receive the assistance which made his last days comfortable without Payne knowing that it was charity. He was proud, he fancied —and his friends led him to believe—that the money he was living on was his own, whereas, as a matter of fact, his friends were helping him. He supposed it was his money which had been saved for him out of his own income.

"Payne lived in a fine large house in Tunis, which he had succeeded in getting the bey to let him occupy in his capacity as a servant of the United States. As he began to fail he staid in the house a great deal, sitting in a large chair, well wrapped up, with a hot fire burning—this, too, in the hot climate to be found there—contenting himself with brandy and soda. He finally died from exhaustion from inability to eat or retain anything, living on brandy altogether during the last few days of his life."—Philadelphia Press.

PETERBOROUGH, FEBRUARY 4, 1895

THE SATURDAY TIMES

Last week's edition of THE SATURDAY TIMES was in such demand that all but a few dozen of the eight thousand copies printed were sold. This edition circulated in every village and settlement in the county, among people who have become permanent subscribers. From all over subscriptions have been pouring in. Our canvassers report that THE SATURDAY TIMES is gaining favor and popularity wherever they go, and they are meeting with encouraging success. Owing to a "rush" in the office, several of the special features were omitted from last week's issue. This week we intend to more than make up for it, by giving our thousands of readers a paper replete with all the news of the day, both telegraphic and local, and a choice number of special articles by our special contributors, embodying something new in the way of local hits—features that are always in demand and very popular with the public. To advertisers who wish to reach the people residing in adjacent villages, no better medium can be had than THE SATURDAY TIMES. This week's edition will be a mammoth one, compared with other papers circulating in the county.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Gossip of People You Know and Those You Don't Know.

H. Milligan, of Millbrook, was in town Saturday.

W. S. Keenan, of Detroit, is stopping at the Grand Central.

E. H. Mohr, of Kingston, is registered at the Snowden House.

J. M. Carroll, of Lindsay, was in town on Saturday circulating among old friends.

Mrs. R. A. Hamilton, Harvey street, has just returned from a three weeks' visit to Toronto. During her stay in the city, Mrs. Hamilton's unusual vocal abilities were in demand. She sang in Broadway Tabernacle on Sunday week, and at two concerts on the following week. She received warm commendations of her singing, as those who have heard her in Peterborough with pleasure would naturally expect she would receive.

STRICKEN WITH PARALYSIS.

An Old Lady Found Unconscious in Her Bed—Recovery Doubtful.

Mrs. McFarlane, an old lady nearly 70 years of age, was stricken with paralysis on Sunday morning and is not expected to live.

Mrs. McFarlane is mother of Mrs. William Bowman, of Water street. When Mrs. Bowman went to call her mother yesterday morning she found her in a state of unconsciousness other than that produced by sleep. A doctor was immediately summoned, and after an examination it was found that Mrs. McFarlane had been stricken with paralysis.

She has been in an unconscious condition ever since. The attending physician holds forth no hopes for her recovery.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES.

Items of Interest Intelligently Presented for Busy Readers.

Town Council tonight.

The Board of Health will meet this afternoon.

There are several curling matches scheduled for this afternoon.

The Hall Trust will hold a meeting this evening in the office of the town clerk.

The Board meeting of the Young Woman's Association will be held this afternoon.

The Young People's Society of St. John's church will hold their regular meeting tonight.

Mr. W. J. Pearson, the Montreal horse buyer, will be in Millbrook on Thursday, Norwood on Friday and Peterborough on Saturday for the purpose of purchasing good sound horses.

There is a story of a small boy in school the other day who surprised his teacher by asking her how far the procession of presidents of the United States would reach if placed in a row. The teacher of course didn't know, when he replied "From Washington to Cleveland."

HOW CONTAGION IS SPREAD.

Indifference of Local Health Officers in Cases of Infectious Disease.

Dr. Bryce, secretary of the Provincial Board of Health, is receiving many complaints about the looseness with which the Health Act is enforced in various parts of the province. The difficulty seems to be that the local health officers act in many instances without fee and are hence indifferent. In King Township there is at present an epidemic of virulent scarlatina, public funerals are being held and no precautions taken. In Oxford County recently the children of a district school were marched in a body to view the remains of a comrade who had died of diphtheria. In Southern Muskoka it is customary for people to visit from house to house while diphtheria is raging. Complaints come also from Renfrew and other counties with great frequency.

A PRACTICAL SCHEME.

Editor of the Times.

DEAR SIR:—Hearing that a perfect reorganization of the fire, police and solicitorship departments was contemplated by the Committee on Appointments, I beg, with your permission to submit a scheme which will prove in the interests of the ratepayers. Some years ago a member of the town council advocated and carried into effect a scheme whereby the individual citizens received a marked reduction in the amount of the premiums paid on fire insurance. At present we are classed as "B" what we want is a classing of "A" which would give us the same privileges as Toronto, Montreal, Hamilton and other cities, and also a considerable reduction in premiums. The Fire Underwriters, according to their rules, require a town to have in its service ten regularly engaged and paid firemen. At present we lack that requirement and are rated as class "B." The difference in premium rates in Peterborough would be $7,500. That is if we were rated as class "A," the citizens would save $7,500.

Now, by paying ten men to act as firemen, we can secure the class "A" rating. I propose now that the town engage 10 men, who would act in the capacity of firemen, policemen and also fill the position of street and bridge inspector. One man, to act as chief, would be paid $1,000 per year, and the other nine $400 per year each. Three of these men could fill the position of policemen, one additional as chief and one as street and bridge inspector. Their joint salaries would be $4,600. By such an arrangement we would have an efficient police force and also an efficient fire department. Let us figure on the saving:

COST OF PRESENT SYSTEM.

Present cost of police	$2,600
Present cost of firemen	700
Salary of Street and Bridge Inspector	600
Total	$3,900

COST OF NEW SYSTEM.

Ten firemen to act as police and fill other positions	$ 4,900
Saving in insurance premiums	7,600
Total	$12,200
Less cost of present system	3,900
Saving to the town	$ 8,300

Money saved either in taxes or insurance rates is money saved just the same. The above figures are crude, but correct as far as I know, and no doubt investigation would show that a still greater saving could be effected.

I respectfully call the attention of the Council to these figures. As ratepayers we expect and demand that the representatives of our choice should legislate economically during their tenure of office, and not, as in the past, show themselves subservient to the "old timers" who have been ruling the roost altogether too long.

CITIZEN.

[The above letter contains a good deal of common sense, and outlines a scheme that it might be well for the Council to consider. Even if the employment of ten firemen did not bring about a decrease in insurance risks, it would be an economical change, and one that would insure better police and fire protection.—Ed.]

Special to the Times.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., Feb. 2.—Premier Greene's Cabinet resigned yesterday after about a month of office. It was the third Cabinet in a year. Sir William Whiteway is forming a new Cabinet which will probably consist of: Sir William Whiteway Premier; Robert Bond, Colonial Secretary; E. P. Morris, Attorney General; Hon. G. Emerson, Receiver-General; Hon. H. J. Woods, Surveyor-General, and A. W. Harvey, without a portfolio.

Ex Premier Greene is promised the next vacancy on the Supreme Court bench.

Whiteway caucuses oppose joining Canada but this objection will likely be over-ruled and a Royal Commission will not be objected to. The Imperial Government is announced to have offered $1,000 weekly to the relief fund. Nine-tenths of the business men are compromising with their creditors and the Government is being urged to prosecute the directors of the Union Bank.

CITY AND COUNTY NEWS

LOCAL AND DISTRICT HAPPENINGS OF THE DAY.

Thieves at Port Hope.

Thieves entered the grocery store of Mr. George Glass, Port Hope, on Thursday night and made away with about twenty-five dollars worth of goods. An entrance was effected through the back door and the thieves took plenty of time to help themselves to the best goods in stock. The robbers left no clue behind them.

A Wife Beater.

Yesterday afternoon Constable Cochrane brought to the police station William Harrison whom he locked up in the cells. Harrison was arrested on a warrant issued by Magistrate Edmison and sworn to by Mrs. Harrison, the prisoner's wife. The charge is that Harrison cruelly beat his wife with a rawhide on Saturday night. The Harrisons live on the northern portion of George street. Another family is implicated in the quarrel that precipitated the beating. The case will be aired in the Police Court this morning.

Curling in Bobcaygeon.

The blockade of the roads in the beginning of the week necessitated a postponement of the Primary contest in which Bobcaygeon is interested. It will likely take place Monday and Tuesday, in Peterborough. The Lindsay group played off last Monday, and was won by Lindsay, defeating Orillia and Waubaushene. In the event of Bobcaygeon losing in the Primary, Lindsay will be a strong favorite for the Tankard. Two rinks of the Fenelon players came down Friday evening for the return game with the club, and fickle fortune did not favor the visitors, though they played a very good game.

A Record of Prosperity.

We publish in this issue the annual report of the Central Canada Loan and Savings Company, and take great pleasure in calling attention to the many satisfactory conditions evidenced therein. The earnings of the Company for the year amounted to $671.975.28, and resulted a net profit of $53,777.92 after the deduction of debenture interests and current expenses had been made, enabling an addition to the reserve and contingent funds of $27,777.92 and four dividends of six per cent. to the shareholders to be declared. These results are gratifying and denote the prosperous condition of the Company, as well as a steady increase in business. The report states that all obligations have been met with remarkable and gratifying promptitude. This is a surer indication than anything else, that the farmers have risen superior to the crisis brought about by the decline in the market price of cereals, and are turning their attention to mixed farming thereby utilizing their land to better advantage in the growing of products that bring them in commensurate and more than living returns for their labor. Mr. George A. Cox was re-elected president of the Company, which insures a continuance of the excellent management that has brought the Company to the front as a solid and prosperous financial institution.

EVENTS THIS WEEK.

The present week promises to be a busy one, and lively and interesting in point of the many events that are scheduled to take place:

Monday afternoon—Inaugural meeting of Board of Health.

Monday night—Meeting of Town Council, Ashburnham Council and Ashburnham School Board.

Wednesday night—Inaugural meeting of Board of Education.

Thursday night—Visit of Cabinet Ministers and grand Conservative Rally in the Opera House.

Friday night — McCarthy meeting and McCarthy League Demonstration in the Opera House.

In addition numerous sporting events are on, several parties and balls, and quite a number of social events.

THE CIVIC OFFICIALS.

The Committee on Appointments of the Town Council at a recent meeting recommended the dismissal of all the town officials, with the exception of the clerk, treasurer, collector, the engineer and fire brigade. THE TIMES was in possession of these facts on Friday night, but, as all Committee meetings are held with closed doors and the deliberations are not given out to the press, THE TIMES did not care to violate the general rules, nor certain confidences, by publishing a report of what took place. Since then the action of the Committee has become public.

THE TIMES is disposed to uphold those Councillors who voted for this movement. By declaring these several offices vacant, the Council will be in a position to reappoint those of the present officials whom it deems wise to reappoint, and to appoint new men to such of the offices as remain vacant.

The recommendation of the Committee on Appointments is broad and sweeping, but it is neither sudden, untimely or without precedent. Where civic departments have been wisely, economically and satisfactorily conducted, a change such as proposed could properly and with grace be deprecated—it would be wise to advise caution, and careful consideration before decisive action. But in this case the change is in the interest of the public, and it is a change demanded by public sentiment. Nothing can be gained by deferring action in this matter. That a change should be made in the various civic departments has been apparent for several years. The time is at hand for a general reorganization, and although the Councillors have an unpleasant task before them, we believe that they see their duty and will do it.

Any change that will lessen the civic expenditures, or result in a more efficient administration of civic matters, is not untimely, is not unwise, and is most certainly not unjust to those that may lose positions thereby. Any change that the ratepayers desire, it is the duty of their representatives to carry out. A majority of the council, we believe, have pronounced in favor of the proposed change. They represent a majority of the ratepayers of the town, and are merely carrying out the wishes of their constituents.

THE TIMES is in favor of a reorganization of the police force. Police protection has been costing the town too dearly, and we believe can be maintained more efficiently and at less cost. Of the present incumbents it is not necessary to say but little. It is well known that they are, perhaps with one exception, ignorant and incompetent. The Chief of Police especially is unfit for the position, lacking many material requisites and possessing too many undesirable traits to make a fit head for the police department.

The office of solicitor can be better filled. The town and the ratepayers have been put to a great expense during the past two years owing purely to mismanagement of this department. The legal expenses have ran on apace, amounting to many thousands of dollars. A change in this department will be a saving to the town that would soon be visible in a decreased tax rate.

We do not believe that a better man for the position of Street and Bridge Inspector could be secured than Mr. Pope. He has filled the position ably and well and his usefulness to the town has not yet ceased.

There are several practical schemes whereby the police and fire departments can be operated more efficiently and at less cost. Let the offices be declared vacant, and the Council will then be in a position to consider them. If it is possible to maintain these departments more economically, it is the duty of the Council to make the change.

A GREAT GAME.

Peterborough Defeats Toronto's Crack Hockey Team by 9 to 5.

The hockey match on Saturday night between The Bank of Toronto team, of Toronto, and the Peterborough's, was the best game ever played on Peterborough ice. It was a battle royal from start to finish, every inch being hotly contested. The Peterborough's played as they never played before and covered themselves with glory. The Toronto boys put forth every effort, but were no match for their skilful opponents who defeated them in a score of 9 goals to five.

Spectators were out in force, the galleries being crowded. When the two teams lined up, the splendid physique of the Toronto players as compared with the more slimly built home players, lead many people to believe that the latter would suffer defeat. The two teams were composed as follows:

Toronto—Goal, B. Carlisle; point, W. Warden; cover point, H. Brummell; forwards, G. Crawford, T. Parsons, J. Gilmour and H. Reid.

Peterborough—Goal, George Dickson; point, W. Montgomery; cover point, J. Parsons; forwards, R. Davidson, L. King, H. Wenham and W. Phalen. Davidson replaced Lefevre.

Peterborough made a splendid start, and in less than 15 minutes shot the puck through their opponents' goal three times. At this juncture it looked as if Peterborough was to have everything their own way. The galleries went wild with applause.

The Toronto's then got down to work, and before time was called in the first half scored three goals, making the score a tie. Things at this point looked extremely doubtful.

Peterborough stock sank another point when the Toronto's scored the first goal in the second half. The home players, however, were less winded than their opponents, and by brilliant playing scored two goals in succession. The next was the Toronto's, and this was inadvertently scored for them by Montgomery, of the Peterborough's. It proved to be the Toronto's last, as the Peterborough's got the next two before the hour was up.

Gilmour, the crack player, did some good work, but found an able adversary in Walter Phalen, who outmatched him in every struggle. Phalen did the most brilliant work, in his hockey experience, on Saturday night. King and Wenham also did brilliant work, while some of Dickson's stops were phenomenal. Davidson, who replaced Lefevre, played well.

BEATEN WITH A POKER.

Murderous Assaults Near Omemee—One May Prove Fatal.

The quietly little village of Omemee is greatly excited over a murderous assault which may result in murder. The affair took place on Friday night. The following despatch from Omemee gives the particulars:

OMEMEE, Feb. 2.—"About five miles east of here last night Thomas Foster, who has been staying with his friend, Andrew Faulkner, took up an iron poker and struck William Faulkner over the head and laid him out, then went at Andrew and laid his skull bare in four places and pounded away unmercifully at his arm and shoulder until life was almost extinct. Then he left the house. Foster was arrested by County Constable Short. Andrew Faulkner's condition is serious."

Later reports state that Faulkner is rapidly sinking and very little hopes are entertained for his recovery. In the event of his dying Foster will be held on the charge of murder.

A Metal Breadboard

THE WOMAN WHO HAS BEEN USED to kneading dough on the old fashioned wooden breadboard knows what a bother it is to get them clean and how cumbersome and heavy they are. When they begin to crack or check it is almost impossible to thoroughly cleanse them, and they may easily become dangerous conveyances of disease. It was left for a woman, of course, to remedy this state of affairs, and Mrs M. M. Everhard, of St. Joseph, Mich., has patented a metal bread board, which is one of the greatest labor-savers imaginable. It is light, does not absorb grease, dough does not adhere to it, and while it possesses all the advantages of the marble bread board it is much cheaper and, of course, far lighter and easier to handle. If readers want to confer a favor upon their wives that will be forever appreciated, let them send $1 to the manufacturers, 101 Bay street, Toronto, for one of these boards.

COUNCIL DEFERRED ACTION ON THE RECOMMENDATION TO DECLARE OFFICES VACANT.

It was a Tie Vote and the Mayor Voted to Refer the Report of the Committee on Appointments Back—A Very Lively Session.

At the council meeting last night the report of the Committee on Appointments recommending the dismissal of civic officials, was referred back to that Committee with the exception of the first two clauses. Clause one appoints the town assessors as follows: Wards One and Three, Thomas Kincaid and Thomas McKee; Wards Two and Four, Thomas McGrath and J. J. Hartley. Clause two recommended that no action be taken at present in reference to the applications of Mr. Louis Spry.

When Mayor Kendry took the mayor's chair at last night's council meeting he faced several hundred ratepayers, who filled all the standing room set apart for the public.

There were present Mayor Kendry in the chair, and Councillors Cahill, Sproule, Best, Denne, Mills, Phalen, Dawson, Clinkscale, Sawers, Stone, Brady and Mason.

The minutes were read and approved. At the suggestion of Councillor Cahill a number of citizens and ex aldermen who had taken up positions in the "anteroom," were invited to take a seat within the charmed circle.

FINANCE COMMITTEE.

To the Mayor and Council of the Town of Peterborough:

GENTLEMEN, Your Finance Committee beg leave to report as follows:

1. Your Committee recommend that the following accounts be paid:

W. H. Halpin	$33 25
D. Sullivan	1 00
T. Williams	75
Mrs. E. Dunford	1 00

2. Your Committee recommend that a cheque for $100 be issued to the treasurer of the County of Peterborough for the fine in the case of Queen vs. McCarthy, and that the clerk of the Police Court be instructed to pay to the County Treasurer the fine in the case of Queen vs. Welsh.

3. In reference to the communication from the Children's Aid Society your Committee are of opinion that it is not necessary or desirable to arrange for a temporary home for children at present and recommend that when cases arise in which a temporary home for a child is required by the Society, the Charity Committee be authorised to arrange for such home as each case may arise and that cheques be issued by the Finance Committee upon certificate of Charity Committee.

4. In regard to the communication from the Ratepayers' association, in reference to union with Ashburnham, your Committee recommend that a reply be given that we have not present sufficient data to take action.

All of which is respectfully submitted.
THOS. CAHILL,
Chairman.

Speaking to that clause in the report referring to union with Ashburnham, Councillor Stone said he was surprised, and couldn't understand why the will of the people wasn't carried out. It had been stated that it was the irresponsible people who had voted for the union. This was not the case. It was the will of a majority of the ratepayers of the town that union with Ashburnham should be consummated. He believed that union would mean a reduction in taxes of two mills on the dollar. At this juncture several councillors asked Mr. Stone to explain. Councillor Stone replied that he considered the matter carefully and could explain. He had never been shown any just reason why union should not be effected. He moved that the clause of the report be referred back to be reported on more clearly.

Councillor Sawers then moved, seconded by Councillor Sproule that the report of the Finance Committee be taken up and voted on clause by clause. This was carried. The report was accordingly read clause by clause. The clause referring to the proposition of the Children's Aid Society, against the establishment of a home for children, was mentioned by the mayor, who said that the establishment of such a home was proposed to the Children's Aid Society by the Council. Councillors Cahill, Sawers and Sproule defended the report of the Finance Committee and spoke against the maintenance of an institution of the kind. The clause was adopted when voted upon.

The clause relating to union with Ashburnham provoked considerable discussion in which the mayor, Councillors Best, Dawson and Stone took part. Councillor Dawson challenged Councillor Stone to explain how union with Ashburnham would result in reducing the rate to 15 mills.

Councillor Stone made a very clear explanation. He referred to Councillor Dawson as a north-of-Ireland man who had a peculiar way, all his own, of sitting on people who opposed him on any question. He moved that a special Committee, composed of Councillors Cahill, Best, Mills, Phelan, Clinkscale and Brady and the mover be appointed to meet a similar committee from Ashburnham.

Councillor Sawers placed himself on record as opposed to taking over Ashburnham with such liabilities as that village dictated the town should assume.

Councillor Stone's amendment for a special committee was voted upon and lost. The report of the Finance Committee was then adopted in its entirety.

PROPERTY COMMITTEE.

To the Mayor and Council of the Town of Peterborough:

GENTLEMEN,—Your Property Committee beg leave to report as follows:

All of which is respectfully submitted.
ADAM DAWSON,
Chairman.

The report was adopted as read.

All of which is respectfully submitted.
JOSEPH MILLS,
Chairman.

The report was adopted as read.

LICENSE COMMITTEE.

To the Mayor and Council of the Town of Peterborough:

GENTLEMEN—Your License Committee beg leave to report and recommend as follows:

1. That George Carton be given a refund of $20 on the peddler's license fee paid by him, and that a cheque be issued to him for that amount.

2. That no action be taken in reference to the application of F. Fairen.

3. That the fee for an auctioneer's license be reduced to $50 per annum, and that a by-law be prepared to give effect to this recommendation.

4. That the Chairman of this Committee be authorised to ascertain whether dog tags can be procured in the town, and at what price they can be purchased.

All of which is respectfully submitted.
GEORGE SPROULE,
Chairman.

Councillor Dawson objected to the clause reducing the license of auctioneers, and moved, in amendment, that the matter be referred back to the Committee. Councillor Clinkscale seconded the amendment, but it was lost when voted upon. The report was then carried.

CHARITY COMMITTEE.

To the Mayor and Council of the Town of Peterborough:

GENTLEMEN—Your Charity Committee beg leave to report as follows:

Your Committee at a meeting held on January 21 last considered the proposed formation of a Central Board for the distribution of charity, as recommended by the by Council last year, and adopted the following resolution: "That, in the opinion of this Committee, we cannot accept the proposals submitted to us respecting the distribution of charity funds, but would be very thankful to receive any suggestions for another manner of organization whereby the distribution of the town charity, being now personally responsible to the ratepayers for the relief of the poor." At the same meeting a resolution was adopted that the Committee would be pleased to meet the clergymen for the further consideration of the matter.

2. A conference with the clergymen of the town was accordingly held on January 24, when, after hearing the views of the clergymen, the following resolution was adopted: "That this Committee, having heard the suggestions and explanations respecting the formation of a Charity Board for the whole town, approves of these views, provided that a member of the Charity Committee from each ward of the town be added to that Charity Board. This Committee, however, cannot accept the proposition of the Council that the charity funds be limited to any sum, as they cannot act under such restriction."

In reference to the latter clause of this resolution, and in explanation of it, your Committee has to report that the clergymen objected to the restricted amount as formerly recommended.

All of which is respectfully submitted.
JOHN SAWERS,
Chairman.

The first clause was adopted, but, on motion of Councillor Sproule, the second clause was referred back to the Committee with full power to act.

STREET AND BRIDGE COMMITTEE.

To the Mayor and Council of the town of Peterborough:

GENTLEMEN,—Your Street and Bridge Committee beg leave to report as follows:

1. In reference to the communication of Mr. B. H. Kane asking to have the line of Gilchrist street defined, we recommend that the request be granted, and that Messrs. Ranney & Innis be employed to do the work provided that Mr. Kane will pay one half of the cost.

2. Your Committee believes that it would be advisable to be represented at the Good Roads Convention in Toronto and decided to send two or three representatives.

All of which is respectfully submitted.
The report was adopted as read.
HENRY BEST,
Chairman.

COMMITTEE ON APPOINTMENTS.

To the Mayor and Council of the Town of Peterborough:

GENTLEMEN,—Your Committee on Appointments beg leave to report and recommend as follows:

1. That John Kincaid, J. J. Hartley, Thos. B. McGrath and Thos. McKee be appointed assessors for 1895.

2. That no action be taken at present in reference to the applications of Louis Spry.

3. That the services of the Relief officer be dispensed with.

4. That the office of Town Solicitor be declared vacant to take effect March 1st.

5. That the office of Street and Bridge Inspector be declared vacant, to take effect on March 1st.

6. That the office of Chief of Police and constables be declared vacant, to take effect on March 1st.

All of which is respectfully submitted.
E. B. STONE,
Chairman.

There was a hush of expectancy in the room when Councillor Stone read the report of the Committee on Appointments. The reading of the report was greeted with applause by the spectators.

The report was then taken up clause by clause. The adoption of clause one, appointing the assessors, was moved. Councillor Mason immediately moved an amendment that the old assessors be reappointed.

Councillor Sproule immediately took the floor and stated that the report was not the report of the Committee. The report was not divided up into clauses. It was simply one clause declaring all offices vacant until March 1st. He didn't propose to have one office declared vacant, and another office not vacant, according as the Council might see fit to vote.

Councillor Denne agreed with Councillor Sproule.

Councillor Stone thought his integrity had been attacked and he wished to hurl back any insinuation that he had falsified the report. He explained that the departments came under different heads, and the report had to be sub divided.

Councillor Sproule replied that he didn't wish to attack Mr. Stone's honesty. But he wished to say that if those recommendations were to be classified, they didn't carry out the spirit of his resolution. The report might be straight but it was awfully bow-legged and a bow-legged man was a bad person to stop a cat in a passage.

Councillor Dawson thought that the meanest piece of business that could be done was to declare a man's office vacant who had done his duty faithfully and well. He went on to say that the police force had done their duty. This remark was drowned by the hisses of the crowd. The Mayor requested that order be maintained and no more hissing be indulged in.

The first clause appointing assessors was then taken up. Several amendments were submitted but were lost on a vote and the first clause was carried.

Clause two was carried.

Clause three, dispensing with the services of the relief officer, was taken up. It was explained that the committee could take charge of the dispensation of charity, thus resulting in a considerable saving.

At this juncture things began to get tangled. Several motions and amendments were submitted. A great many suggestions were made relative to the disposition of the last four clauses of the report. Councillor Denne moved, seconded by Councillor Sproule, that the last four clauses be grouped and voted upon at once. Councillor Cahill moved in amendment, seconded by Councillor Brady, that the last four clauses be referred to the Committee on Appointments, this committee to call a meeting of the Committee of the Whole Council to consider the matter. This was voted upon and resulted in a tie. The Mayor cast the deciding vote, voting in favor of the Amendment, and it was carried. The division was as follows:

NAYS—Sproule, Best, Denne, Mills, Phelan, Sawers—6.

This settled the all important question of the evening, for the time being, and the immense crowd which had increased until every available inch of standing room was taken up, surged out. In the rush for the entrance, the glass in the doors was broken, clattering to the floor where it was crushed to atoms by the crowd.

MISCELLANEOUS BUSINESS.

The bylaw amending bylaw 446, fixing auctioneers' licenses at $50, and the bylaw appointing the assessors were read a first, second and third time and became law.

The following resolution were then submitted.

Moved by Councillor Dawson, seconded by Councillor Clinkscale, that all men breaking stone for the corporation, receive 10 cents more a yard than heretofore.—Carried.

Moved by Councillor Stone, seconded by Councillor Phalen, That Mr. Frank Fairen's request asking that the sum of $40 be refunded him, be granted.—Lost.

Moved by Henry Denne, seconded by John Sawers, That the town account be offered to the Bank of Toronto for this year on the following terms: That the Council shall have all necessary accommodation required either by overdraft or otherwise at option of this Council. That the rate of interest charged shall not exceed five per cent. per annum. This offer shall be given by the clerk in writing and shall be subject to acceptance for one week after such notice. In case the Bank of Toronto does not accept, the same offer shall be made to the Banks of Commerce and Montreal, respectively. In case any of these banks accept this offer, the mayor and clerk shall have authority to transfer the account and sign any cheques or documents necessary to complete the same.

Mayor Kendry speaking to this resolution said that the Council should move slowly in the matter. He made known the fact that the Ontario Bank had floated and placed all the town's debentures without charging one cent of commission. The account, as it was, was entirely satisfactory. The matter, he thought, should be

The Times.

PETERBOROUGH, FEBRUARY 5, 1895.

Good morning!

The Patrons of industry will soon be able to get hats that will fit them again.

The capture of Wei-Hai-Wei places the last important Chinese stronghold in the hands of the Japs and will probably mark the practical close of the war.

Certain evil-minded Tories have asserted that Mr. Laurier has deemed it advisable to inoculate Sir Richard with anti-talksine. No corroboration has yet been found for the statement.

The growing importance of Canada's national highway as a link in the means of international communications is once more illustrated by the announcement that the Shah of Persia will take the Canadian route on his next visit to Europe.

It is predicted by some of the papers that remedical legislation will be only another name for civil war in Manitoba. That is possible, of course. But people have to be mightily excited because they gather up their breech-loading shotguns and go on the warpath.

The Hamilton Times urges Premier Bowell to make up his mind at once and settle the Manitoba school question in one way or the other. The advice comes from an unfriendly source, but it is sound all the same. Nothing is to be gained from a party standpoint by postponement, and every hour of unnecessary delay is an injury to the country, which will know no peace until the difficulty is disposed of.

The citizens of Peterborough are to have more than their share of politics this week. The appearance before the footlights of four Cabinet Ministers is not an everyday occurrence in Peterborough. Then when this combination is followed by Mr. McCarthy and Col. O'Brien, there is room for the suspicion that we are getting rather more than our share of political favors. The Opera House will no doubt be filled to the doors on both occasions.

The Cabinet Ministers, who are to visit Peterborough on Thursday next, should be given to understand in the most emphatic manner possible, that the monkeying which has been going on in connection with the Trent Valley canal has got to stop if the Conservative party hope to win in the dozen or more constituencies bordering on the proposed waterway. The people are in no mood for nonsense, and unless the government intend to push the work to completion at once, and show that they mean to do so by letting the contracts and commencing operations, they might as well stay away and save their wind.

In his speech at Listowel last week Hon Mr. Haggart intimated that it would not be long before the Government would appeal to the country, but just what he meant by that remark is not at all clear. In the natural course of events it will not be long before another general election is held as everybody knows, but the question over which people are bothering their heads is whether the elections will be held at once or not until after another session of Parliament. If Hon. Mr. Haggart will take the people into his confidence on this point, the newspapers of the country will present him with an illuminated address and a spray of bananas.

AN EMPEROR'S LAMENT.

The man who seems to have been the most unfortunate victim of a huge confidence scheme in the year 1894 is the Emperor of China. One year ago to-day he undoubtedly thought that his position as the head of a mighty empire was secure and that no power on earth could successfully attack him.

But trouble has come in great waves of disaster during the last few months. China's hereditary foe has wrestled away Korea; has beaten the Chinese army and navy in nearly every engagement; and now threatens to capture the capital itself. The Emperor has found that his trust has been placed on broken reeds; that his confidence has been betrayed; that he has been grossly deceived as to the condition of his own army; that his generals have betrayed him: that enemies within his own nation have plotted his overthrow, and that national defeat is not so bitter as the personal humiliation which he suffers.

The Emperor's edict to his personal followers now made public is a sorry tale of woe. In pathetic terms he alludes to the deceptions that have been practiced upon him by his incompetent and untrustworthy generals. It is for these reasons he mournfully complains that the Japanese have been so successful, and their success he adds "causes us the greatest concern and makes our ancestors restless in their honored graves." Poor Emperor! As Artemus Ward used to say, it would have been money in his pockets if he had never been born.

THE TORONTO PAPERS.

There is no longer room for doubt regarding the deal by which Toronto loses one of its big morning papers. On Friday last the employes of the Empire received notice that their services would not be required after the end of next week, and it is said now that the paper will cease publication in a few days. It will be absorbed by the Mail, the latter journal to be known in future as the Mail-Empire and to resume its old position as the mouthpiece of the Liberal-Conservative party of Canada.

For the last few days the bent of the Mail's editorial columns has been a hint to the observant that something of this sort was in the wind, for the paper has been engaged in the delicate task of gradually shifting the weight from the Independent foot to the Tory leg. This is an operation that requires great care and niceness of judgment, and it must be said that the Mail has so far shown a careful appreciation of the extraordinary delicacy of the position, and is not likely to bungle the job. In a few more days the Empire will resume business at the old Conservative stand, put its independent principles in the furnace and touch a match to them. Hurroo!

The business men of Toronto will heave a sigh of relief when the change occurs. The death of the Empire will take a weight off their backs. The other papers will make merry, exceeding merry, for they will be able to divide much of the business that went to the Empire and fatten accordingly. The people who felt it to be a solemn obligation to read the Empire daily will smile smiles of sweetness and light and rejoicing, and the friends and followers of the Independent Mail will shed a tear or two and wonder what the dickens is the sense of having principles anyway. The people who will really suffer are the poor devils who are being bundled out of their positions on the Empire in such a sudden and unceremonious manner.

THE OLD-TIME FIRE.

Talk about yer buildin's
  That's het up by steam—
Give me the old oak fire
  Where the old folks used to dream.

The rickety dog-irons,
  One-sided as could be;
The ashes banked with taters
  That was roastin' there for me.

The dog on one side drowsin',
  Or barkin' nigh the door;
The kitten cuttin' capers
  With the knittin' on the floor.

An' me a little tow-head
  By mammy's side at night;
With both my cheeks a burnin'
  From the red flames leapin' bright.

These steam-het buildin's make me
  Jest weary fer the blaze
That was heap more comfortable
  In my childhood's nights and days.

An' I'd give the finest heater
  In the buildin's het by steam
For the old-time chimbly corner
  Where the old-folks used to dream!

WAS A CANADIAN

And Therefore Could not Hold a Position in Uncle Sam's Domain.

Special to the Times.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Feb. 2.—A special to the Pioneer Press from Grand Forks, N. D., says: Early in December the Minto School Board engaged Professor Alexander McConnell, of Toronto, Canada, as principal of the public schools there. When the latter arrived to take charge of the schools he applied to County Supt. Woods for the required certificate of examination. The superintendent declined to grant the certificate on the ground that his employment was an infraction of the alien contract law.

McConnell subsequently took a State examination and received a State certificate, but a protest was made by Minto people, and the matter was referred to authorities at Washington. Wednesday McConnelly was arrested by Immigrant Inspector Ryford on a warrant issued by the Secretary of the Treasury, requiring the deportation of the school teacher to the country from which he came, and he was sent accross the Canadian border line. The affair has caused quite a commotion at Minto.

HOW TO KILL RATS.

An Ingenious Fakir Gathered in by the French Police

Paris, Feb. 2.—The French police have put a stop this week to a fraud which is so clever that the swindler almost deserved the harvest of France, which he has been steadily reaping. The man has been making the round of fairs and other gatherings, selling a rat powder which was perfecly harmless, but struck rats dead on the spot. In order to convince any skeptical man he first powdered a slice of bread with the stuff and ate a piece himself, and then put the remainder under a glass case in which was a rat. The rat ate the bread, and instantly fell dead. At ten cents the powder went like hot cakes. The police looked into the matter, and found that the powder was nothing but sugar. They also found that the glass was connected with a powerful electric battery, and the moment the rat touched the bread the current was turned on, thus killing the rodent. The man was sentenced to 15 days in jail.

STRONG CONDEMNATION.

The Proposal to Issue Twenty Millions C.P.R. Stock Censured.

Special to the Times.

LONDON, Feb. 2.—The Financial News, referring to the scheme to issue $20,000,000 of stock for the purpose of paralleling the western part of the Canadian Pacific Railway system, the interest to be guaranteed by the Canadian Government, says:—"It is a wildcat project, monstrous on the face of it, and condemned not only by Armstrong's connection with it, but also by the unfavorable condition which now influence Canadian railways. Canadian Pacific shareholders need not shake with fear, for the scheme will certainly never be realized."

WHITEWAY AGAIN IN POWER.

Newfoundland Shows Faith in His Ability in Affairs of State.

Special to the Times.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., Feb. 2.—Premier Greene's Cabinet resigned yesterday after about a month of office. It was the third Cabinet in a year. Sir William Whiteway is forming a new Cabinet which will probably consist of: Sir William Whiteway Premier; Robert Bond, Colonial Secretary; E. P. Morris, Attorney General; Hon. G. Emerson, Receiver-General; Hon. H. J. Woods, Surveyor-General, and A. W. Harvey, without a portfolio.

Whiteway caucuses oppose joining Canada but this objection will likely be over-ruled and a Royal Commission will not be objected to. The Imperial Government is announced to have offered $1,000 weekly to the relief fund. Nine-tenths of the business men are compromising with their creditors and the Government is being urged to prosecute the directors of the Union Bank.

Train Robbers Get Over $50.000 at One Crack.

Special to the Times.

TUCSON, Ariz., Feb. 2.—The daring bandits who held up the east-bound overland near Wilcox are still at large, and the whole southern part of the territory is being scoured for them. The amount taken from the through safe is not exactly known, but it is believed will exceed $50,000.

About $8,000 of the Mexican dollars have been recovered by the Wells-Fargo agent at Wilcox. A despatch from Tombstone says a posse is in hot pursuit of the bandits, whose trail leads north.

A Lighter Run Down by a Line Steamer This Morning.

Special to the Times.

NEW YORK, Feb. 2.—The Norwich line steamer City of Lowell, while entering her slip at pier 30, North river, this morning ran into the lighter Midas, loaded with 822 barrels of sugar and 200 bales of rags, and the lighter went down.

At the time of the accident Capt. Charles Olin, of the Midas, and several of the crew were aboard, but all escaped without injury. One side of the Midas was completely destroyed by the collision.

Uncle Tobias' Case Was Different.

"Twenty-five years ago," said the man in the mackintosh, "my Uncle Tobias, down in Macoupin county, made a vow he wouldn't cut his hair until General John I. Rinaker was elected governor of Illinois. He has kept it faithfully all these years, and he's a sight. I don't suppose you've ever seen a man that's a match for him in the matter of hair."

"I've seen nearly a dozen such men in my time," said the man with the goggles on. "There was a fellow named Howellton over in Missouri that vowed he wouldn't shave or cut his hair till John C. Fremont was elected president. He's alive yet and going around with hair and beard more than two feet long. Then there was"—

"I knew a man named Hughitt, down somewhere in Illinois," broke in the man in the slouch hat, "who made a vow of the same kind. When I saw him last, he had at least a peck of hair on his head. Over in Indiana"—

"I was well acquainted with a fellow of the name of Grimshaw, down in La Salle county," interrupted the man who had his feet on the table, "that registered on oath in 1869 he wouldn't cut his hair till Elizabeth Cady Stanton was elected president of the United States. He has a tangle on his head now that would fill a half bushel basket."

"You mean well, gentlemen," said the first speaker, "but none of those freaks you have mentioned can trot in the same class as my Uncle Tobias."

"I suppose his hair is about four feet long."

"That doesn't begin to describe him."

"Five feet!"

"You'll have to come again."

"Well, six feet, then. I've heard of one or two men with hair as long as that."

"You don't come anywhere near it."

"Confound it!" exclaimed the man in the baggy trousers, "how much hair has he got on his head anyhow?"

"Gentlemen," replied the man in the mackintosh, edging toward the door, "he's as bald as a glass marble."—Chicago Tribune.

If We Only Could See.

Our best acquaintance with the wonders of the visible universe must always be held provisional. The organ wherewith we are aware of it is an imperfect one, insensible to the colors beyond the red and the violet which certain insects appear to perceive. Light itself is nothing but a vibration of what we call, without understanding it, the ether, and sight is a sense easily deceived and of very feeble range. It is probable that only a slight exaltation of the power of the optic nerve would present the picture of the starry sky to us in a very different aspect.

To our vision the waste of space appears astounding, much as the Pacific ocean seems far too large for its archipelagoes. The boundless vault looks as though wasted in containing at such enormous intervals the tiny specks that are its worlds and suns. Would it wear anything like so open an aspect if we had better or different eyes? To see the stars at all it is necessary to wait for the darkness of night. To be aware of those crimson fountains of glory streaming into space from the sun we have to borrow the help of the moon's interposed disk.

Since all heavenly bodies exercise an influence, gravitatory and otherwise, upon all other bodies, it is conceivable that a kind of vision may hereafter exist to which their mutual contact and interaction would be perceptible. We see nothing now which is not of the nature to reflect upon our retinas or to project upon them those light waves of which alone our light sense can take any cognizance. The fish which dimly perceives a star through the water composed of oxygen and hydrogen is not in a much worse position for reliable astronomical observations than man, with his limited visual spectrum, at the bottom of his ocean of oxygen, nitrogen and the new gas.—Sir Edwin Arnold in North American Review.

Indian Bargains.

Indian travel is full of surprises, pleasant and otherwise. A gentleman, wishing to purchase some of the beautiful cashmere shawls which are made not far from Delhi, went to one of the largest establishments in the city. The merchant showed him a book in which were written recommendations of his goods by General Grant and his son as well as by many others.

Among the recommendations was this one in German: "I have bought shawls of this man and think I got them cheap, but do not offer him a third of what he asks."

The gentleman selected two very beautiful shawls and asked the price. The merchant, after a little consultation with his clerks, said:

"I have not sold a shawl to your party. I sell you very, very cheap. You may have these beautiful shawls for 1,400 rupees."

"Absurd! Let us go!" said the gentleman, having in mind the German's advice, and he started for the door.

"Don't go," said the merchant. "Make me an offer."

"I will give you 400 rupees for both shawls."

To his astonishment, the merchant replied:

"Take them. I will send them to your hotel."

At Jaipur the same traveler lodged in a hotel conducted by a native, but owned by the rajah. He found the following amusing notices posted in various places:

"If visitors are not satisfied with the food or cooking, they can deduct from the bill what they consider fair."

"Guests are requested not to strike the servants."

"Guests wishing ice are requested to give a day's notice and name how much they require."—Youth's Companion.

A portiere which is swished back and forth, pushed here, pulled there, by children or elders either, soon becomes a blemish rather than a decoration in a room unless it has been firmly hung and is frequently arranged.

If your husband shows a godless masculine fondness for sleeping over the breakfast hour on Sunday, you can probably break him of it by sending the children, one by one, to him for money for the contribution box.

In buying a new purse look well to the clasp, for if it is rough or sharp at the edges it will prove destructive to gloves. A purse with a rubber about it or that fastens inside is preferable on this account.

DOLL FURNITURE.

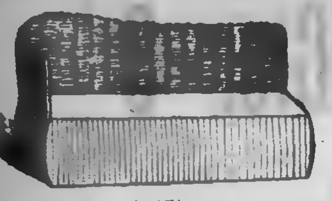
A child is happiest when he is busy, and the mother who can invent little pastimes and everyday amusements will greatly add to the happiness of the nursery. One of the most ingenious and at the same time one of the simplest and easiest amusements is the manufacture of cork furniture for dolly's housekeeping. The first thing to do is to collect a number of old corks. These may be of various styles and sizes, from the tiny stopper of the diminutive medicine vial to the large and ungainly cork of each two gallon vinegar-jug or the large flat mushroomlike cork of the marmalade jar.



A SOFA.

These will all come into request for the different styles and sizes of furniture, and the cook and housemaid should have instructions to lay them aside in a little box that they may afford material for the children's playhouse.

Perhaps the simplest article, and therefore the one on which the children should first try their skill, is the doll's chair. The cork can either be taken in its natural shape, in imitation of one of the old fashioned, round parlor chairs, or the sides can be trimmed into an almost cubical form. In either case the side of the cork and the top should be covered with small pieces of bright colored cloth, cut to the proper shape and size, and fastened down with a little mucilage or paste.

It is advisable to put on the circular or square piece of cloth for the seat first and then fasten the longer piece around the sides. Great care should be taken to have it fastened neatly with the gum. If the child possesses a box of paints, he can vary the style of his furniture by substituting a coat of paint for the cloth. And now to construct the chair back. This is done with pins, sticking them carefully into the back of the seat, arranging them to have the heads all even and as close together as possible.

Naturally, if your chair was left like this, the pins would come out more easily than if they were tied together. At this stage you will also need a good supply of some crochet cotton, which should be the same color as your cloth. Take the crochet cotton and wind it in and out of the pins, first securing the end to one of them.

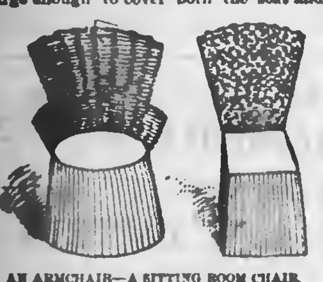
This gives you an ordinary sitting room chair. To make an armchair it is better to leave the cork in its natural round shape. The bottoms of the chairs must be quite flat, or else they will not stand properly. For the armchairs the pins must be put in a half circle. The thread is wound on the same way as on the other chairs. To make a sofa requires more time, and more difficult winding must be done. A long fresh cork must be used for the foundation.

Cut two slices, one larger than the other, off the two sides lengthways, and you will have a flat side for it to stand on, while the broader flat piece will form the seat of the sofa. Cut off a piece of cloth large enough to cover both the seat and side of the sofa and stick it on with gum, tucking in the corners neatly. Now get some small pins and stick them into one side of the seat and get some larger pips and put them at one end for the "head" of the lounge and wind the cotton in and out, as in the chairs.



AN ARMCHAIR—A SITTING ROOM CHAIR.

A little bed is made in much the same way as the sofa, covering it with cloth, but the pins must be put in at each end and not at the side.

To make a washstand the cork must be cut in half and the sides cut off, as in the bed and sofa. Cover it with cloth and stick a pin in each corner to serve as the legs.

By this time you will think of other things you can make out of cardboard and colored paper which will be quite pretty, and your dollhouse will be handsome enough for the most fastidious doll in dolldom.—Kindergarten in New York Mail and Express.

Little Milton and the Clock.

Little Milton, aged 4, inquired what time his grandma would get there. His mamma told him at 6 o'clock.

"Well, where will the hands of the clock be, then?" he asked.

His mamma pointed out the respective positions of the hands to indicate the sixth hour. Some time after the mother chanced to look at the clock and was surprised to find it all wrong. Remembering her conversation with Milton the Wise, she called him and inquired what had happened to the clock.

"Why, mamma," explained the boy, clapping his hands, and his eyes dancing with expectation, "I just run the hands around, so grandma would come right straight off!"

The same bright boy tells time in an entirely original way. He looks carefully at the clock and stretches out his little arms in the exact position of the hands. He will go to his mamma and say, "The little hand is here and the big hand is there." And so accurate is he in imitating that one can tell the time to a very few minutes.—Newark Call.

On His Hobby Horse.

From morning till evening a stout little man
Keeps riding to Nowhere as fast as he can.
He rides on a horse that he never can tire,
On a road that's kept warm by the nursery fire,
And when he arrives with the fairies he'll talk,
And in gardens of candies and gingerbread walk.
And that's why so briskly this stout little man
Keeps riding to Nowhere as fast as he can.

He Makes Some Interesting Statements.

Mr. James W. Davidson, who went with Lieut. Peary to the Artic regions, was recently interviewed, and made the following interesting statement:—

"Yes, indeed, I have not only heard of Paine's Celery Compound, but have used it, and have every reason to remember it. When I was selected by Lieut. Peary to accompany him on his trip to the artic regions to try to find the North Pole, it was partly because of my strong, healthy constitution, and his belief that I could endure the fatigue and danger incident to the trip. I had been associated with him as his business manager on his lecturing tour, and was on terms of the greatest intimacy with him.

"When the ship 'Falcon' left New York on her trip northward, it had among the stores, several cases of Paine's Celery Compound. The reputation of that medicine was so well established that it was the most natural thing in the world that the members of the party, and they comprised men from nearly every walk in life, from common sailors to men of science, should desire to use it.

"The record of our perilous trip to Camp Anniversary is too well known to need repetition. Once in camp we naturally took an inventory of our possessions, and I was exceedingly glad to find the Celery Compound. The medicine chest was open to all, and we were free to take from it what we thought was advisable. I, in company with several others, selected some of the Compound, taking a bottle of it to the cabin, knowing it would be handy when wanted. Nor was I mistaken, for the excessive cold weather soon had its effects, and I began to be troubled in a number of ways. In every case whenever I felt the slightest indisposition, I used the Compound, and of course found relief.

"One thing noticeable in the Arctic regions was that the cold weather made us all exceedingly nervous. We became irritable and cross. The slightest thing would cause angry words to spring to our lips, and it required the greatest care to guard against our ill-temper getting the best of us. We had to watch one another to avoid getting into a passion. Our nerves were all unstrung and naturally it affected our health. I talked the matter over with some of the others, and made up my mind that possibly the Celery Compound would be beneficial, for I knew that it was used for nervous disorders at home. Well, sir, we tried it, and I must say that it helped every one of us, so much so that I might say it was a peace-maker among us.

"When the long night of six months came on and we were in darkness, we found that the effects were very depressing. Imagine, if you can, living for six months in darkness, such as occurs here every night, and you can readily understand how we were situated. It is a wonder that some of us did not go mad. We had not very much to divert our attention, and the effect was something like solitary confinement in a dark cell.

"I have used Paine's Celery Compound for a dozen ills such as a person is liable to have at any time, and especially in this desolate country. It has always helped me and I should be pleased to have more of it should I go North again.

"I do not know of any one thing that I can speak more highly of than Celery Compound. It certainly is a great medicine, and I am an advocate of it."

Jumping Hurdles.

In jumping hurdles the one thing which is imperative is not to jump them. Hurdle racing has become entirely an artificial sport. It was discovered that, by taking off from one foot and landing on the other, and by covering the ten yards between each hurdle in three strides, the hurdles could be run over, instead of jumped, and it was also discovered that the man who couldn't perform this acrobatic feat was not in the same hunt with the man who could. A long jumper, with a turn of speed, has a much better chance of becoming a good hurdler than a high jumper. It is a pastime which requires much practice. You must harden your shins and keep as near to the top bar of the hurdle as you can. If you are clearing the hurdles by too much, you must practice leaving part of the skin of your leg on the top bar.

A famous hurdle racer, H. K. Upcher of Oxford, who, by assiduous practice, brought the surmounting—one could hardly call it the clearing—of hurdles to the highest point of perfection, was in the habit of bumping each hurdle in practice to make sure he was not going too high, and of going through the top rail when it was movable, and sometimes when it was not, in order to be quite certain that there was nothing unnecessary to spare.—Fortnightly Review.

The Smilax.

Do not imagine that this beautiful vine can be owned and enjoyed only by those who have an experienced gardener and expensive greenhouse. Almost any flower lover can add it to her window collection and thereby possess a vine that is universally admired and holds a higher place in public favor for decorative purposes than almost any other plant or vine known. The flowers, although fragrant, are small and rather insignificant. But the luxuriant masses of glossy foliage are as beautiful as showy blossoms and are unexcelled for bouquets, wreaths and other cut flower work, since sprays remain fresh and bright for hours after being cut from the main vine. The smilax is propagated by dividing the roots, which consist of numerous tubers united by a top, or crown, from which the vine grows; also from seed, but as these are slow to germinate much tiresome waiting will be avoided if good healthy plants are purchased from a reliable florist. It requires rich, sandy soil and plenty of light, but seems particularly adapted to those locations where direct sunshine is unobtainable at all times, as it will grow and thrive best when partially shaded.—Philadelphia Times.

Unnecessary.

Judge Brown, whose boyhood's home was in a small New England village, had and deserved the reputation of being a most liberal and kind hearted man. He was always glad to see his old friends, no matter how rustic they might seem, and gave them many good times in his beautiful city house.

On one occasion the judge had some legal business in the capital of his native state, and shortly after his arrival he met an old farmer from his birthplace who was taking an unwonted holiday and looked somewhat bewildered. The judge instantly invited the old man to dine with him at the hotel, and the invitation was gladly accepted.

When the farmer took his seat at the table, one of the waiters laid a bill of fare before him. The old man looked at it for a moment, and then, facing around to look the waiter squarely in the face, he said in a tone that rang through the dining room:

"No need to gimme that, young feller. Judge Brown cal'lates to settle my bill. He come from our town, and I know his ways!"

Little as the judge probably enjoyed this public announcement, he showed no annoyance, but nodded to the waiter, who removed the offending sheet, and the old man sat beaming with pride as the judge ordered a dinner to which he did full justice.—Youth's Companion.

Who Is the Owner?

The law of finding is not generally understood, but it was declared many years ago, and it is well to note the case and the decision. A visitor to a store found a wallet containing a sum of money. He handed the wallet, with its contents, to the merchant, to be returned to the owner. After three years, the owner having failed to appear, the finder demanded the wallet and the money from the merchant. The latter refused to deliver them on the ground that they were found on his premises. The finder then sued the shopkeeper. It was decided that against all the world but the owner the title of the finder is perfect. The receiver of an article found is only a trustee, first of the owner, then of the finder, if the owner does not appear. The receiver has no right to keep an article against the finder any more than the finder has to keep it against the owner.

Ex-Mayor O'Connor Banqueted.

Sudbury, Feb. 4.—Special.—On Monday evening a complimentary banquet was tendered by the citizens of Sudbury to the ex-Mayor O'Connor. Over 70 persons, including the most prominent citizens of the town, attended the banquet, which was eminently successful. Mr. O'Connor was heartily applauded when, in a happy speech, he responded to the toast of his health, and many kind and happy words were spoken of him by the other speakers of the evening.

Sir Mackenzie Bowell put up at the Chateau Frontenac, where he was visited by a great number of politicians. He is affected with a slight throat affection. His visit to Quebec has no political bearing.

SLAIN WITH A HATCHET.

A WOMAN AND HER PARAMOUR PARTNERS IN A DARK DEED.

A Canadian the Assassin—Dr. Elliott Pope of Detroit Foully Murdered in His Chair—A Life Insurance Conspiracy.

Special to the Times.

DETROIT, Feb. 4.—One of the most atrocious and horrible crimes ever committed in Michigan was perpetrated in a room on the second floor of No. 88 Michigan avenue at an early hour this morning. Dr. Elliott Pope was murdered and the police have collected a large amount of evidence tending to show that the crime was premeditated with fiendish aforethought for the purpose of realizing something like nine thousand dollars insurance on the doctor's life. The details of the crime are terrible, and if the theory of the police is proven true, no two more devils in human form can exist than Mrs. Pope and one Wm. Brusseau.

THE CRIMINAL'S CONFESSION.

The latter confesses that he committed the murder and there is plenty of testimony to indicate that he was the paramour of Mrs. Pope and that she had deliberately and for a long time past endeavored to get her husband to place as heavy an insurance upon his life as could be done. Taking all into consideration, the police are strongly inclined to believe, in spite of the murderer's protest that Dr. Pope was murdered while sleeping quietly in his chair. The absence of any signs of a struggle and the peaceful undisturbed expression upon the dead man's face, go to show that very likely a swift blow from the fatal hatches sent him to the other world without awakening him. Murderer Brusseau was interviewed in his cell at the Central Station and gave

which bears the impression of careful preparation. This presumption is warranted by the fact that Bessie Pope, the eight year old daughter of the dead man, gives a portion of the same details and appears to have been instructed. The prisoner talked in a disconnected way about the events of the past year, but when asked to give an explanation of what happened this morning, he said: "About 3 o'clock this morning I saw Dr. Pope come into my room. He had a revolver in his hand, and I was afraid of him, because he is a dead shot. He held the revolver out straight, and when he saw I was awake he went out into the other room, where Mrs. Pope sleeps. and the next thing I heard was a sort of a strugle and got up and looked out. I saw Pope bending over Mrs. Pope, and he had a pillow over her head and

WAS SMOTHERING HER.

I rushed out of my room and attacked him and began trying to push him back, but he aimed his revolver at me and fired. During the afternoon it got cold in the house and I went down stairs and got some kindling wood and brought up the hatchet to split it with. I remember having laid it on the sewing machine and I managed to reach it. Then I pushed Pope back until he struck the chair and sat down. Then I hit him over the head; I don't know how many times. When I realized what I had done I ran out and got a policeman and that was all there was of it." To all further questions Brusseau replied that he had told everything, except that his age is 22, and he came to Detroit from Tilbury, Ont., where he was a farmer. Pope was between 44 and 45 years old. He was a Canadian by birth; was graduated from the Boston Dental College in 1875, and a year later he took his degree of M.D. from the University of California. He came to Detroit 10 or 12 years ago. Mrs. Pope is a mammoth, raw boned woman, 6 feet 2 inches in height. She claims to have been an invalid for the past year. She is apparently about 38 or 40 years old, and previous to her marriage lived near Ingersoll, Ont. Her maiden name was Nellie Mitchell, and she was married to Pope something like a dozen years ago. In her conversation with the detectives today she seemed to be concealing something that she knew about the tragedy.

LOCAL AND DISTRICT HAPPENINGS OF THE DAY.

The Weather.

Promotion Examinations.

THE TIMES publishes this morning a complete list of the pupils who successfully passed in the public school promotion examinations. The complete results appear this morning for the first time in print.

Band Concert Tonight.

There has been a splendid program arranged for the Salvation Army Band Concert tonight. Carlos Green, the boy Euphonium Soloist will give a solo, accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Braund. This is worth hearing.

Events in Brief.

A sale of books and papers of the Mechanics' Institute was held last night, there being present a large number of members. The sale was highly satisfactory. The Hall Trust met yesterday afternoon and transacted routine business.

Their Inaugural Meeting.

The Board of Health held its inaugural meeting in the Council Chambers yesterday afternoon. Mr. J. J. Hartley was re-elected chairman for the year. There was very little business done, consisting chiefly of an informal discussion of health matters in general.

Dr. Ryerson Coming.

Dr. G. S. Ryerson, the well-known eye, ear and throat specialist, of Toronto, will be at the Grand Central hotel on Saturday, February 16, where he may be consulted by those suffering from any affliction of these organs. Remember the date, Saturday, February 16th.

An Orderly Gathering.

The several hundred citizens who gathered in the Council chambers last night, to listen to the deliberations of the Council, conducted themselves in a highly commendable and orderly manner. Only once did the crowd evince its disapproval in silence, and this was when Councillor Dawson eulogized the police force. The Mayor's timely admonition was rigidly respected during the balance of the session. The breaking of the glass in the entrance door was an accident and not an intentional act.

It Will Be a Boon.

The last issue of the Canada Gazette contains a notice of application for the incorporation of the "Peterborough and Chemong Park Railway" (Ltd.) The notice states the object of the company as follows: The object for which such an incorporation is sought is to construct and operate an electric railway in the township of Smith, in the County of Peterborough, from the Town of Peterborough to Chemong Park and also in any other municipalities in the said County of Peterborough that may be found desirable. The proposed capital stock of the Company is $100,000, divided into one thousand shares of $100 each. The applicants are James Kendry, of the Town of Peterborough, woollen manufacturer; Thomas Cahill, of the same place, esquire; George Walford Hatton, of the same place, solicitor; Robert Fair, of the same place, merchant; and Thomas Alexander Stewart Hay, of the same place, civil engineer, all of whom are to be the first Directors of the Company." It is very gratifying to know that an enterprise which has been talked of for a long time has at last taken that tangible shape that augurs for it immediate consummation. The construction of this road will connect Peterborough with one of the prettiest summer resorts and breathing spaces in Ontario, and render it possible for citizens to spend the hot summer evenings at this pretty and delightful retreat—a boon that is much to be desired. It is to be hoped that nothing will prevent the immediate construction and completion of the proposed electric line.

A Metal Breadboard

THE WOMAN WHO HAS BEEN USED to kneading dough on the old fashioned wooden breadboard knows what a bother it is to get them clean and how cumbersome and heavy they are. When they begin to crack or check it is almost impossible to thoroughly cleanse them, and they may easily become dangerous conveyances of disease. It was left for a woman, of course, to remedy this state of affairs, and Mrs. M. M. Everhard, of St. Joseph, Mich., has patented a metal bread board, which is one of the greatest labor-savers imaginable. It is light, does not absorb grease, dough does not adhere to it, and while it possesses all the advantages of the marble bread-board it is much cheaper and, of course, far lighter and easier to handle. If readers want to confer a favor upon their wives that will be forever appreciated, let them send $1 to the manufacturers, 101 Bay street, Toronto, for one of these boards.

A SUSPECTED MURDER.

AN UNKNOWN COUPLE SAID TO BE GUILTY OF A HORRIBLE CRIME.

Human Bones Found in the Ashes of Two Strangers' Camp—Captain Gordon's Version of the Sinking of the Elbe.

Special to the Times.

BERLIN, Ont., Feb. 5.—Considerable excitement prevails in the northern part of the riding, and the people of the village of Linwood and vicinity are at present in a feverish state of mind. Saturday afternoon two strangers, a man and a woman, were seen passing through the village, accompanied by a child, travelling in a southerly direction, till finally they were observed to enter the woods about two miles from the village, where a fire was kindled, it being a very cold night. Here they remained for some time, when they left and wended their way to a farmer's by the name of John Wilcox, on the 13th line, where they sought and obtained shelter. It now transpires that the child was not with them after they left the bush, and a search was instituted, with the result that what appears to be part of human bones were found in the ashes where the fire had been kindled. Acting on this circumstantial evidence, the village constable was ordered out and is now tracing the fugitives in order that a solution may be effected.

CAPTAIN GORDON'S VERSION.

ABERDEEN, Feb. 5.—The owner of the steamer Crathie, which sunk the North German Lloyd steamship Elbe, has returned here from Rotterdam. He says that the statement made by Captain Gordon of the Crathie to the underwriters, was that the collision so seriously damaged the Crathie's bows, and the wreckage consisting of a large derrick and two anchors dangling in dangerous positions over the side, threatening to pound holes in her—that when he signalled to the large vessel the steamer had run into and received a reply, he believed that the latter was standing by him, and, consequently, Captain Gordon took steps to repair the damage done to his vessel. Still, according to the owner of the Crathie, Captain Gordon added that the big steamer lay to for some time and then proceeded in the direction of London. The Crathie, her commander also stated, remained in the vicinity of the place where the collision occurred until daybreak.

A DAILY OCCURRENCE.

Another Gang of Train Robbers Satisfy Their Greed for Gold.

Special to the Times.

PUEBLO, Col., Feb. 5.—The western express on the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe road, train No. 1, bound for Colorado and California, was held up one mile west of Sylvia, Reno County, Kansas, at 11.25 o'clock last night by four masked men who signalled danger. Two of the robbers covered the engineer and fireman and two went to the express car.

For some reason they failed to effect an entrance, and then went to the coaches and made the passengers give up all their valuables. The train was held for an hour and ten minutes by the robbers, who then rode south. Conductor McGrath ran the train back to Sylvia and gave the alarm, and Sheriff Patton was on the trail with his posse in a few minutes.

SERIOUS FIRE IN QUEBEC.

Railway Bridges in Danger—The Blaze Started in a Sawmill.

Special to the Times.

FARNHAM, Que., Feb. 5.—W. L. Hibbard's sawmill was destroyed at noon today by fire. J. R. Smith's furniture shop was in the same building, also the plant of the electric light company. The whole building is a total loss. The wind was so high that it burnt in a very short time, and nothing of any consequence could be saved. Loss about $6,000.

The Canadian Pacific bridge of the St. Hyacinthe branch near the building is now on fire and there is danger of its being totally destroyed. The Central Vermont R. R. bridge as well as the Water works buildings are also in imminent danger at present writing.

TO BE TOLD UNDER OATH.

The Stories of the Survivors of the Elbe Disaster in the North Sea.

Special to The Times.

LOWESTOFT, Feb. 5.—A mail bag marked "No. 1," belonging to the steamship Elbe, was found off Southwold this morning. An inquest upon the remains of Friedrich Ernst, of Madgeburg, Prussia, the drowned passenger of the Elbe whose body was landed here yesterday by the fishing smack Verona, was opened here this morning.

The coroner swore in a special jury and announced his intention of traversing all the facts in the case. The inquest was then adjourned until Feb. 28. The coroner is communicating with all the parties interested in the disaster.

BRUSSEAU FINDS HIS TONGUE.

And Tells Unsavory Stories of Mrs. Pope—Is He Crazy?

Special to The Times.

DETROIT, Feb. 5.—William Brusseau spent three hours last night confessing to Detective Sergeant Baker and Detective Sadler. He seems to be mentally wrecked, possibly from the effect of the deed. He says the body lay in the chair when Mrs. Pope awakened him and that she must have committed the murder.

Brusseau says Mrs. Pope made six attempts on her husband's life by means of coal gas. Then she decided to cut his throat or shoot him in such a way as to indicate suicide. The past six weeks she had been studying out some definite way of doing the deed which was performed on Saturday morning.

ROYAL WELCOME HOME

To the Princess of Wales—The People Cheer Lustily.

Special to the Times.

LONDON, Feb. 5.—The Princess of Wales returned to London this morning, having been absent in Russia and Denmark since a short time prior to the death of Czar Alexander III. Her Royal Highness was met at the Charing Cross station by the Prince of Wales, her daughters, the Princesses Victoria and Maude, the Duke and Duchess of York, the Duke and Duchess of Fife and a number of other relatives and friends. The Princess was heartily cheered by the large crowd of people who had assembled at the station.

CAN'T RUN CARS.

Franchises Suspended—Brooklyn Aldermen Revoke Grants to Trolley Railroad Companies. A Little Riot—Police Act Violently.

Special to the Times.

BROOKLYN, Feb. 5.—At 1.40 p. m. yesterday a crowd of several hundred strikers, who had assembled at Mugges' Hall on Bridge street, marched down to the City Hall. When the crowd, augmented by the men from the streets, reached City Hall Square there were about 2,000 persons in it. The police soon dispersed it. Martin J. Connolly and Andrew Collins, of the strikers' committee, arrived at the City Hall at 2.30 p. m. and presented a petition to the Council which requested the Board of Aldermen and the Mayor to immediately revoke and repeal the license and franchise to build and operate electric street railways which has been granted to the Brooklyn Heights, Atlantic Avenue & Brooklyn, and Queen's County & Suburban Railway Companies. A resolution to carry out this project was also presented. After the regular business of the board, Ald. Walsh presented a long preamble reciting how the original grant to the railroads to use horse power was made, and the latter one of Jan. 11th, 1893, to change to electricity, and ending with a resolution to revoke both grants. The resolution, after a short discussion, was adopted by a vote of ten to eight.

While the crowd was waiting about the streets adjacent to City Hall Square at 2.30 p.m. there was a collision between a trolley car and a baker's wagon on Fulton street just above Smith. The collision caused a blockade of cars and a tangle of vehicles of all kinds. The strikers improved the opportunity to assault Hugh O'Rourke, the motorman of the car. He was struck on the head with the key of the car, which was wrenched from his hand. He was knocked down and badly bruised. The police, arriving from the City Hall, rescued him from the mob and a patrol waggon took him to the First Precinct Station House, where his injuries were found to be so serious that he was taken to the City hospital in an ambulance. This affair occurred in the heart of the shopping district, and the police caused some consternation by riding their horses upon the sidewalks in their efforts to disperse the crowd. Women and children ran into the stores. One man in the crowd, who, when told to move on, replied, "I am moving as fast as I can," was struck twice on the head by an officer. He was taken to the station house, where two scalp wounds were dressed by the surgeon. The man gave his name as Michael Moore. He was placed under arrest. Judge Gaynor granted an alternative writ of mandamus against the Atlantic Avenue Railroad Company at 3 p.m. today. A peremptory writ was applied for last Friday.

THIRTY KILLED.

Wholesale Slaughter of Miners by the Explosion of Fire Damp.

Special to the Times.

PARIS, Feb. 5.—An explosion of fire damp has occurred at Montceau les Mines, in the Department of Saone et-Loire. Thirty miners are reported to have been killed.

The bodies of 21 of the dead miners have been taken out of the pit at Montceau-les-Mines, and eight have been taken out alive. All of the latter are injured. President Faure has donated 2,000 francs toward the relief of the families of the miners.

A VICTIM OF THE MAFIA.

AN ITALIAN BUTCHER SHOT DOWN BY A COUNTRYMAN.

Whole Family Wiped Out by Fire—Five Perished in the Flames—Attempted Suicide Over His Wife's Coffin.

Special to the Times.

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—Francisco Barcia, a butcher, was shot down a few feet away from his own door late this evening. The murderer, Francesco Carsalta, is a barber. The men had quarrelled and the immediate cause of the fight between them is plain, but the ominous word "Mafia" went around among the loungers in the city and saloons of the neighborhood as the policemen left the scene of the murder with Carsalta. The opinion seemed general that the murder was the result of a carefully arranged plot, although there is no direct evidence to substantiate the belief. It is remarkable that the police have been unable to obtain a single adult witness who will state that he saw Carsalta do the shooting, and there is only the haziest notion as to the subject of the quarrel that led to the crime. A dozen men were present all the time but either they pretend to have turned their heads away as the shot was fired or their identity cannot be sufficiently established to warrant their being held as witnesses. Three or four children positively identify Carsalta as the murderer and their evidence is sufficient to dispel all doubt as to his guilt. Why Carsalta should have left his place of business to go down town with a revolver and provoke a quarrel is a mystery which the police will endeavor to solve.

PERISHED IN THE FIRE.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Feb. 5.—Word was received here tonight of the burning of the residence of Wilbert H. Fenton at Port Republic, and the probable death of Mr. Fenton, his wife and three children. The fire occurred at two o'clock this morning and none of the inmates were seen to leave the burning dwelling, and as they have not been found since, fears are entertained that they perished in the flames.

A SAD SCENE.

FRANKLIN, Feb. 5.—John Bell went to the third ward chapel this afternoon to attend the funeral of his wife. While the services were in progress he became insane and attempted to commit suicide over the coffin by cutting his throat with a razor. There was intense excitement in the church. A dozen women fainted and several were injured in the panic that ensued. Bell was restrained from killing himself by men who were near him, and the funeral services were proceeded with.

A Canadian Lothario.

ARCADE, N. Y., Feb. 5.—The daughter of Lawyer Knight, of this village, has eloped with Alfred Kent. Kent is a Canadian by birth, and it is supposed that they are spending their honeymoon with his family in Canada. Miss Knight is about 22 years of age, very handsome, and one of the leading society women in Arcade. Kent is about 27 years of age and came here from Canada about five years ago. He is a man of excellent character, well educated and a leader in society. He was employed by Messrs. W. Wade & Sons, of this place, as a travelling salesman.

FURTHER PARTICULARS OF THE TRAGIC DEATH OF A CITIZEN.

From Our Own Correspondent.

TORONTO, Feb. 5.—Further particulars have been received from New York regarding the tragic death of Mr. Emanuel Samuel, who was killed by a fall from a third story window of the apartment house at No. 171 West Seventy-eight street.

Mr. Samuel who had long been suffering from a nevous disorder had been under treatment for several days and was in the care of Dr. Harry P. Loomis. He felt much better yesterday afternoon and went out for a walk, returning in a few hours.

On his return he seemed tired and went immediately to his room, where he was presently joined by Mrs. Jacobs and her young daughter. The three sat together for some time chatting. Mr. Samuel occupied a chair near the low-silled window, which overlooks the air shaft between Nos. 169 and 171 West Seventy-eight street.

It was only a few minutes after their departure that Mr. Samuel fell from the window. He struck against the ledge of the window of the floor below and fell thence to the flagging at the bottom.

He was picked up as quickly as possible and conveyed back to his room, where he was attended by Dr. Charles Good, of No. 173 West Seventy-eighth street. Mr. Samuel was conscious, but unable to give any account of how the accident occurred. He died in two hours from internal hemorrhage.

The deceased married a daughter of Maurice Jacobs, of New York, about nineteen years ago, but had been a widower for a long time.

One account says when he came to the window opening into the airshaft, the sill of which reaches only to about the middle of a middle-sized man's thigh, he opened it, and, grasping the lace curtains on each side, leaned forward and looked out. According to the physician who attended him after the accident, he was probably seized with dizziness and fell, carrying the curtains with him. A few minutes later his sister-in-law, Miss Jacobs, on coming into the room noticed the torn hangings, and, seeing Mr. Samuel at the bottom of the airshaft, gave an alarm.

THE M'CREADY BURGLARY.

A year ago R. A. McCready's store, 149 Yonge street, was broken into. A window was smashed and a number of rifles, revolvers and razors stolen. This was not done without damage to the thieves, as was evidenced by the presence of blood all over the place.

Two days afterwards Walker Johnston pawned a Winchester rifle at 29 Queen street west. His hands were bleeding and bandaged at the time. He also sold two new razors to William Zeigle, after which he went to Montreal and thence to New York and Chicago.

He returned from the latter place a week ago, and was promptly arrested charged with the burglary. He appeared in court this morning, pleaded not guilty, and after the above evidence was adduced secured a remand for a week in order to produce witnesses who could account for some scars which are on his right hand.

THAT GREEN GOODS DEAL.

W. H. Orser related in the Police Court this morning how he had fallen among thieves the day before Christmas when searching for green goods. His search led him into J. O. Wood's drug store on York street, where in return for $190 he got experience and two packages of worthless paper from an unknown "Long Taw" with pompadour hair, and Hugh Barry.

These worthies wanted to make him swear that he would not open the package until he was 60 miles away. He did not swear then, but he did when he reached the Metropole hotel and found that he had been made a recipient of brown paper only.

Hugh Barry was sent down for 30 days with hard labor for his share in the affair, and John O. Wood was committed for trial.

SNEAK THIEVES AT 'VARSITY.

Sneak thieves have been busy at University College of late. A watch was set, and this morning a batch of youthful thieves appeared in the Police Court. John Hicks was charged with stealing gloves from a student named James A. McKinley. He pleaded not guilty and was remanded for a week.

Edward Smith and Arthur Scott were arraigned on a charge of stealing a silver watch chain, locket and medal from the pocket of Frank Kirkwood, a student, who left his things in his locker in the gymnasium. Smith pleaded guilty, and Scott was found guilty. Both were remanded for sentence.

A CHARGE OF THEFT.

Mrs. Julia Alma was charged in the Police Court with stealing articles from the Metropole hotel.

The goods, which are her own property, with withheld from her by the proprietor, Mr. Dutton, and recovered by Mrs. Alma by what are alleged to be illegal means.

Mrs. Alma pleaded not guilty and was remanded until Wednesday.

Ladies and Gentlemen Play Hockey.

BARRIE, Feb. 5.—Great enthusiasm was noticeable in the hockey match this afternoon between the ladies and gentlemen, the latter coming out victorous. The lady players were Mrs. J. C. Morgan, Mrs. Creswicke, Miss Hornsby, Miss Stewart, Miss Kortright, Miss Holmes and Mrs. Redditt. Gentlemen—Judge Boys, Capt. Whish, H. H. Morris, J. McL. Stevenson, Attorney Colter, J. Strathy and Dr. McCarthy. Referee—W. A. Boys.

Non-Union Rioters.

WHEELING, W. Va., Feb. 5.—All of the non-union employees of the Buckeye Glass Works were arrested this morning on warrants sworn out by union men charging riot as a result of the shooting several days ago. This morning an attempt to assassinate Manager Humphreys of the works was made by an unknown man, two shots whizzing by Humphrey's head.

Adam Gowan, Tweed, Dead.

BELLEVILLE, Feb. 5.—Adam McGowan, carriage manufacturer, Tweed, died yesterday, aged 55 years. He had been ailing for several months. He married a daughter of Alex. Coulter, of Hungerford, who, with three children, survive him. Mr. McGowan was for many years the first deputy reeve of Hungerford, and was Tweed's first reeve. He was a Methodist, a Mason, an Orangeman, and a Conservative.

The Times.

PETERBOROUGH, FEBRUARY 4, 1895.

Good morning!

Many of the towns and cities around us are curtailing expenses by cutting down salaries and reducing the number of civic employees. Peterborough should do likewise.

J. Sloat Fassett is authority for the statement that over 100,000 citizens of New York purposely refrain from voting in order to keep their names of the polling lists from which jury lists are made up.

It is said that the Empire's issue of today will be the final one, the people being absorbed by the Mail. It is to be hoped that the latter journal will profit by the amalgamation. If it dosen't it Mail live to repent it.

The Toronto Electric Light Company averred that it was making little or nothing on its civic contract, then reduced its tender by over $30 per lamp, and now is fighting desperately to secure the contract at the lower figure.

In the discussion which took place at Council meeting on Monday evening over a rearrangement of the town officials, with a view to a more economical as well as a better service, it is safe to say that nearly every ratepayer in the room—and there were hundreds present—was in favor of a change. When Councillor Dawson attempted to defend Chief Roszel, a tornado of hisses greeted him. On the contrary, when speakers in favor of reform were heard the applauses was universal.

When an ordinary individual chops down a tree, the world is unconcerned, but when Gladstone does it matters are different. The New Age tells the story of one occasion when Gladstone's attack on a stately trunk was watched by a large concourse of people including a number of cheap trippers. When the tree had fallen and the Prime Minister and some of his family who were with him were moving away there was a rush for the chips. One of the trippers secured a big piece and exclaimed: "Hey, lads, when I dee this shall go in my coffin!" Then cried his wife, a shrewd, motherly old woman with a merry twinkle in her eye: "Sam, my lad, if thou'd worship God as thou worships Gladstone, thou'd stand a better chance of going where thy chip wouldn't burn!"

Councillor Stone will have some difficulty in squaring himself with his friends in the council and throughout the town on account of the way he mutilated the report of the Committee on appointments which was presented to the Council on Monday evening. The Committee agreed to declare certain offices vacant, in a lump as it were, with the distinct understanding that the report was to go in in that form. Mr. Stone fixed it differently. It was divided into clauses, so that each official would be dealth with separately. Mr. Sproule, who moved the resolution in committee, naturally became indignant, and accused Mr. Stone of not carrying out the intention of committee, to which the latter made a lame excuse. All of which goes to prove the desperate straits which the opponents of an economical local government are put to. But the end is not yet.

THE SITUATION IN OTTAWA.

At present all things do not seem to be "couleur de rose" with the Conservative party in Ottawa.

Ever since the last federal by-election, when Sir James Grant was elected to succeed Lieut. Governor Mackintosh, there has been a steady determination on the part of the Junior wing of the party to make things felt in all future contests.

The last local elections carried a split between the old and young elements, the young men supporting the party's nominee while the old men went over in a body to the Liberal ranks, and the last general meeting of the Conservative Association, at which the Junior Conservatives captured all the offices, only accentuated the feeling of friction prevailing.

So bitter was the war between the two sections that the older wing threatened not to recognize the present executive and to elect officers on their own account.

This action was averted by the judicious forethought of Mr. Askwith, the new president, but now that the general elections are approaching, danger looms again in sight. The old wing of the party desires to run and English speaking Protestant and a French Canadian Catholic; the younger section are loud in declaring that it is their turn and their nominees must be selected. And a large portion of them say that under no circumstances will they vote for any of the French Canadians whose names have been so far put forward, and that in any event it is only fair that an English Catholic candidate should be selected this time.

Already a dbcided boom in favor of Mr. Taylor McVeity, barrister, as the representative of the Protestant section, and of Mr. John O'Meara, Reeve of Hintonburgh, and an old resident of Peterborough, as the Catholic nominee, has been inaugurated. If, as the chances are, both these gentlemen seek nomination, and a French Canadian and another English Protestant be also put forward, matters will prove decidedly interesting. Both sections are determined and both are equally strong.

It is pretty well understood that convention or no convention the Junior Conservatives are determined to run the man of their choice.

They claim and with justice, that they do all the hard work of the party and are entitled to a fair share of the representation.

VANITY FAIR.

Ward McAllister who died in New York the other day was the leader of New York's smart set known vulgarly as "the 400," Mr. McAllister having on one occasion in a newspaper interview limited the society people of New York to that number. Mr. McAllister was not a man of means or unusual ability in any direction. He was, on the contrary, a harmless, good-natured ass who devoted himself to organizing society entertainments, arranging cotillions and looking after things of that sort. He was a valuable assistant to society people with more money than wits, and he was also a perpetual source of unholy mirth to the great unwashed. And so he lived and died.

The newspapers made McAllister famous. He had lived in New York for a long while and was quite as conspicious a figure in the social world years before the newspapers began writing him up. As soon as the papers took hold of him, however, his name became known from one end of the country to the other. His dress, his appearance, his manner of speech, his sayings and his doings were written about by the yard, and to cap it all a sensational Sunday newspaper hired him to write a weekly letter on society matters over his own signature. This was followed by a book "called Society as I Have Found It." The weekly letters and the book were perhaps the most arrant rot ever seen in print. They were ungrammatical, trivial and absurd, and Mr. McAllister accomplished nothing more by them than writing himself down as an ass.

This was the type of man who was the acknowledged leader of New York society, the official representative, one might say, of the imperial wealth and culture of the metropolis of the United States of America! It would be ungenerous to say that the birds that flocked with him were all of one feather, but it is at least suggestive that they should consent to remain contentedly under the shelter of his wing. When a society of unlimited possibilities, a society that might do so much to beautify and improve the world, massed itself under the leadership of a man who could only succeed in making it and himself subjects for ridicule and satire, it is not to be wondered at if people generally regard the 400 as a pack of capering vulgar ostentatious fools.

SLAIN WITH A HATCHET.

DETROIT, Feb. 4.—One of the most atrocious and horrible crimes ever committed in Michigan was perpetrated in a room on the second floor of No. 88 Michigan avenue at an early hour this morning. Dr. Elliott Pope was murdered and the police have collected a large amount of evidence tending to show that the crime was premeditated with fiendish aforethought for the purpose of realising something like nine thousand dollars insurance on the doctor's life. The details of the crime are terrible, and if the theory of the police is proven true, no two more devils in human form can exist than Mrs. Pope and one Wm. Brusseau.

THE CRIMINAL'S CONFESSION.

The latter confesses that he committed the murder and there is plenty of testimony to indicate that he was the paramour of Mrs. Pope and that she had deliberately and for a long time past endeavored to get her husband to place as heavy an insurance upon his life as could be done. Taking all into consideration, the police are strongly inclined to believe, in spite of the murderer's protest that Dr. Pope was murdered while sleeping quietly in his chair. The absence of any signs of a struggle and the peaceful undisturbed expression upon the dead man's face, go to show that very likely a swift blow from the fatal hatchet sent him to the other world without awakening him. Murderer Brusseau was interviewed in his cell at the Central Station and gave

which bears the impression of careful preparation. This presumption is warranted by the fact that Eunice Pope, the eight year old daughter of the dead man, gives a portion of the same details and appears to have been instructed. The prisoner talked in a disconnected way about the events of the past year, but when asked to give an explanation of what happened this morning, he said: "About 3 o'clock this morning I saw Dr. Pope come into my room. He had a revolver in his hand, and I was afraid of him, because he is a dead shot. He held the revolver out straight, and when he saw I was awake he went out into the other room, where Mrs. Pope sleeps, and the next thing I heard was a sort of a strugle and got up and looked out. I saw Pope bending over Mrs. Pope, and he had a pillow over her head and

WAS SMOTHERING HER.

I rushed out of my room and attacked him and began trying to push him back, but he aimed his revolver at me and fired. During the afternoon it got cold in the house and I went down stairs and got some kindling wood and brought up the hatchet to split it with. I remember having laid it on the sewing machine and I managed to reach it. Then I pushed Pope back until he struck the chair and sat down. Then I hit him over the head; I don't know how many times. When I realized what I had done I ran out and got a policeman and that was all there was of it." To all further questions Brusseau replied that he had told everything, except that his age is 22, and he came to Detroit from Tilbury, Ont., where he was a farmer. Pope was between 44 and 45 years old. He was a Canadian by birth; was graduated from the Boston Dental College in 1875, and a year later he took his degree of M.D. from the University of California. He came to Detroit 10 or 12 years ago. Mrs. Pope is a mammoth, raw boned woman, 6 feet 2 inches in height. She claims to have been an invalid for the past year. She is apparently about 38 or 40 years old, and previous to her marriage lived near Ingersoll, Ont. Her maiden name was Nellie Mitchell, and she was married to Pope something like a dozen years ago. In her conversation with the detectives today she seemed to be concealing something that she knew about the tragedy.

RENTING TYPEWRITERS.

The Business Is Profitable, Although Many of the Machines Are Stolen.

There are probably a dozen places in this city where the business of renting new and secondhand typewriters is carried on. Most of these concerns do an excellent business, and many of their lists of machines out on rental average from 150 to 200 names. Nearly all the machines rented are those of a high grade which have been tested by experience in business offices and in shorthand schools.

A strictly new typewriter seldom rents for less than $5 a month, while one that is only slightly damaged brings $4 a month. A machine that can be hired for $3 is considered fit for only a "plug" operator, and such typewriters are rented rarely.

There are upward of 70 shorthand and typewriting schools regularly conducted in this city, with classes of from 10 to 200 students. This does not include the public day and evening schools, numerous public libraries and general educational institutions where such things are taught and scores of private instructors all over the city. Typewriter manufacturers in many instances supply schools with complete outfits of their own machines free of charge as a means of increasing the number of operators thereon, for as soon as a graduate obtains employment he naturally prefers the same kind of typewriter he has used at school. Some operators have to provide machines for themselves. A large number begin by renting a machine, proposing to buy later. Frequently they fail to do so, and the books of a Barclay street house which derives a handsome monthly income from rents of machines show that it is a common occurrence for twice the value of a typewriter to be paid in monthly rentals.

It is not customary for these dealers to require security for the return of a typewriter other than a written agreement stipulating that it shall be delivered to the owners at the expiration of the period of rental in as good condition as when first received, barring the effect of ordinary usage. Hence it is not surprising that typewriter thieves are very common.

"Stealing a typewriter," said the man who looks after the rental department of a large typewriter house in Broadway, "is grand larceny and a state prison offense, yet this and the further fact that an immense number of these culprits have already been sent to penitentiaries in different states do not deter dozens of others every month from making like thefts. We have a standing list of from 100 to 200 typewriters that have been stolen from our branch offices and agents in various sections of the country. Every typewriter has its own number, which cannot be effaced, and whenever we hear that a machine is missing we immediately communicate its number to our representatives in this country and abroad, with instructions to seize the machine when found and to prosecute the person holding it. It is only a matter of time when any typewriter will need adjusting and repairing and will be taken to a repairer, and then the thief is easily apprehended. Thus we actually lose few or no machines."—New York Sun.

Railroad Speed.

In high speeds the United States seems just now to hold the world's records. Neither England nor any other country in the world has any trains as fast, for the distance, as the Empire State express, which runs 440 miles at 50.7 miles an hour, including four stops, or as fast for the distance as the defunct exposition flier of last summer, which ran 964 miles at 48.2 miles an hour, including nine stops.

Among the very fast special runs we find the following pretty authentic records of performances in the United States, which, so far as I know, have not been equaled in England since a run made on the Great Western, in 1848, of 53 miles at 68 miles an hour, and that was not up to the best of those given here: September, 1891, on the New York Central, New York to East Buffalo, 436 miles, at 59.6 miles an hour, including three stops; 1892, same railroad, 21¼ miles at the rate of 72.7 miles an hour, no stops; Pennsylvania railroad, 1891, Jersey City to Washington, 227 miles, 54.3 miles an hour, two stops; New York Central, 1893, 80.4 miles at 68.5 miles an hour, no stops.—Scribner's Magazine.

Diamond Coated Boots.

Everybody has remarked that the matter applied to boots and shoes—viz, blacking—is a dull, blue black substance entirely devoid of gloss, but when the leather thus coated is rubbed over with a dry brush the boot begins to shine like a bright luminary. What is the cause of this strange phenomenon is a question which naturally presents itself to every well regulated mind. The diamond, as everybody knows and as recent experiments have abundantly proved, is nothing more or less than crystallized carbon. The chief element in blacking is likewise carbon, in the shape of lampblack. The friction of the dry brush on the leather produces electricity, which has the property of crystallizing carbon. The leather, coated with blacking and brushed, is covered with millions of microscopical diamonds, which give to the blacking its peculiar brilliancy. Accordingly everybody wears diamonds on his boots.—Imparcial.

The First Marital Kiss.

If, as seems to be the case, it is to be considered the correct thing for bride and bridegroom to exchange their first marital kiss at the altar, it would be a wise thing to announce the fact through the papers beforehand, along with the number of attendants, list of presents, etc. That would at least prepare the wedding friends for this very beautiful observance. At a largely attended wedding, when the bridegroom at the conclusion of the ceremony kissed his bride, from all quarters of the crowded church came a snicker, which was the more surprising on account of the well bred looks of the gathering. On another occasion the bride herself was taken by surprise and started back in alarm when her newly made husband wished to enter upon his lately acquired privileges on the spot.—Washington Post.

Was Posted.

"A woman couldn't run for office," argued the funny man, "because she can't find her pocket."

"Judging from what I have seen of politics," was his wife's austere rejoinder, "there would be plenty of people to find it for her."—Detroit Tribune.

Philadelphia has the finest city clock in the world. The face, which is 10 yards in diameter, can be seen from every part of the city. The minute hand is 4 yards long and the hour hand a little over half that length.

Men are made rich not by what the world can give, but by what it can't take away.—Ram's Horn.

ADVANCED WOMEN.

THEY ARE ABLY DEFENDED FROM A SENSELESS ATTACK.

Healthier Than Their Indolent Sisters and Possessors of the Beauty of Intellectuality—Shining Examples of Persons and Performances.

There are many people of otherwise excellent intelligence who take an insane or maudlin delight in attacking women. They turn up about once a year, as the hares do in March, and with a cacophonous howl pour out the few minims of their vial of wrath upon her devoted head. Then, with a melodramatic chuckle, they vanish into the obscurity of their alleged thought and hibernate for an indefinite period.

This time the offender is a woman, and the offense appears in the columns of The Sun in the form of what purports to be an argument that advanced women advance and agitating women agitate merely because they are not beautiful.

The cleverness and charming diction of the lady's screed render it enjoyable for the moment and sweeten the sting which it contains. It well illustrates the old saw "of serving the devil in heaven's livery." It is bad enough for men, especially those who have never been married and who are brought up by a stepmother, to decry the sex, but it is much worse when an able woman indulges in a tirade embodying the platitudes of old fogies, the opinions of dullards in whose brute brain no new idea ever burst into being, and the poetic but somewhat florid tergiversation of her own intellect. Still, however, there is a certain force to the lady's letter. Just as the temperance orator likes to have a drunkard in his audience to point out as a terrible example and to illustrate the exceeding sinfulness of gin, so the fact of the attack shows that there are women of some mentality who cannot be and will not be advanced, and to whom such things as a thorough education, a broad culture and a high moral purpose are either meaningless terms or something, like the measles, to be avoided.

There are advanced women and advanced women. Dr. Mary Walker and Miss Mary Johnson represent one tpye in their own esteem, and the correspondent of The Sun represents another, very different from the first, but equally objectionable and discordant. The true advanced woman is one who develops her intellectual nature as far as she can and wants society to do the same with all womankind by the same means as they employ in converting the boy from the farm and the forest into the university graduate, the scientist and the statesman. The advanced woman believes that life is not a mere course of enjoyment, had or pursued, but an existence which should contain some lofty moral or spiritual purpose. She believes in the efficiency of intellectual and moral effort, no matter where it is applied, whether in establishing a ragged school or a club for political study; in making a mineralogical collection or pleading the cause of temperance; in starting a Chautauqua circle or in instructing poor young women in embroidery, drawing or technical design; in founding kindergartens where little folks may be rationally developed, or in conducting trade schools where men can be made into skilled workmen. It is not a new type. There have been hundreds and thousands of such women the world over. The only thing is that these St. Johns were isolated individuals, while today their name is legion, and they are endeavoring to so improve the social world as to make their type universal. It is against this type that The Sun's correspondent kicks, with the usual accompaniment of much noise and a leveling of long ears.

There is a small amount of argument in her article, but it is buried beneath a wilderness of pleonasm, mixed metaphor and altisonant sentences. Her opening premise that all advanced women are ugly to hideousness is as false as it is foolish and could have been made only by one who recklessly fits facts to a theory, or who has never been admitted across the threshold of literary and intellectual society.

The truth is that advanced women are as a class handsomer and healthier than any other, no matter whether it be the Four Hundred or the mad army of authors of erotic literature.

Beyond mere physical comeliness they possess the beauty of intellectuality and of a finely developed moral character. These indefinable charms have always been regarded as the greatest attractions of the individual possessing them. They appeal to the world, whether it be from the face of a Goethe, a Webster and a Hawthorne or Mme. Recamier, Elizabeth Barrett Browning and Harriet Beecher Stowe. It must be admitted, however, that there are men and a few women to whom these things are unintelligible, who vote intellectuality a bore, treat culture and pedantry as one and prefer the voluptuous graces of a courtesan to the spiritual loveliness of a saint or a Madonna.

That the advancement of woman does not involve any physical deterioration, but, on the contrary, tends to develop the body, may be seen by anybody who will visit Vassar, Oberlin or the other institutions of learning whose doors are open to her sex. The scholars, and especially those in the senior year and among the alumnæ, are usually splendid specimens of vigorous young womanhood. The "sweet girl graduates" of Tennyson's poem are turned out by thousands every year in our land. They are larger, stronger and more symmetrical than are the girls who have staid at home, "come out" at 16 and been through three seasons.

They are also healthier as well. Dr. Sargent, who is the best authority on the subject and has taken the measurements and other statistics of thousands of women, asserts that college bred women are physically superior to all others of the same social class and stand far better the strain of either married or professional life.—Margherita Arlina Hamm in New York Sun.

Veils.

It is quite as important to wear clean veils as fresh under linen. But can veils be washed? some one asks. Most veils can, but when you own a mesh that will not bear cleansing discard it when it shows the least signs of soil. In certain parts of Switzerland they use the following methods of washing lace veils: If the veil is white, it should carefully be washed in lukewarm water, loosely wrung out and rinsed in cold water. It should then be half dried by being clapped between the hands and finally hung out to dry completely. If the veil is black, mix a little ox gall in warm water and pour this over the veil, afterward rinsing in cold water. For stiffening purposes a weak solution of gum called "gum water" is used in place of starch, and the drying processes are the same as for the white veil.

Miss Olga Nethersole.

Miss Olga Nethersole is one of the English women who believe in high thinking and simple dressing, for off the stage her gowns are almost Puritanical in their soberness of color and plainness of fashion. They are mostly tailor built, and, astonishing to relate to those women who have taken admiring note of her slender waist, straight back and well defined curve, she wears no corset.

A coutille waist that buttons in front is the nearest approach to that bulwark of the French dressmaker. Miss Nethersole thinks the corset is ungraceful, injurious and not quite neat, since her belief is that every article of one's underwear should pay a weekly visit to the washtub. Indeed her lingerie, if one can call it by that name, can easily be packed in a handkerchief box, for it is woven of silk and wool, a beautiful fabric, warm, fine and soft, leaving her body free for active movement. Miss Nethersole is a tremendous worker in and out of the theater, as much manager as actress, and her capacity for the daily achievement of her really tremendous labors she attributes to her sensible dressing. She fully recognizes that petticoats are part of a woman's life, unpleasant, yet impossible to avoid, but her effort is to mitigate their weight and bulk as far as possible with a view to good health and active movement.

It is astonishing the numbers of women who have, like this English woman, laid aside their stays forever or wear the coutille waist instead.—London Gentlewoman.

Pretty Versus Sensible Boots.

Girls learn at an early age to prefer "pretty" boots to sensible ones, and it is the duty of every mother who values the real beauty of her children's feet to restrain this tendency toward pointed toes, narrow lasts and high heels. Until a girl reaches the age of 15 she should wear spring heeled boots, and between that age and the time when she becomes her own mistress in dressing she should wear low heels. If she cares to deform herself, then that is a matter which concerns only herself.

Growing ankles need the support of high shoes. Low shoes and slippers should therefore be tabooed. Lace boots are better than buttoned ones because they exert a more even pressure on the ankles. Soles should be quite thick, and the projecting variety is better than the other because of the additional support it gives. Soft leather, hand sewed, should be used, as machine seams are apt to press unpleasantly on tender young flesh.

Round garters should never be placed on growing limbs. The pressure and retarding of the circulation are injurious. Seamed stockings are also injurious. Everything for young feet should be as soft as is compatible with warmth.—Shoe and Leather Reporter.

Harmony In Furniture.

Many a woman who has sighed for some new piece of furniture, new curtains or rug has found, upon gaining it, that somehow her rooms are much uglier or shabbier than before. The new object has been selected because the style or color is fashionable or pretty in itself, without a thought of how it is going to harmonize with its old fashioned relatives. In adding to partly furnished rooms, unless a woman can, as the phrase goes, "carry colors in her eye," it is often hardly safe to buy a rug until it has been tried in the room where it is to go, while in buying draperies, furniture coverings, etc., a sample is generally safest, though it may make more shopping necessary. In selecting colors for such rooms avoid contrasts that are striking and select those that are of the prevailing tint in the carpets and walls at home, though it may be lighter or darker or different in pattern. Often if a chair or table or bookcase must be added a good piece of secondhand furniture of the same period as the old will look far better than something ostentatiously new. —New York Post.

Grace Dodge's Work.

What has Grace Dodge done for the factory girl in New York? Being a young woman of great wealth, unlimited leisure was at her command, and she gave it freely to teach the working girls how to cooperate for their common comfort and pleasure. They have built for themselves under her inspiration imposing buildings where commodious sleeping rooms, parlors, library, classrooms, sewing rooms and music rooms are at their command. Amid beautiful surroundings, obtained through their own efforts and savings, these girls come together evening after evening for a singing lesson, a lecture, to study or to congregate in the sewing room and fashion a new garment and chat of the latest book or of some one of their set's literary effort, for in The Far and Near, the organ of the Working Girls' association, appear essays, poems and stories from members of the various clubs that give evidence of considerable talent.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Without a Servant.

In a small home where pennies count and life's problem seems difficult to solve, with an ailing woman to do the housework of the family, and no room for a girl, the most economical thing to do is to hire the washing and ironing done out of the house. When you come to count the pay and board for service of a girl who must always be looked after, it amounts to a great deal, but when you pay $1.50 a week for the laundering of the clothes and have it done out of the house the worst of the work is done and no worry to you and no great cost. Even if you have to pay 50 cents more to get a woman to come and do the sweeping and scrubbing once a week you come off winner.—Minneapolis Housekeeper.

Limit Her Work.

A woman is seldom enough of a specialist. Whether working for money or not, she usually makes her living at a dozen different trades. She must be housekeeper, cook, seamstress, nurse, milliner and upholsterer whenever occasion requires—that is, she thinks she must, though it is usually sentiment and insidious feminine facility, not stern duty, which carries the day. The result of this narrow view is dreadful fatigue that takes the sweetness out of life and banishes sleep. The woman artist, physician, clerk, journalist, any one whose work lies away from the fireside, must educate the family not to expect domestic services from her any more than from a man.—Christian Advocate.

A Dry Shampoo.

The hair should be loosened; then every inch of the scalp should be gently rubbed until all the dust and dandruff are loosened. The hair should be parted in different parts of the head and brushed with a very stiff little brush until the scalp is clean and the hair also. Then it should be rubbed with alcohol or some hair tonic and the snarls gently combed and brushed out.

Sudbury, Feb. 4.—Special.—On Monday evening a complimentary banquet was tendered by the citizens of Sudbury to the ex-Mayor O'Connor. Over 70 persons, including the most prominent citizens of the town, attended the banquet, which was eminently successful, Mr. O'Connor was heartily applauded when, in a happy speech, he responded to the toast of his health, and many kind and happy words were spoken of him by the other speakers of the evening.

The Premier in Quebec.

QUEBEC, Feb. 2.—Hon. Sir Mackenzie Bowell arrived here in a private car by the Canadian Pacific railway this morning. He is accompanied by Mr. Payne, his secretary, and a servant. Sir Mackenzie Bowell put up at the Chateau Frontenac, where he was visited by a great number of politicians. He is affected with a slight throat affection. His visit to Quebec has no political bearing.

Curling and Hockey Playing Throughout the Dominion

Sam Shaw, who formerly pitched in the Southern league, and who hails from Baltimore, has been signed by Manager Maddock for the Toronto team.

Stratford and London Juniors played the second game in the Junior series at the Princess rink, London, last evening, the former winning by 8 goals to 6.

At Durham yesterday a western Tankard curling game between Chesley and the home team, was won by the latter, the blackboard showing 54 to 37 in their favor.

Over 3,00 people saw the races at New Orleans yesterday, and the weather was beautiful. The winning horses were as follows: Miss Gallop, 3 to 1; Gus K., 6 to 1; Lester, 9 to 5; Trixie, 4 to 1; Ana McNairy, 8 to 5

At Montreal yesterday an exciting hockey match was played between the Victorias of Winnipeg and the Montrealers. The game was played at the Victoria rink, and the western men finally won by a score of 5 goals to 1.

The Parisian chess expert, M. J. Taubenhaus, completed his American tour last night by beating 13 of the 17 members of the Boston Chess Club, who engaged him in simultaneous games. A. H. Smith and H. G. Daniel won their games, and T. Hovey and C. G. Towne drew.

A despatch to the New York Police Gazette yesterday brought the information that a match had been consummated between Plimmer and George Cornfield. The National Sporting Club of London will handle the affair, which is booked for May 27. A purse of £400 will be fought for.

President Powers, of the Eastern Baseball League, announces that the following contracts have been approved: With Buffalo, Edward Lewee; with Rochester, Peter Eagan, James McCormick, Edward Keown; with Scranton, Emmet Rogers, Charles Brady, Peter Sweeney, T. G. Johnson; with Syracuse, John Barnett, Matthew Kilroy; with Toronto, George Gray, C. W. Latenburg.

Yale faculty has just made a translation of an article in a German newspaper, the Muenchener Neueste Nachrichten, on the Yale-Harvard game at Springfield. It is believed to have been written for the purpose of making unpopular the German Emperor's plans for introducing American sports into German universities.

In describing the game the German paper says:

"It turned into an awful butchery of twenty-two participants. Seven were so severely injured that they had to be carried from the field in a senseless condition. The vertebral column of one was put out of joint, a second one's nose was broken, a third lost an eye and a fourth broke his leg. The rest suffered severe internal injuries. The intention to injure each other in all their attacks was clearly evident, therefore there can be no question of accident.

"The indignation felt towards the brutality of the students was powerful, but terror so dominated the spectators that nobody dared to interfere."

Mrs. McFarlane Dead.

Mrs. McFarlane, mother of Mrs. William Bowman, who was stricken with paralysis early on Sunday morning, died at 1 o'clock yesterday morning. Deceased never recovered from the unconscious state in which she was first found. The physician held forth no hopes for her recovery, and hourly her death was expected. The funeral will take place this afternoon at 2 o'clock.

The Ministers' Visit.

Tomorrow night a grand Conservative rally will place in the Opera House, when the Cabinet Ministers will address a public meeting. The Ministers who are coming are: Hon. Mr. Foster, Hon. Mr. Haggart, Hon. Mr. Costigan, Hon. Mr. Ives, Hon. N. Clarke Wallace and Hon. Dr. Montague. Peterborough is indeed fortunate to be included in the list of places visited by this body of distinguished gentlemen in their tour of the Dominion. Everywhere they have been they have been greeted with public demonstrations, and grand rallies have taken place. Citizens are invited to attend the meeting in the Opera House. The chair will be taken at 8 o'clock.

Business World.

A heavy dry goods failure is reported from Kingston this morning. The retail firm of J. C. Hardy & Co. have made an assignment to the bookkeeper for MacNee & Minnis, wholesalers, of that city. The liabilities are said to be about about $20,000, while the assets are nominally $10,000 in excess of that amount. The failure was caused by the firm backing other concerns. Charles E. Tanner, banker, Blyth, has assigned to Charles Hamilton. Beckley & Co., furniture, Cornwall, have assigned to George T. Copeland. Charles Fraser & Son, general store, Pembroke, have assigned to Gideon Delahaye. R. S. Robinson, clothing, Stratford, is offering to compromise.

"The Fast Mail."

Lincoln J. Carter's scenic production, "The Fast Mail," was put on at the opera house last night to a fair audience. The piece is a stirring drama, replete with thrilling situations. Upon the scenic effects more than versatility or richness of dialogue does the piece rely for success. The former are very elaborate, and nothing if not realistic, although put on with great difficulty and to disadvantage on a small stage. Realism, which seems to be the ambition of the modern play wright, reaches a climax in this production. In act two there is a wreck in mid-river, and in act three freight and mail trains dash across the stage emitting smoke and showers of sparks. The company consists of eleven members who are well fitted for their various roles and well maintain their respective parts throughout the play. The performance met with popular approval and the efforts of the performers met with due appreciation.

HOCKEY.

Tonight at 8 o'clock the Collegiate Institute team will play a match with the Harbord street Collegiate team of Toronto.

The Peterboroughs will likely journey to Kingston on Saturday afternoon to play the championship game in the league series on Saturday night. An effort is being made to secure a special car which can be made possible if the friends of the boys will accompany them. It would leave here at 1.40 p. m. Saturday, and arrive in Peterborough on Monday at 8.20 a. m.

A hockey match between the Ontario bank and Bank of Montreal teams will take place on the rink on Saturday night.

INS AND OUTS.

⁂

Lincoln J. Carter's production of The Fast Mail, is very good, but it isn't a circumstance to Peterborough's production of fast males.

⁂

In the report of the council proceedings a typographical error crept in which made "police force" read "police farce." THE TIMES proofreader, who is an old resident of the town, did not see anything wrong in the word and it went to press as above. We cheerfully correct inadvertencies of this nature,

⁂

The shivering in the police station on Monday night was not produced by the cold weather. The presence of three or four hundred citizens all of whom were undoubtedly in favor of the proposed change, sent the thermometer in police circles down to zero. The effect of the warming draught so lavishly administered at the Mayor's supper has entirely passed away, and that "secure feeling" has taken wings.

⁂

Councillor Dawson is a good man and a good Councillor, but he is evidently imbued with the idea that he is always right on municipal questions, and those who oppose him are all wrong, and have no right to express or fight for their opinions. Councillor Dawson is honest in his opposition to the proposed decapitation of civic officials, and has taken his stand conscientiously. But a Councillor should be subservient to the will of those who placed him in office. Everybody knows that the fact that Councillor Dawson has a relative on the police force would not influence his course. He is laboring under the mistaken idea that he is working in the interests of the town in this matter.

⁂

Fifty business men were counted in the gathering attended upon Monday night's Council meeting, and scores of voters as well, which is a direct refutation of the assertion that "there were not ten voters in the crowd." Every speaker who favored the reorganization of the police force was applauded. This was a true indication of the feeling of the gathering and a true expression of approval. It also indicates that the public are strongly in favor of a change, and the Councillors in favor of it are acting on a line endorsed by a majority of the voters of the town. There is no use trying to get over this fact. If the question of reorganizing the police department were put to a vote of the electors, the majority in favor of reorganization would be in the thousands.

⁂

Over-officiousness is not the least of the qualities that renders the Chief of Police an unfit person for the position he holds. Here is a sample instance: Last night THE TIMES' office boy went to the public drinking fountain in front of the police station for the purpose of filling a pitcher with water. He was stopped by the big, burly officer, who demanded if the water was being paid for, and also who he was getting it for. The last question was really unnecessary, for the chief new full well that the boy was from THE TIMES office. The only surprising feature of this incident is that the chief summoned up sufficient courage to tackle the lad alone, inasmuch as he was entirely unattended by any of his "aides," and in the face of a recent severe handling he received at the hands of a mere youth.

⁂

They were telling stories in the office of the Snowden House last night, and commenting on the cold weather. Several "stretchers" has been inflicted by members of the gathering, when the man from Rat Portage spoke. "That's nothing," he remarked. "You should feel the cold out in my country We have to abolish the use of butter altogether in the winter time, it freezes so hard, and the hottest fire can't thaw it out. And as for snow, well! I guess we get it there. I will relate one instance that will perhaps give you a better idea of the immense snowfalls, than anything else, and as I figured in it personally, the truthfulness of it will not be doubted. One morning after a more than ordinary fall of snow a friend and I took a stroll to view the snowbound city. On our way we noticed a man's plug hat sticking up out of the snow about two inches. Now, as you all know, gentlemen, nobody can resist kicking a hat, so I gave it a tremendous biff. To our surprise the displacing of the plug revealed a man's head. He had been completely buried in the snow. We immediately secured shovels and dug him out, only to discover that underneath him was a load of hay."

⁂

"Citizen," writing in the Examiner, makes the statement that those in favor of a reorganized police force constitute a class of people who are anxious to evade the law. This statement is an insult to the intelligence and intelligent citizens of the town. The men who most strongly favor a change are ratepayers of the town and respected citizens, who are backed by public sentiment and a majority of the electors, and whose labors in this direction, if successful, will result in a more efficient police department, at a less cost. The laws have not been enforced by the present force—that is just where the trouble lies—neither as regards hotels or in other particulars. Recently, several open robberies have taken place right under the nose of the police, and the perpetrators are still at large and perfectly safe so far as detection by the police is concerned. These men, who are well paid for little work, are put to desperate straights indeed, when such statements as the above are put forward to ward off the descending knife of public condemnation. An inefficient police force is being maintained at unnecessary cost. A more efficient staff of men can be secured at less cost. The proposed change is in the direction of efficiency and economy, and is the will of the people.

LAKEFIELD NEWS.

What Is Transpiring in and About Our Northern Village.

RALLY.—In the Presbyterian church, next Friday evening, will be held a rally of the local union of Christian Endeavor. There will be a good program, to which all are invited.

A very interesting match was played last Friday evening, which drew a large crowd, between Quills and Pills, two rinks skipped by the editor of the News and E. A. Tanner, druggist, which resulted by a majority of 1 in favor of Quills:

Quills.	Pills.
E. R. Tate,	J. L. Madill,
J. Clarke,	F. X. Fortier,
F. R. S. Barlee,	W. A. Eastland,

Mr. H. T. Strickland, of Peterborough, was in the village on Friday.

TRAIN SERVICE.—The train changed time on Monday arriving at 9.55 a.m. and leaving at 12 05 p.m. This makes a very convenient train service for now the people of Peterborough, Downer's Corners, Ashburnham, Auburn and Nassau can come up to Lakefield and have nearly three hours in which to make their purchase with the Lakefield merchants, who sell at prices that will make it an object for parties living in the places mentioned to do their trading here.

The Water Company.

At the annual meeting of the Peterborough Water Company the following officers were elected; President, John Burnham, M P.; Vice-President, R. A. Morrow; Secretary-Treasurer, G. W. Hatton; Auditor, F. W. Taylor; Board of Directors, Messrs. John Burnham, M. P., R. A. Morrow, G W. Hatton, R. B. McKee and Edg. Pearce. The Superintendent's statement showed that 15 4-10 miles of mains were now laid in the town, and that 115 stop valves and 114 hydrants were placed in position. During the past year 495 feet of 4 inch pipe and 2,101 feet of 5-inch pipe, approximately half a mile in all, has been laid as well as 5 stop valves and two hydrants placed in position. The services from a half to 8-inch pipes now in use, aggregate 804.

"Furthermore, both teams appeared upon the field with a crowd of doctors, ambulances and attendants, which from the very start did not fail of producing a gruesome impression upon the spectators. Many ladies were present, who fainted away at the awful cries of the injured players.

A Metal Breadboard
THE WOMAN WHO HAS BEEN USED to kneading dough on the old fashioned wooden breadboard knows what a bother it is to get them clean and how cumbersome and heavy they are. When they begin to crack or check it is almost impossible to thoroughly cleanse them, and they may easily become dangerous conveyances of disease. It was left for a woman, of course, to remedy this state of affairs, and Mrs. M. M. Everhard, of St. Joseph, Mich., has patented a metal bread board, which is one of the greatest labor-savers imaginable. It is light, does not absorb grease, dough does not adhere to it, and while it possesses all the advantages of the marble bread-board it is much cheaper and, of course, far lighter and easier to handle. If readers want to confer a favor upon their wives that will be forever appreciated, let them send $1 to the manufacturers, 101 Bay street, Toronto, for one of these boards.

LAURIER'S INEFFECTUAL EFFORT TO DISPARAGE FOSTER'S LOGIC.

The Usual Shots at Protection—The Talented Leader Cleverly Avoids the Manitoba School Breakers—Attack on the Census.

Special to the Times.

TORONTO, Feb. 6.—The mass meeting of Liberals at Massey Hall, Tuesday evening, was a monster affair. In spite of the intense cold the great hall was packed from platform to gallery. There were between five and six thousand persons present, mostly men, though a sprinkling of ladies had ventured out. The speakers of the evening were Hon. Mr. Laurier, Mr. G. C. Gibbons, of London; Hon. George W. Ross and Mr. William Patterson, M. P., of Brant. The chair was occupied by Mr. Lyon, president of the Toronto Young Liberal Club. The platform was filled with prominent Liberals of the city and district. Sir Oliver Mowat, Hon. A. S. Hardy, Hon. J. M. Gibson, Hon. George W. Ross, Hon. John Dryden, Hon. Wm. Harty, Hon. R. Harcourt, represented Ontario Government.

Mr. Laurier commenced by referring to Hon. Mr. Foster's recent statement that if he wished to retain his good name he would not get into power. In reply Mr. Laurier said Mr. Foster's plan of maintaining his reputation was to evade the settlement of the great questions. He instanced the appointment of a prohibition commission, the tour of the ministers through the country to investigate the working of the tariff, etc. It was possible to maintain one's reputation by sending a deputation through the country interviewing the manufacturers in secret, and the farmers in public, and lecturing the farmers and browbeating them, so with the by referring the question to the courts for know whether it was constitutional or unconstitutional, and if the courts decided it was constitutional, by the referring it again no the courts to know whether we have power to interfere or not, and if they decide that we have the power, then by calling on our opponents to tell us what we should do. That is the way by which men can maintain their reputations for capability and small cuteness. In the meantime, said Mr. Laurier, the country might suffer, passions might be aroused, which perhaps might bring this country to the verge and brink of dangerous agitation, but the government would be secure in the enjoyment of power. This was the action of able men of a certain kind. Touching on the question of dissolution, Mr. Laurier drew attention to Mr. Foster's statement that the government had not considered the question of dissolution, and contrasted it with Mr. Ouimet's statement twice in a fortnight, that there was going to be another session. There must be differences in the Cabinet.

THE OLD CHESTNUT.

Mr. Laurier dwelt on the poor showing Canada made in the census of 1891, when the total increase in ten years was far smaller than the immigration for the same period. Regarding the Manitoba school question, Mr. Laurier said he was anxious not to make the position of the government more difficult to them than it was already. As to his position, he repeated what he had said before, that it was with him simply a question of fact, not of politics at all. If the children of Roman Catholics were, by the school laws of Manitoba, made to attend Protestant school, it was an outrage which no Protestant community would tolerate. He had said this before, and held to it now. He had nothing more to say as to his position. This was the ground on which he stood. If the government had better ground he would be glad to help them in solving the question. He did not want to make any political capital out of the matter.

Hon. Geo. W. Ross and Mr. Wm. Paterson followed.

THE FIRE RECORD.

Kingsville Village Almost Wiped Out of Existence—Other Losses.

Special to the Times.

LEAMINGTON, Ont., Feb. 6.—The village of Kingsville, about eight miles from here, was today visited by a disastrous fire, which destroyed a large portion of the business part on the south side of Talbot street. The fire appears to have originated in Shain's dry good's store, and extended either way, destroying the buildings known as the Dunlop, Andrew, Wigle's and the Conklin blocks. The sufferers, besides the owners of the buildings, are: W. J. Shain, dry goods; James Wigle, grocer; Thornton's millinery, Brown's barber shop, Pierce's grocery, S. L. McKay's hardware, Wrice's barber shop and the mechanics' institute, over S. L. McKay's hardware store. Loss $20,000; mostly covered by insurance.

WOODSLEE, Ont., Feb. 6.—H. C. Rees' lumber and stave mill was destroyed by fire last night valued at $7,000 insured for $3,000.

DID SHE KILL HIM?

Brusseau Says Mrs. Pope Murdered Her Husband.

Special to the Times.

DETROIT, Mich., Feb. 6.—Brusseau adheres to his story that Mrs. Pope killed her husband, and says she told him so herself. According to his story the woman often proposed the deed and he quieted her with laudanum and sulfonal. He and Mrs. Pope had a drink of whiskey on the fatal night and Mrs. Pope proposed to kill her husband. Brusseau gave her twenty grains of sulfonal in two doses and sat up till 2.30. Mrs. Pope awakened him in the morning and told him she had "killed the Doc" and also the story he was to tell the police. Then the little girl was awakened and told what to say. Mrs. Pope threatened to lay the murder to him if he did not do as she wished.

Prosecuting Attorney Fraser will arraign both Brusseau and the woman on the charge of murder, but he believes Brusseau's story.

Heavy Loss in Cincinnati.

CINCINNATI, Ohio., Feb. 6.—The Bodman Leaf tobacco warehouse, a large structure on West Front street, near the Northern road of the suspension bridge, caught fire at 6.30 a.m., and is now a hollow ruin. The loss on stock is estimated at $240,000, and on building $60,000, fully insured.

The Englishman in China.

LONDON, Feb. 6.—A despatch from Shanghai to the Central News says that on Sunday a number of Chinese soldiers attacked Captain Cartwright, of the British warship Pigeon, in the streets of Nanking, hooting at him and pelting him with mud. No reparation for the assault has been made.

BEATEN TO DEATH.

The Fate Which Met Moise Dubay in a Northern Lumber Camp.

Special to the Times.

SUDBURY, Feb. 6.—A man named Moise Dubay arrived in Sudbury on Saturday evening last and went to the Montreal house, where he asked for a bed, saying that he was a dying man. Dr. Mulligan was called in and with Dr. Goodfellow did all that could be done, but in spite of all their efforts the man died this morning at 2 o'clock. Last night Dubay stated to the authorities that he had been working at Gauder's camp, near Worthington, and that George Shannon, John Gibson and another man, whose name he did not know, had made a murderous assault on him whilst he was in bed, and had beaten him with cant dogs and sticks of wood, and had threatened to tear the black heart out of him. Coroner McMurchy, of North Bay, and Crown Attorney Metcalfe, of Pembroke, were notified this morning and will arrive tonight. Meanwhile information was laid before Police Magistrate Gulbell and Provincial Constables Carmichael and Gagn were despatched to the camp, about 40 miles away, to arrest the persons charged, who will be held on a charge of causing Dubay's death.

Special to the Times.

BAY CITY, Mich., Feb. 6.—The Catholic priests and Protestant ministers of the city have held several meetings recently for the purpose of forming a Christian union, the object of which is to bring about a greater respect for each other's beliefs, and to do away especially with the intolerance alleged to be engendered and fostered by the A.P.A. and kindred organizations. All the pastors met yesterday and adopted articles of association of "The Christian Union of the Bay Cities of Michigan."

FROM THE QUEEN CITY.

SYMPATHETIC STRIKE OF WEAVERS AT THE CARPET FACTORY.

Editor Tucker, of the 'Varsity, Suspended by the University Council—A Soldier Assaulted by Two Men A Man Breaks His Leg.

Special to the Times.

TORONTO, Feb. 6.—There is a sympathetic strike on at the Toronto Carpet works. About 50 of the employees have left work because they consider their foreman was unjustly treated, and they refuse to return without him.

The men held a meeting at the Armory hotel this morning and appointed a committee to interview the managers and ask that the foreman shall have full control of his department, in which case they will return in a body.

THE FOREMAN'S STATEMENT.

Fred Cowell states that the explanation of the trouble given by the company is not according to the facts. He adds that he was brought to Toronto six months ago from Philadelphia to fill the place of foreman of the Axminster department, and about a month ago the manager requested him to hand his colors to the foreman of the ingrain department as soon as he had everything prepared and allow the latter to finish the work after that stage.

Mr. Cowell said this would practically be teaching the ingrain the Axminster work, and the result would be that Palmer, the ingrain man, would be able to take his place. This he (Cowell) positively refused to do, and rather than wait till he was discharged he left the company's employ on Thursday last.

His statement is that he made no attempt to induce the men to leave, but they felt that he had been unjustly treated, and out of sympathy for him about 50 of them quit work, and refused to return unless Mr. Cowell is reinstated.

THE MANAGER'S STORY.

Mr. Murray, manager of the mill, laughed at the statement made that Palmer was being trained to take Cowell's place. He said the former had not the required skill, and could not possibly do so. He said there was no question of principle or wages involved in the dispute, and that the men had acted very foolishly.

To a reporter he made a long explanation of the difficulties that have arisen from Cowell's actions, and his statement bore every evidence of his having endeavored to treat the men fairly.

The mill has been closed for a week to allow new machinery to be placed and when it resumes next week the old hands, with a few exceptions, will be taken on.

HIS LEG BROKEN.

While Arthur Chamberlain, a married man with a family, who lives at No. 5 Belshaw avenue, was engaged with others in putting up the Grand Trunk's new bridge over the tracks at the foot of John street, this morning about 10 o'clock he was crushed by the tongue of a sleigh and had his leg broken below the knee.

He was taken to his home in the ambulance.

TRAIN HELD UP.

The Robbers Failed to Get into the Express Car, But Robbed the Passengers.

Special to the Times.

PUEBLO, Col., Feb. 6.—The western express on the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe road, train No. 1, bound for Colorado and California, was held up one mile west of Sylvia, Reno County, Kansas, at 11.25 o'clock last night by four masked men who signalled danger. Two of the robbers covered the engineer and fireman and two went to the express car. For some reason they failed to effect an entrance and then went to the coaches and made the passengers give up all their valuables. The train was held for an hour and ten minutes by the robbers, who then rode south.

Lost His Lady Love.

HALIFAX, N.S., Feb. 6.—Miss Gertrude Bentley, the eloping English girl, did not appear in court, and it was discovered she had been spirited away. It is believed she is in care of a Church of England clergyman, acting on behalf of her father. John Brown, the man she eloped with, through his attorney, is employing every means in his power to again get possession of the girl.

HIS CHILD'S ASSASSIN.

A FRENZIED DRUNKARD KICKS HIS BABE TO DEATH.

The Father Placed Under Arrest—Patrons in South Waterloo—Dry Goods Market—Judge Gaynor's Opinion.

Special to the Times.

BATTLE CREEK, Mich, Feb. 6.—John Bremer went home drunk this morning, and snatching his three weeks' old child from the cradle, dashed it to the floor. The child is fatally injured, and the father has been arrested. Mrs. Bremer tells the following story: Bremer, who has been out of work for some time, went down town and returned within a couple of hours, drunk. He was ugly and quarrelled with his wife. In a fit of rage he seized the babe, which was asleep in the cradle, and threw it on the floor and then kicked it. The mother, frantic with grief at the sight of the child murdered before her eyes, pushed the inhuman father aside, and taking her babe from the floor where he lay unconscious, ran to a neighbor's. Medical aid was at once summoned but as the little one was injured on the head and back of the skull, the prospects of its recovery are very doubtful. The mother who had just left her bed, is also in a precarious condition. As soon as the result of the child's injuries are ascertained the father will be dealt with by the authorities.

DRY GOODS MARKETS.

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—The Journal of Commerce and Commercial Bulletin in its weekly review of the dry goods market says: The market for cotton goods has presented few changes of importance since last report. The general demand has shown all the old characteristics of caution on the part of buyers for both staple cottons and flannels, but supplementary requirements in the latter have been more widespread, and in the aggregate sales are reported somewhat fuller. Buyers are readily met at previous prices, but the printed and woven-patterned cotton dress goods are steady in regular lines. Staple cottons present somewhat irregular features, arising from the different conditions in which agents find themselves as regards to checks. In the woollen goods department new heavy-weight season is making fair progress, chiefly in low and medium priced goods of the staple order. The supplementary spring demand is quiet for men's wear, but fair for dress goods.

JUDGE GAYNOR'S OPINION.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 6.—Hon. William J. Gaynor, Justice of the Supreme Court, has written a letter to the State Board of Mediation and Arbitration, in which he discusses the circumstances attending the Brooklyn trolley strike, and in which he says: "In the immediate dispute which lead to the conflict between the companies and the men, I see nothing worthy of serious attention. The dispute was to small, not to have been settled easily, except for the inflamed condition brought on by the attempt to create vast inflated wealth on the one side, being met by justly aroused uneasiness and apprehension on the other. Under healthy conditions the dispute would not have lasted an hour, if it arose at all. In the case of the other two large companies here, the same dispute was settled at once. Until the cause is removed it is idle to try to prevent the effects. I submit this in the hope that it may promote thought and do some good.

LA GASCONGE MISSING.

The Big French Liner is Reported Four Days Overdue.

Special to the Times.

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—Up to a late hour tonight the French line steamer La Gasconge had not been sighted. She is nearly four days overdue, as she should have arrived Sunday morning. As the steamers of this line come and go with regularity, the impression gains ground that she has met with some kind of mishap. The fact that the White Star steamer Runic, from Liverpool, and the Netherland American liner Werkendam, from Rotterdam, have arrived about on time, tends to strengthen the belief that the La Gasconge had not had plain sailing. There are many things which tend to delay her that would not be considered of a serious nature by mariners, and while it can hardly be said that there is any apprehension as to the big steamer's safety, the friends of those on board would gladly welcome the news of her having been sighted off this shore. The vessel left Havre a week ago last Saturday. She has 162 passengers, a cargo of miscellaneous merchandise and the French mails. Her crew number 210. A. Forget, agent of the line, said this afternoon he entertained no fear for the ship's safety, and that he expected to hear from her at any moment.

DEFENDING THE FORTS.

Chinese Hold Out Against a Japanese Assault—Cowardly Officers.

Special to the Times.

LONDON, Feb. 6.—A despatch to the Pall Mall Gazette from Hiroshima says the Japanese attack upon the forts of Liu Kung Tao was resumed on Saturday and continued till noon on Monday.

LONDON, Feb. 6.—A despatch from Tien Tsin to the Central News says that an Imperial edict has been issued degrading Colonels Han, Tai and Shao, and Captains Yeo and Wen for their action in retreating from Yung Cheng.

They are not dismissed from the army, however, but will remain in the service in subordinate capacities and endeavor to regain their lost rank.

Better Have Remained a Prisoner.

WIARTON, Ont., Feb. 6.—Wm. Crandell, the man arrested at Galt last week for stealing from the express office and other places here, made his escape in the night by jumping from the window of Rogers' hotel where he was confined. The constable had his clothes but he took two blankets from his bed and while the constable was watching his room door he came around to the front hall and stole an old coat of Rogers'. It was a bitter cold night. He was recaptured yesterday south of Tara in a farm house, both feet being badly frozen.

Shot While Discharging His Duty.

MIDDLETOWN, N.Y., Feb. 6.—Three masked men robbed the Mattewan post office this morning. A policeman in attempting to make arrests was mortally wounded.

The Times.

PETERBOROUGH, FEBRUARY 7, 1895.

Good morning!

The Canadian winters may be growing milder as some people assert, but if they are they have a queer way of showing it. If this sort of weather lasts much longer the winter will be getting its nose frozen.

The Chinese peace-envoys to Japan having been sent back home because their credentials did not give them power to make a permanent treaty of peace, it must be admitted that the Chinese government shows as little aptitude for diplomacy as for war.

Sir Alexander Mackenzie, President of the Royal Academy of Music, who received knighthood on New Year's day, is the sixteenth musician whom the Queen has knighted. The first was Sir Henry Bishop, in 1842; then came Sir Michael Costa, in 1868; Sir Sterndale Bennett and Julius Benedict were knighted in 1871; Sir Arthur Sullivan, Sir George Grove, and Sir G. A. Macfarren in 1883.

In ten years the English Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children has rescued 109,000 little children from the inhumanity of their parents. Of these, 25,437 were victims of violence, 62,887 were suffering from neglect and starvation, 12,663 were compelled to beg, 4,460 young girls were rescued from a life of vice, and 3 205 children were taken from travelling shows, where they were employed in dangerous performances or as monstrosities.

Good horses are cheaper in some parts of the west now than dogs are in the east, for there are few dogs not owned by some one, while the horses cannot be given away. All over the west horses have been astoundingly cheap for some time, and $2 or $3 has been a good price for a good animal. A hundred head of ranch horses—sturdy, unbroken bronchos from Wyoming—were sold in Denver for $90 and the freight recently. It is reported that a big stock farm in Idaho has turned more than 250 ponies adrift to shift for themselves during the winter, as it was cheaper to do this than to provide food for them. The firm could not give even a dollar apiece for them.

Some interest attaches to the fact that Ada Gray is playing East Lynne in Toronto this week. The younger generation will not remember Ada Gray and East Lynne, but those of us of a large growth can readily recall the day when she was a bright star in the theatrical firmament, playing to crowded houses everywhere. She played for five weeks, every night, 20 years ago, in the old Methodist Church, opposite the present George Street Church, which was fitted up for an imprompter theatre. The people who went to see her were of the class who went to see Uncle Tom's Cabin. They were never noticed at other theatrical performance, and it used to be a matter for some speculation as to what became of them between times. There never was an actress on the American stage who caused so many tears to be shed as Ada Gray, and it was always a moot point whether the women who flocked to see her went to see her act or to have their emotional feelings played upon until the floodgates were opened and the tears flowed free. Her reappearance after all these years should lead to her being banged over the head with a stuffed club, but the club should be stuffed with rosemary—that's for remembrance.

THE BROOKLYN STRIKE.

The strike of Brooklyn trolley car employes is over. With the steady quieting of the situation some reflections on the results of this latest, and, several respects, greatest street railway strike are in order. To the strikers there is little to be said that is comforting. An unsuccessful strike on a falling labor market at an inclement season of the year cannot fail to bring hardship. For a period of twenty days about 6,000 railroad men, whose earnings are usually about $2 per day, have been idle, entailing a direct measurable loss of $225,000 upon men who, in the meanwhile, have subsisted in fact upon credit or contributions of sympathetic persons. Naturally the railroad companies have lost money. Practically their entire earnings have been diverted, and if estimates of an average loss per car of $20 be correct, the loss on the 1,200 cars usually run daily by the three great companies must have amounted to over $425,000. The loss to the companies by reason of extra expense in securing and caring for new men it is impossible to measure, but it must have been very large Bradstreet's says the cost to King's County and the city of Brooklyn, which are now practically coterminous, is more difficult to arrive at. For eight days about 7,500 militia were paid and fed. This expense must be met by the municipal and county government, and of course, ultimately by the taxpayers. This week the expenses of maintaining the militia has been small, but fully 3,000 men have been active service. Placing the cost per man at $3 per day, which is a low estimate, the direct cost of militia in this trouble will exceed $230,000. For extra police service the cost cannot very well fall below $50,000, while the damage to cars and wires by strikers and their sympathizers will only be known when the various car companies present their bills for damages. The enormous loss to business indirectly and directly in Brooklyn and to a smaller extent in New York, cannot be accurately estimated, but the total of $100,000 a day for fifteen days does not seem excessive. The various amounts show a total loss of $2,425,000.

The loss of life has been small considering the interests and number of persons involved. The indirect loss in privation suffered by all concerned, and particularly by the national guardsmen, will never be fully known. Cold, exposure and poor food have claimed numerous victims, as the hospital records testify. To say that the strike has conferred no benefits upon the public would hardly be accurate. Some of the lessons learned will in the end prove beneficial. It is safe to say that no class of comparatively unskilled labor, such as motor men and conductors, will in the near future precipitate a strike in the middle of winter when the number of unemployed is at its highest. The turbulent classes who have hung upon the flanks of the strikers, and who, while ostensibly sympathizing with them have done more to make the strikers, cause unpopular than any any other agency, have learned a valuable lesson.

ADVICE FOR THE NEW COUNCIL.

You owe your election to the people and them you should serve.

Do not allow a resolution to pass becuse you do not understand it.

It is your duty to be fimiliar with the town's business.

Vote for the town rather than for your party.

Do not shirk the divisions. 'Tis bettter you should vote and lose than you should never vote at all.

It is more profitable to talk sense than to address the back benches.

If you have nothing new to say on a question say nothing at all.

Silence is said to be golden. With some councillors it is diamonds and rubies beside.

A good committeeman makes a good councilman.

Fortunately all the wisdom of the Council is not in one skull; therefore keep your mind open to conviction.

It is not good form to vote on one side in committee and on the other in council. Beware the sudden somersault.

An open mouth is not a proof of wisdom. It is better to keep your eyes and ears open.

Manage the town's affairs as you would your own business.

HOW TO CLEAN HOUSE

THE WAY ONE WOMAN MAKES HARD LABOR SEEM EASY.

She Learned to Economize in Strength and Has a System—Taking Up Carpets and Scrubbing Floors—Battling With Moths and Getting Rid of Rubbish.

I always begin to clean house at the top—in the attic, which is the storeroom for castoff things of the year in clothing and furniture. In the course of six months an awful lot of rubbish accumulates there, and at housecleaning is a good time to get rid of it. In a house where there are children there is always considerable castoff clothing to look over. Some of it will do very nicely to cut over for younger children, and that should be brushed and aired, then folded away in a box kept for that purpose. The garments that are outgrown and cannot be remodeled should be put in another box, ready to bestow on some worthy person less fortunate than yourself.

Do not hoard up old garments against possible need "next year." If you do not see a possible chance of making use of them in the next six months, put them in the poorbox. They will bring you a richer blessing there. Examine the broken furniture that has been stowed away. If it can be mended, have it done at once, before knocking about has destroyed the usefulness of a piece to which you are attached. If you find that it is too worn and shabby for your own house, perhaps you know some deserving person who is ingenious enough to fix it up and would be very glad to do so for the gift of it. Otherwise throw it into the kindling wood heap. There isn't a particle of sense in cluttering up a house with a lot of useless old rubbish. Unless you are sure that dilapidated furniture can be fixed up it is bad judgment to send it to the attic anyhow.

Look over the old papers and magazines and make a package of those you do not intend to have bound to send to the hospital or some institution, where a bit of reading material is a perfect boon. After sorting over and putting away all the trash in the attic you have a heap of litter that it is useless to try to put away. Dump it on the ash heap or bribe your scrubwoman to relieve you of it. Then sweep and dust and mop out the attic all ready to receive the stores that will come up from the lower part of the house. It will probably take you a whole day to go over the attic properly. If you discover any signs of that terror of the housewife—bedbugs—make war on them at once. A machine oil can of gasoline is a good companion in such an emergency. Use it freely on infected spots. It will kill eggs and insects instantly and evaporates almost as soon as applied. Do not have a lighted lamp or gas around when you use it, though, nor for some time after, unless you have raised the windows and aired the attic.

If you have found moths, take all the infected clothes out into the sunshine. Beat and shake them well, then brush and if practicable dampen and run a hot iron over them. Moths are the meanest pests that ever got into a house. They do more damage in a day than can be repaired in a year, and there is absolutely no way known yet, except vigilance, that will keep them out of woolen clothing and furs. After you have everything cleaned and sweet smelling in the attic, get a pint of sulphur and put in an old iron kettle and set it over an oil stove or charcoal fire in the attic. Close the windows and doors and let it burn itself out.

Then you may be reasonably sure that there are no microbes or bacilli lurking around to descend upon and destroy the family. Be sure to remove all clothing that sulphur will be apt to discolor. It will injure nothing else. After cleaning the attic I go through every closet in the house next and give each the same treatment. Then I begin on the house proper.

In cleaning the other rooms of the house I seldom attempt more than two at once. I select one room on the floor to be cleaned—that I want for a workroom—and have the carpets taken up and the furniture covered. Into this room I have all the pictures, bric-a-brac and furniture carried and piled up out of harm's way. The carpets from the two rooms are carried out to be shaken and dusted, and then I have the dusty floors sprinkled with bits of torn paper that have been dampened. When swept, no dust is raised to penetrate other portions of the house. The walls are swept down with a broom, over which a flannel cloth is pinned, and an application of elbow grease.

If there are grease spots, I take them out with an application of pipe clay made into a paste and applied damp. The grease is generally extracted by the time the clay is dry. Where there are smoke stains from gas or from the register I have the places rubbed with a rag and corn or oat meal. This will not remove the smoke stains always, but will as a general thing. I have taken such stains off with a rag saturated with gasoline, but that has to be done very carefully, or you will smear the paper. After the walls are cleaned the woodwork should be washed with ammonia water, or borax if you like. I use borax for everything because I like its action better. If you have soap used, see that it is not lye soap, because that will take the life out of the paint and make it look dead. It will soon wear off, too, after being washed with strong soap.

Then have the floor scoured with good strong lye water unless it is stained or oiled; then of course you will have it wiped up with hot water only, as anything else would extract both color and oil. If you have feared that there might be moths in the edges of the room, the hot water should be used freely and then a train of gasoline put around all the cracks. As soon as the floor is dry have the carpets put down.

While the carpets are being put down you can be cleaning the pictures. Remove the backs and wash the glass and dust the pictures, then clean the frame carefully and hang as soon as the carpets are down. Dust and rub up the chairs, using some good furniture polish if necessary, or if there are no scars a rubbing with a [illegible] rag and an after polish with a flannel cloth will benefit almost all kinds of wood. Clean the bedstead and other furniture the same way. Clean everything before you carry it back into the room, and for this purpose you will find the workroom quite handy. Put up your curtains and draperies the last thing. Some housekeepers do not take up their stair or hall carpets till the lower floor is finished in the process of cleaning, preferring to cover them with linen. I always take mine up the first thing and wipe up the halls and stairs, for the tramping and dragging of heavy furniture over the carpets wear them out.—Washington Star.

Hints About Gloves and Shoes.

It is a science to put on gloves for the first time. The hands must be perfectly fresh and dry and cool. After putting in fingers and thumb fasten the second button from the bottom, coming to the first one last. Remove the gloves from the wrist, and not by the fingers, and leave them turned thus inside out, so that all moisture may be dissipated. When putting away gloves, do not roll, but lay them lengthways in a sachet. Place white flannel between pairs of light gloves. A little new butter rubbed on perfectly new chevrette gloves tends to keep them in good condition. Light gloves can be cleaned with flour, and rubbed places in black suede or kid covered with a mixture of olive oil and ink and left to dry. With boots, if damp, it is a good plan to fill them with paper and leave them to dry far away from the fire. Paraffin is useful to soften leather hardened by mud and rain. To make the soles of boots rain tight and durable paint with copal varnish and dry. Repeat the process twice or thrice. The secret of keeping veils fresh is to smooth and fold them immediately on coming indoors.

The People Victoria Likes.

Although it has frequently been stated that newspapers are carefully kept from her majesty, it is well known among those acquainted with the queen's private life that no current events or topics escape her attention. Indeed so curious is she about the principal personages of the day that she never rests until she has obtained their photographs. Among her majesty's most curious photographs is one of Louise Michel.

The queen likes two classes of people—those of rank who keep within the limits of court etiquette, for which the queen is as great a stickler as the emperor of Germany, and those who are no "respecter of persons," who can neither flatter nor cringe, who will reprove or gossip or repeat an amusing anecdote, such as the Scotch peasants or the most confidential servants of the royal household.

The queen has a great personal influence over children and is very much interested in getting the opinions of nurses and governesses connected with the royal household as to their training.—Woman at Home.

In Cases of Croup.

A standard medical authority says that the first thing to do for the child is to put his feet into as hot mustard water as he can bear and be sure that the room is very warm. If possible, put him into a hot bath, and then quickly drying him put him in bed between blankets. Even before putting him in bed give him sirup of ipecac in teaspoonful doses until he vomits. For external applications take 2 tablespoonfuls of turpentine and 4 tablespoonfuls of goose oil, or sweet oil, or lard oil, mix well and rub thoroughly on the outside of the throat. Saturate a flannel and lay it over the chest and throat. Hot bricks or bottles filled with hot water should be placed at the child's feet and at the sides of his body to induce perspiration. Keep him carefully covered. After the vomiting the bowels must be kept open with sirup of squills. The best drink for the child is slippery elm water. Give plenty of nourishment to keep up the strength.

Cleaning Pots and Pans.

A woman naturally hates to clean up a bread or cake bowl after the dough has got hard. They should be cleaned as soon as used, but if necessary to leave them for a time run the tray or bowl full of cold water and let it stand so. When you get ready to clean it, the dough will be in the bottom of the utensil as a general thing, and you will only have to rinse and dry it. The same is true of kettles and skillets. I do not approve of setting any utensils aside when the dishes are washed, for if you keep an oyster shell with a thick, smooth edge at hand you can clean the roughness out of anything in half a moment, but if you don't want to do it just then you will find that an iron pot in which potatoes have burned to the bottom, or a skillet in which meat or gravy has simmered to a crust, will be easy enough to clean after standing an hour or two filled with cold water.

Worry and Cooking.

More than half of a homekeeping woman's time is spent in worrying and a good share of the other half in preparing food, as though the stomach were the immortal part of us. Take one-quarter of the time a woman devotes to making pies, preparing puddings, putting up preserves, baking cakes and frying, etc., and let her devote it to rest and recreation, and she would not look like a shred of parchment paper at 40. It is the nonessentials that kill us. We must learn to simplify before we can escape the doom of premature age. Nature never intended us to live as we do. If she meant us to eat puff pastry, she would have grown it on some of her trees. She has provided simple food in the shape of cereals, fruits and vegetables, and if we conformed ourselves more closely to her established order of diet we should be a happier and hardier race.—New York Telegram.

Filling Up a Window.

An excellent way of filling up an unnecessary window, or one that looks out on an ugly view, is to have the lower part built out into a small alcove, lined with plush, with a small shelf running round it and brackets for china. At the back a little window is covered with gilded fretwork, and in the front a space is left which can be filled up as the owner desires. One of the advantages is that light is not excluded from the top of the window or from the top of the alcove, so that it would be especially suitable for the small libraries where the back window looks out on a mews, and yet where light is distinctly needed.

Keeping Young.

American women might learn an advantageous lesson of their French sisters in the art of keeping young. But it is no recipe for cosmetics that they would acquire. First of all, French dames do not worry, or, if they do, they conceal the fact admirably. They are apparently on the crest of the wave of good fortune perpetually. Next, and almost equally important, they decline to hurry. They take life moderately, perform their duties without haste and linger over their pleasures. And in these two simple rules lies a mine of wealth for her who is wise enough to appropriate it.—Cincinnati Gazette.

Black Rope Designs.

Black rope is often used to embroider the designs stamped on pillows and tablespreads of colored linen or denims. It is particularly effective on old pink or shades of olive, and if the articles are to be used in a sitting room is often preferred to white embroidery silk or linen floss. Outlining the design thus worked in black, a fine gold cord or thread is sometimes added to brighten the work.

A ROSETTED COMMUNITY.

An English Parliamentary Election as It Was In the Olden Times.

At the time of which I write borough elections were carried on with those characteristics which have been graphically described by Dickens in his familiar account of the election in the little "borough of Eatanswill" as well as by Mr. Samuel Warren in the return of Sir Tittlebat Titlemouse by the worthy and independent electors of Yatton.

In the Ludlow election there were three candidates, one Henry Clive, or "Warming Pan Clive," as he was called, being put forward by the Clive family to keep the place "warm" for a younger member not yet of age. "Warming Pan Clive" was a perfectly unknown individual, but he came before the people of Ludlow with all the best qualities and characteristics of a country gentleman, and with—what was of more consequence to the free and independent electors of this ancient borough—a purse full of money supplied for election contingencies by Earl Powis of Powis castle and the Hon. Mr. Clive of Oakly park. The second Tory candidate was Lord William Paulet, a younger son of the Earl of Winchester. Lord Paulet was unknown to the electors of Ludlow. He was deaf in the left ear and had the unenviable reputation of being a kleptomaniac. His only claim to the "vote and interest" of the Ludlow people was the fact that he was a friend of the Clives and had been sent to secure their vote by the Tory committee of the Carlton club. Their opponent was a strong Whig, Colonel Salway, whose family were highly respected townspeople, and who was himself a colonel in the British army.

In those days electioneering candidates adopted certain colors—for Clive scarlet and purple, crimson for Paulet, sky blue and yellow for Salway. Every draper and mercer in the town, according to his party, was commissioned to supply, free of charge, any number of rosettes at the expense of the candidate, and during the contest there was not a man, woman, child or baby of the 5,000 individuals who constituted the town and borough of Ludlow who did not display the colors of their respective party.

Swore Himself In.

General Sir Evelyn Wood, in his reminiscences of the Crimean in 1854 and 1894, tells a story of a fighting general who, during the conflict was seen wherever bullets fell most thickly. When not visible, his voice was heard encouraging his men with "a vocabulary borrowed from 'the army in Flanders,'" which Sir Evelyn says will not bear repetition. "Years after he was appointed to the Aldershot command, and her majesty happened to ask, 'Has the new general yet taken up his command?' 'Yes, your majesty,' was the apt reply; 'he swore himself in yesterday.'"—Westminster Gazette.

Special to the Times.

PUEBLO, Col., Feb. 5.—The western express on the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe road, train No. 1, bound for Colorado and California, was held up one mile west of Sylvia, Reno County, Kansas, at 11.25 o'clock last night by four masked men who signalled danger. Two of the robbers covered the engineer and fireman and two went to the express car.

For some reason they failed to effect an entrance, and then went to the coaches and made the passengers give up all their valuables. The train was held for an hour and ten minutes by the robbers, who then rode south. Conductor McGrath ran the train back to Sylvia and gave the alarm, and Sheriff Patton was on the trail with his posse in a few minutes.

The Canadian Pacific bridge of the St. Hyacinthe branch near the building is now on fire and there is danger of its being totally destroyed. The Central Vermont R. R. bridge as well as the Water-works buildings are also in imminent danger at present writing.

BUILDING NOVELS.

Mrs. Southworth Describes Her Methods, Which Are Partly Realistic.

"My stories always have a foundation in fact," Mrs. Southworth says. "To show you how they are evolved from small beginnings I will give you a history of the manner in which the 'Hidden Hand' was produced. I was in wretched health at the time, my sister was dying of consumption, and yet in the midst of these depressing circumstances the brightest and gayest of my novels came to me. One day, in the year 1857, my eye chanced to fall upon a paragraph in a New York paper, which stated that a little 9-year-old girl, dressed in boy's clothing and selling newspapers, had been arrested in that city. This item fell like a seed into my mind and germinated there. The little seller of newspapers was Capitola, but I must find an origin for her.

"Suddenly an incident which occurred in my childhood just across Benning's bridge came back to me. An old nurse was met and blindfolded one night by two masked men and carried into a house, where, a few hours later, a child was born. Bribes were offered the woman to destroy this child, but she refused them. The young mother was also bent upon the preservation of her infant, the result being that, braving the displeasure of her family and being discarded by them, she brought up her child. It lived and thrived and was afterward well known in Washington. This was the fact upon which Capitola's birth was founded, and almost every adventure of her life was similarly obtained. Her sparkling speeches to Old Hurricane were taken from conversations which occurred between my sister and a Mississippi uncle. Her duel was suggested by a like adventure of a Mississippi girl, who was misunderstood and offended by a British officer. The girl appealed to her brothers to avenge the insult which she had received. They treated the matter lightly, and she challenged the officer to a duel. Her challenge was received with contempt, and meeting him later and being armed she fired at him—not with dried peas, as Capitola did, but with bullets. He was severely wounded, and the girl gave herself up to the authorities, but when her case was investigated she was released.

"As to Old Hurricane—liberal, kind hearted, but blustering and overbearing in manner—you might meet him any time among Maryland and Virginia planters. It was when at work upon the 'Hidden Hand' that I contracted the habit of writing at night. My invalid sister lived in the extreme east end of Washington, I in the western part of Georgetown. My visits to her were made in the morning, so that I never got to my desk until noon, and I generally remained at it until midnight. Anxious as I was about my sister, when I took up my pen I became possessed of the spirit of Capitola, and care and sorrow left me. Although I have been such an indefatigable worker, writing every day for many years from 12 o'clock in the morning until the same hour at night and scarcely taking any time for my meals, I have never had a threat of pen paralysis. I have avoided it by increasing the size of my holder every year.

"I have used a typewriter to a limited extent, and it has relieved me as a tired child on a long walk is relieved by getting astride of his father's cane for a ride. I have taken my seat at this instrument sometimes to make a few notes, and the change from my pen has been so grateful that I have frequently roughly jotted down as much of a story as would ordinarily have occupied me for several days. For 30 years I wrote exclusively for the New York Ledger, producing a novel for every one of those years. During that time I adapted my style to the tastes of its readers, but when my connection with it was severed—which occurred when the paper passed into the hands of Mr. Bonner's sons—I wrote with less embarrassment. I have never written a play, but many of my works have been dramatized, and the 'Hidden Hand' was played in three London theaters at once, with profitable results."—Philadelphia Times.

The Ideal Nursery.

The ideal nursery should be on the top floor if more quiet, air and sunshine can be had there. It should, to be artistic, be done in light colors, but first be clean. Matting on the floor, with a carpet rug tacked over it, should cover the floor. The windows should have white curtains, and the walls should be papered with sanitary paper, which can be wiped off with a damp cloth. The beds—single iron ones if possible—should be placed away from the walls and have flat mattresses and very low hair pillows. Light, warm blankets are better than heavy comforters or quilts, healthier and more comfortable. As little gas as possible should be used in the children's sleeping rooms, and that little should be carefully shaded. Nothing is worse for a young child than a light shining in its face while sleeping. Cretonne is the prettiest material for nursery furniture, and cleanliness, sunshine and air the best medicines for the nursery's occupants. In winter a grate fire is a boon. It keeps the room warm and gives perfect ventilation.

Characteristics of European Cities.

An observer, says a correspondent of the Leeds Mercury, has drawn up a little table in which he arranges the principal cities and towns of the world according to a classification which has at least the merit of novelty. Each town is considered from the point of view of the trades which are carried on in it. According to these statistics, in Paris there reside the most tailors, upholsterers, bonnet makers, barbers, advocates and men of letters, men or women. In London we find the most cab and carriage proprietors, engineers, printers, booksellers and—though most people would scarcely credit it—cooks. In Amsterdam we find the most are dealers and money lenders. Brussels is celebrated as the place where the largest number of boys smoke. It is in Naples that we find the most street porters. We see the largest number of beer drinkers in Berlin. Florence possesses the most flower sellers, and Lisbon is celebrated as containing the most bailiffs.

How He Read It.

The other day Mr. Toole entered a dairy, and in his most solemn manner addressed himself to the man as follows:

"I will take a boy," looking round at the shelves.

"A boy, sir?" asked the dairyman, fairly puzzled.

"Yes, or a girl," answered the actor.

The man, thinking him some lunatic, said, "Pardon me, this is a milk shop."

"Come outside," said Mr. Toole, and taking the man by the arm he led him to the door and pointed to the sign.

"I'll take a boy and a girl," repeated the humorist, with not a ghost of a smile. "Read what your notice states, 'Families Supplied In Any Quantity.'"—London Tit-Bits.

YOUNG'S POINT.

(From our our own correspondent.)

The social ball and supper held on Monday evening, under the auspices of the Young's Point Base Ball Club, was a brilliant success. The country for miles around was represented parties being present from Peterborough, Lakefield, Warsaw, Chemong and Ennismore. The hall was tastefully decorated with evergreen and bunting. Conspicuous among the decorations was a large diamond, at the head of the hall, in which hung the bats and balls. The programme was most magnificantly got up and carried out in first-class order with Butcher's orchestra furnishing most delightful music. Sixty-seven persons sat down to a sumptuous supper served by the club in P. A. Kearney's dining room. After supper the dancers returned to the hall and the programme was continued. About 5 o'clock the party dispersed and every one expressed themselves delighted with their evening's enjoyment, one and all agreeing that it was the best ball ever given in this vicinity.

THE EXILE'S RETURN.

Henri Rochefort Welcomed to Paris by Thousand of Sympathisers.

Special to the Times.

PARIS, Feb. 6.—The crowd which went out Monday to see the last honors paid to the last Marshal of France was much smaller than the gathering later at the railway station, where Henri Rochefort, editor of the Intransigeant, was welcomed home from his years of exile in England. The whole Paris mob seemed packed in the open square. In it were all the socialistic deputies. The revolutionary societies had brought out their last man, and stood in solid phalanx close to the station entrance, while thousands looked down from the windows and roofs.

The staff of the Intransigeant received the chief with great ceremony and cordiality. The speeches of welcome and replies lasted more than an hour, during which the throng outside cheered incessantly. The enthusiasm surpassed anything seen here since the Russian naval officers departed, but there was no disorder and no arrests.

CITY AND COUNTY NEWS

LOCAL AND DISTRICT HAPPENINGS OF THE DAY.

A Champion Coming.

Mr. A. E. McGuire, the champion skater of Lennox County, has entered for the one mile race at the Sons of Canada carnival. A great deal of interest will center in this event from now on.

Called Away Suddenly.

The following dispatch was received from Omemee last night:—OMEMEE, Feb. 6.—Mrs. Ivory, wife of Thos. Ivory, senior partner in the firm of T. Ivory & Sons, died very suddenly this morning of apoplexy.

Dr. Ryerson Coming.

Dr. G. S. Ryerson, the well-known eye, ear and throat specialist, of Toronto, will be at the Grand Central hotel on Saturday, February 16, where he may be consulted by those suffering from any affliction of those organs. Remember the date, Saturday, February 16th.

450,000 Tons of Coal.

Some 25 representatives of American coal companies passed through here last night on their way to Montreal. They are looking after the contract to supply the Grand Trunk with soft coal which is about to be awarded. The contract is an enormous one, calling for the delivery of 450,000 tons of coal at Suspension Bridge as required.

The Ministers To-Night.

There is not the slightest doubt but that the Opera House will be filled to overflowing tonight when the Cabinet Ministers will address the electors of East and West Peterborough. The chief subjects dealt with will likely be the Manitoba School Question, the Prohibition Question and last but not least the Sons of Canada Carnival on Friday, February 22nd, and there is no doubt but that the ministers will be dazzled by the great display of prizes in the Gough Bros.' window. The hockey match promises to be a dandy.

Miss Armstrong Dead.

The death of Miss Armstrong, who was engaged in the millinery department of Hall, Gilchrist & Co., occurred yesterday morning in the Nicholl's hospital. The deceased's home was in Toronto and she was a daughter of Dr. Armstrong of that city. A few days ago deceased was taken with pneumonia. The disease did its work very quickly, and although she was removed to the hospital in its early stages, she rapidly sank until death ensued. Dr. Armstrong was present at the untimely and sad event, which has cast a gloom over the circles in which she moved and was a favorite.

The Empire's Farewell.

Yesterday's Empire contained the following valedictory: "An amalgamation having been effected between the Empire and the Toronto Mail, both of these papers cease publication in their present shape today, and a new paper, to be called the Daily Mail and Empire, will make its first appearance tomorrow. All accounts due the Empire for advertisements, subscriptions, etc., to date, remain payable to the Empire Printing and Publishing Company, Limited, and all subscribers having paid in advance will receive for the balance of their terms the new paper, which there is every assurance will faithfully maintain the policy in political matters hitherto advocated by the Empire."

The Trent Canal.

The Empire's Ottawa correspondent sent the following item to that paper yesterday: "Mr. R. B. Rogers, resident engineer for the Trent canal, arrived here this morning from Peterborough and was busily engaged with Mr. Schreiber all day in going over the plans and specifications of the proposed section of the Trent canal between Peterborough and Lakefield, via the Otonabee river route. Plans and specifications for the Lakefield-Peterborough section of the Trent Canal will be ready for inspection for tenders about Thursday next. The river route having been adopted it is the intention of the government to go on with the work immediately."

THE RALLY TONIGHT.

The Ministers Will Not Arrive on the 5.30 Train as Arranged.

Tonight will be the occasion of the grand Conservative rally in the Opera House. Mayor Kendry will preside. Mr. L. M. Hayes will read an address to the ministers from the Conservatives of West Peterborough, and Mr. E. A. Peck, of East Peterborough.

The program, as arranged for the reception of the ministers, will necessarily undergo a slight change. It was expected that the ministers would arrive on the 5.30 G.T.R. this afternoon from Bowmanville. It is now not known on what train they will arrive, as they left Bowmanville early for Toronto this morning to meet Hon. John Haggart. It is likely the 7.40 C.P.R. tonight will bring the distinguished visitors. The reception arrangements will be changed accordingly and will be announced some time today.

The visiting ministers will be Hon. T. M. Daly, Hon. John Haggart and Dr. Montague. The announcement that Hon. Mr. Foster, Hon. Mr. Costigan, Hon. Mr. Ouimet and Hon. Mr. Ives would be present was made with the understanding that they would be here. While considerable disappointment will be felt on account of the absence of these ministers, the interest that has been manifested in the approaching rally will not be materially decreased. The leading questions of the day will be ably handled by the trio. It is to be hoped that the citizens will attend the meeting in force.

DR. BURNHAM CHAIRMAN.

Board of Education Appoints Committees—Its Inaugural Meeting.

The inaugural meeting of the Board of Education was held last night. There were present: Trustees Ferguson, McBain, Denne, Wrighton, Hamilton, Law, Hill, Boucher, Burnham, Hartley and Hayes.

Secretary Morrow presided and read the list of members for the term of 1895, and stated that they had taken the necessary declaration.

Balloting for chairman was then proceeded with. Dr. Burnham was chosen on the first ballot and immediately took the presiding chair. He thanked the Board for the honor conferred upon him and expressed a hope that the cordial relations which had existed during the past year, would continue.

On motion of Trustee Hill, the striking committee was composed of the whole board with Trustee Denne as chairman. The following committees were then struck off and recommend:

Finance Committee—Chairmans of Supervision and Property Committees and Messrs. Ferguson, Hill, Hayes and Boucher.

Supervision Committee—Messrs. McKee, Wrighton, Law, Edgecumbe and Caldwell.

The next meeting of the Board will be held subject to the call of the chairman.

OUR COLLEGIATES WON.

They Defeat the Toronto Boys by a Score of 9 to 7.

The best exhibition game of hockey which has been played in Peterborough this season was that played in the Charlotte street rink last night when the Peterborough Collegiate hockey team managed to defeat the team of Harbord street Collegiate Institute, Toronto. The Toronto boys were a fine lot of fellows and played a very gentlemanly game. Not the least sign of roughness was displayed during the match and both teams deserve great credit for this. The game was late in starting, chiefly due to the fact that the local express on the C. P. R. was about an hour late, the road being blocked in several places and the boys from the Queen City state that they had to help to clear the track.

Shortly after nine o'clock the Referee, Mr. Walter Phelan, called the teams to line up, which they did as follows:

PETERBOROUGH.		TORONTO.
Hamilton	Goal	Sadler
Lewis	Point	King
Poussette	Cover Point	Burns
Davidson	Forwards	Archibald
Crossley		Cooey
Belleghem		Davidson
King		Small (Cap.)
W. J. English	Umpire	C. Moore

Walter Phelan, Referee.

The game commenced very briskly, Toronto succeeding in securing the puck, and they rushed it down to the Peterborough goal in a hurry and were very near scoring, but Lewis succeeded in shooting it down towards Toronto goal, when, after a good deal of fine playing, King managed to score.

In the second game Toronto again got the puck and succeeded in keeping it down at the enemy's goal, and Snell, by a very fine shoot, scored. King scored the third game for the home team, while the fourth was placed to Toronto's credit by Archibald. After this the Peterborough defence got rattled and made very bad play. They seemed too much interested in the gallery, so much so that the next three games were scored by the Toronto boys. At the end of the seventh game half time was called. The score then stood 5 to 3 in favor of Toronto.

THE SECOND HALF.

After a short intermission the teams again lined up, and it was noticed that Peterborough had changed around her men slightly, and when the play started Toronto did not have it so much her own way, for Belleghem generally placed the puck into King's hands. The change was easily seen to be an improvement, and the first five games in this half were scored by Peterborough. The sixth game Toronto scored. They were loudly applauded when they did this, for it was a magnificent rush that did it. The next game fell to Peterborough, while the eighth and last game was added to the score of Toronto. The score now stood 9 to 7 in favor of Peterborough.

GAME	WON BY	SCORED BY
1.	Peterborough	King
2.	Toronto	Snell
3.	Peterborough	King
4.	Toronto	Archibald
5.	Toronto	Snell
6.	Toronto	Davidson
7.	Toronto	Cooey
8.	Peterborough	Crossley
9.	Peterborough	King
10.	Peterborough	Crossley
11.	Peterborough	King
12.	Peterborough	King
13.	Peterborough	Belleghem
14.	Toronto	Snell
15.	Peterborough	King
16.	Toronto	Snell

The Collegiate Institute team are undoubtedly the strongest collegiate team in the Province.

The decisions of Referee Phelan were very satisfactory.

Offsides were very numerous but were promptly called down by the referee.

Good play on both sides met with loud applause from the audience.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES.

Items of Interest Intelligently Presented for Busy Readers.

Conservative Rally in the Opera House tonight.

The Toronto and Peterborough Collegiate Institute teams will play another match on the rink this afternoon at two o'clock.

There was a fracas on George street last night in which two men attempted to wipe up the streets with each other. No arrests were made.

A stage driver was reported to have had his hands badly frozen while driving in to Peterborough yesterday. The Warsaw driver was seen, but he wasn't the man.

John Hooten, of Cavan township appeared before the police magistrate yesterday morning charged with stealing a buffalo robe from the sleigh of Mr. W. J. Hazlitt, of Otonabee while that gentleman's rig was standing in front of S. Holland's hotel. The case was enlarged until tomorrow.

West Peterborough County Orange Lodge has elected the following officers: E. Kemp, County Master; Jos. Batton, Deputy Master; J. A. McWilliams, Chaplain; Sidney B. Weir, Secretary; Dr. J. A. Burgess, Treasurer; G. Hall, Directors of Ceremonies; S. Campbell, R. Campbell, J. C. Weir, Lecturers.

It was rumored on the streets yesterday that a man had been frozen on the race tracks at Port Hope. Telephone communication with that town elicited the reply that no such event had taken place there. Several people, however, attending the races had been severely frost bitten. One man whose feet had frozen laid down, but was rescued and taken care of. This latter incident likely gave rise to the report.

The following officers were recently elected at the annual meeting of the Patrons of Industry of the county of Peterborough: President, Dawson Kennedy; vice-president, James Middleton; secretary-treasurer, W. F. Gryllis; sentinel, Wm. Oakman. Executive committee—president, vice-president, secretary-treasurer, J. G. Weir and W. A. Barnard; auditors, Wm. Oakman and James Middleton; delegate to Grand Association, Dawson Kennedy.

The committee of management of the Peterborough Protestant Home gratefully acknowledge the following donations for the month of January: Mrs. Wm. Davidson, 2 layer cakes; a friend, tea, sugar and rice; Mrs. Chas. McGill, papers; Mrs. Jas. Loundes, clothing; Mr. Adam Dawson, turkey; Mrs. George Burnham, reading matter; Mr. James Ferguson, bag of apples; Messrs. R. H. Kells, J. Stanger, D. Belleghem, and J. S. Knapman, 200 lbs. flour; Mr. Sherlock, papers.

THE WEATHER.

Twenty-Eight Degrees Below Zero Yesterday Morning.

Old timers tell of cold snaps when the thermometer crawled clean into the bulb of the thermometer and would have gone lower if there had been any lower depth that the mercury could reach, but the cold weather that prevailed on Tuesday night and all day yesterday, and last night was just about as cold as the citizens have experienced for some time and nobody is hankering for it to get any colder. A biting northeast wind accompanied the cold wave and intensified the severity of the weather. No doubt the thermometer during other winters has registered more degrees of frost, but it is doubtful if any cold snap has been felt any more than the present one.

The thermometer yesterday morning registered 28° below zero. During the day it rose to 25° and last night at midnight was a trifle higher. It may be safely said that it will not get any colder, at present, and warmer weather will immediately set in. The probabilities are:

"Winds shifting to easterly and increasing in force; increasing cloudiness, followed by a fall of snow to night; rising temperatures."

A Metal Breadboard

THE WOMAN WHO HAS BEEN USED to kneading dough on the old fashioned wooden breadboard knows what a bother it is to get them clean and how cumbersome and heavy they are. When they begin to crack or check it is almost impossible to thoroughly cleanse them, and they may easily become dangerous conveyances of disease. It was left for a woman, of course, to remedy this state of affairs, and Mrs. M. M. Everhard, of St. Joseph, Mich., has patented a metal bread board, which is one of the greatest labor-savers imaginable. It is light, does not absorb grease, dough does not adhere to it, and while it possesses all the advantages of the marble bread board it is much cheaper and of course, far lighter and easier to handle. If readers want to confer a favor upon their wives that will be forever appreciated, let them send $1 to the manufacturers, 101 Bay street, Toronto, for one of these boards.

THE VISITING MINISTERS.

Policy of the Government Defended.

LIVE ISSUES DISCUSSED.

Mr. Laurier's Toronto Speech Severely Criticised—What Protection Has Done For Canada—An Enthusiastic Gathering.

The demonstration tendered the visiting Cabinet Ministers, the reception given them by the citizens and the vast turn out that crowded the Opera House at the Grand Conservative Rally held last night, was creditable to the Conservatives of this riding and to the patriotism of Peterborough.

The Ministerial car containing Hon. John Haggart, Minister of Railways and Canals; Hon. Thomas Mayne Daly, Minister of the Interior, and Dr. Montague, arrived at the Grand Trunk station at 5.15 yesterday afternoon. A large crowd, composed of members of the Liberal Conservative Association and citizens, headed by the band, had gathered at the depot. Upon alighting from the car the Ministers were greeted with cheers. They were welcomed by Mayor Kendry, Mr. James Stevenson, M. P., and Mr. John Burnham, M. P., and immediately conducted to carriages, which proceeded to the Oriental hotel, followed by a long procession of cabs and headed by the band playing patriotic airs.

The ministers dined privately with the mayor and the members from East and West Peterborough. From 7 o'clock until 7.30 a reception was held, and a large number of prominent conservatives were received by the ministers.

IN THE OPERA HOUSE.

THE BUILDING CROWDED TO THE DOORS—A LARGELY ATTENDED MEETING.

It had been announced that the chair would be taken at the meeting in the evening at 8 o'clock. Long before that hour every available seat in the Opera House had been filled. A few minutes before eight the Ministers were escorted from the Oriental hotel, the band leading. When they reached the Opera House they were greeted by an immense throng, that filled every seat and every available inch of standing room.

The Opera House was profusely decorated with flags, colored bunting, banners and mottoes. Across the right hand box were lettered banners containing the words: "Canada for Her Sons," "Welcome, thrice Welcome," and on the left hand box, "No alien party need apply." Around the walls were other mottoes as "We Stand by the National Policy," "The Maple Leaf Forever," "Canada for Canadians," "Georgian Bay to Lake Ontario by Trent Valley Canal," "Our Great National Work, the Trent Valley Canal," "A United Empire," "Haggart, the Protector of Canadian Workmen." Across the front of the stage in large letters was the word "Welcome," and in the rear "God Save the Queen."

On the stage were numerous citizens and members of the Liberal Conservative Associations of both ridings. The Ministers entered with the Mayor, who presided and Messrs. Jas. Stevenson, M.P., and John Burnham, M.P. They were greeted with applause. Mayor Kendry opened the meeting, welcoming the Ministers to Peterborough in the name of the citizens, whose feeling of welcome, he thought he voiced. There were most important questions to be discussed that were vital to Peterborough, the most important of which was the Trent Valley Canal. He had no doubt the Ministers would make themselves clear on that matter, as well as explain and define the policy of the government. He then referred to the speech made by Mr. Laurier, whose policy, he said would result in pitting the farmers against the manufacturers, and the manufacturers against the farmers. If the country was to progress the farmers and the manufacturers would have to work together. He spoke of Peterborough's market as the best in Ontario, and a direct result of a combination of the farming and manufacturing industries of the county. He then attacked Mr. Laurier's speech in Massey Music Hall, Toronto. He declared that the country did not desire nor want a revenue tariff if it operated as it did in the United States.

MR. JAMES STEVENSON, M.P.

Mr. James Stevenson, M.P., was the first speaker introduced. He didn't propose to take up the time of the audience, who were anxious to hear the Ministers. He would take another opportunity to explain how he had worked in furthering the construction of the Trent Valley Canal. Hon. Mr. Haggart had some interesting things to say on this matter, and he assured the gathering they could rely on everything the Minister of Railways and Canals said. The Ministers would satisfy the audience that the policy of the party was the true one, and that protection was necessary to the future growth and prosperity of Canada. "We can't live without protection," concluded the speaker.

Mr. John Burnham, M.P., followed his colleague. He simply wished to state his position as a member of parliament, and the position of the government. "I am a stronger protectionist than I ever was," said Mr. Burnham. He thought protection was necessary to the party and he had no doubt the electors would again endorse the policy of the country at the next elections, did they occur sooner or later.

HON. MR. DALY.

The Minister of the Interior was greeted with cheers when he arose to speak. He stated that he and his colleagues were present to outline the policy of his party to criticize the "policies" of the opposition. Mr. Daly then recited the old story that, since 1874, the Liberal leaders had been constantly changing their policy, and had not succeeded in fastening themselves to any one which the people would accept. He prophesied that the people of this country would diagnose their present policy and give the same verdict in regard to it that they had to all those they had had in the past, namely, they would reject it at the polls. Mr. Laurier had said that protection was slavery. "Why is it," asked the speaker, "the people of Canada have not thrown off this bondage at any of the times they had an opportunity of doing so, from 1878 to 1891?" Continuing, Mr. Daly accused Mr. Laurier of having publicly declared his allegiance to the policy of protection 10 years ago. So had many of the leaders of his party, but they had changed with Mr. Laurier, and had changed for the purpose of getting into power. Mr. Charlton and Mr. William Paterson had expressed themselves emphatically in favor of protection, and yet these were the men who were on the platform of Massey Hall declaring that this policy which they had formerly declared their belief in was an oppressive one on the country and kept the people in bondage. It was, Mr. Daly said, the policy in the interest of the country, it was the one which the Conservative party had unalterably followed.

The National Policy had meant the building up of the country from one end to the other, and not simply the levying of a duty on certain classes of goods. It was the policy for the making of a nation. To show that this object had been achieved, Mr. Daly went back to the time of Confederation and devoted some considerable time to showing how Sir John Macdonald had built the C.P.R., and how, in his opinion, the construction of this work had cemented the Provinces together and gone far towards making Canada not only known to the world but prosperous. But the Conservative Government had done much more than this. They had constructed canals and other great public works and had jealously guarded the best interests of the people.

Mr. Daly said he was glad that Mr. Laurier and Sir Richard Cartwright had abandoned their policy of unrestricted reciprocity, but he contended that the policy they now promulgated would be rejected by the people as emphatically as the other policies had been. Such a policy would not work in this country. Mr. Daly said that it was not on account of the National Policy, as intimated by the Liberal leaders, that the depression existed during the past two years. The depression was a universal one, and but for the National Policy the country would be in a great deal worse condition. The speaker then contrasted the condition of the country today with its condition when the Reform party was in power.

Then the speaker referred to the debt of the country of $247,000,000, and contended that for every dollar spent splendid value had been obtained. He argued that the Government departments were carefully and well managed, and he took the Liberal leaders to task for their criticism, especially of Hon. Mr. Haggart. Referring to Mr. Laurier's statement that the towns and cities were being built up at the expense of the rural districts, Mr. Daly said it was true that for the past 30 years, in every civilized country in the world, the people had been drifting from the farms to the cities.

In regard to Mr. Laurier's reference to the 500,000 immigrants who did not remain in this country, Mr. Daly said that the Liberal leader's utterances were misleading. The passenger list of every vessel did not show the destination of its passengers and if it had a destination placed opposite the names these points of destination as given were not always the right ones. Mr. Laurier, too, had not taken into consideration output, namely, those people who had left the country during the period of which he was speaking. Mr. Daly then spoke of the increase of population of Manitoba since 1883, showing that a considerable increase had taken place. He ended in a flight of eloquence crediting the government with farsightedness, and outlining its policy as one conductive to a progress of the whole and not individual industries. Ours was a grand Canada—a Canada for Canadians.

The speaker was frequently applauded.

DR. MONTAGUE.

Dr. Montague was introduced with loud and prolonged applause. He alluded to the vast audience that had so enthusiastically welcomed him and his party, which was but a repetition of the receptions tendered them on every hand, and which he opined evinced more than party spirit. He regarded their warm welcome in every municipality throughout the country in dicative of the safety of his party and felt assurred that on their appeal to the country the government would be sustained by an unprecedented majority. Referring to the various reasons given by the opposition for the approaching dissolution, he emphaized that given by the Hon. Mr. Mills, the philosopher of Bothwell, who asserted that the Government was postponing the date for fear of the sword preventing the Conservative electors from reaching the polls. He fancied that the philosopher himself, together with his party, were rather expecting to be snowed under." The doctor alluded to the disasters of the Liberal party during the past few years which they apparently attribute to "Unrestricted Reciprocity" and Sir Richard Cartwright. Sir Richard's absence from their recent meetings was significant in itself, and it seemed as though the Reformers had made a Jonah of him, and thrown him overboard to save their sinking vessel. (laughter.) He hoped that Mr. Laurier's trip abroad would prove beneficial in proving to his satisfaction the mistakes he and his party had been guilty of in opposing the North Shore Railway and the many other schemes, accruing from the National Policy, to promote the interests of the Dominion. He alluded to the increase of industries, during late years, in almost every town and village in the country, to the satisfaction of even Liberals themselves, who did not wish the Policy disturbed. The London Advertiser even, commented that one tall chimney was worth a thousand talkative but inactive men, such as he claimed the Laurier party to be composed of. In the town of Peterborough he noticed the population had increased 42 per cent. and 12½ per cent. in the country, which was in accord with the interests of both the town and rural districts. We do not need an equal increase in the farming districts with that of the town. The consumers should outnumber the producers to ensure prosperity to both parties. He felt confident that when the time arrived for the Government to appeal to the country, the electors of East and West Peterborough would return Messrs. Stevenson and Burnham with overwhelming majorities. (Cheers.) Continuing, the doctor expressed his pleasure in being in the company of the Minister of Railways and Canals. He had been accused of extravagency, but comparing the administration of his department under the National Policy with that of the Mackenzie Government the results were astounding. The present Government had not only wiped off the enormous deficit amounting close upon one million dollars of the Intercolonial Railway under the Mackenzie administration, but had also paid to the country a surplus of $5,000 and this had been accomplished during a season when American Railways were going to the wall. He denied the accusation of the present Dominion Administration being an extravagant one, and would ask if the Mowat Government were not guilty of this

MET DEATH IN SLEEP.

A FAMILY OF SIX PERISH BY FIRE IN MICHIGAN.

Starving Miners—Families in Need of Food and Fuel—Children Found Benumbed at One Side of Their Dead Mother.

Special to the Times.

STANDISH, Mich., Feb. 7.—One of the most distressing casualties that ever occurred in this county happened this morning about 5 o'clock, near the village of Ower, 8 miles from here by an entire family consisting of John Beck, his wife and four children were burned to death in their home.

On reaching the house after the alarm was given, neighbors found the house nearly consumed. On quenching the flames and looking around the ruins, the blackened bodies of the entire family were found. It appears that they had been trying to escape and had been overtaken by the flames and smoke near the windows as the bodies of Beck and wife and one of the children in her arms were found in the bed room. The child was held so closely to the mother that the clothing between them was not burned. The remains presented a sickening sight. Beck was a hard working man and had a host of friends. There is no doubt that the fire was under great headway when discovered as none of the family had made any effort to dress.

STARVING MINERS.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—The stories in regard to the destitution among the Washington county coal miners has been officially confirmed. At Venetia the miners and their families to the number of over 100 persons are in a deplorable condition, and unless quickly supplied with food will suffer seriously from starvation.

PEACE IN SIGHT.

CITY OF MEXICO, Feb. 7.—Public affairs are comparatively tranquil, and the truculence of a few days ago has almost ceased. This morning's newspapers said confidently that Gautemala was giving way, even on the question of indemnity, although it is thought that Mexico will abate her claims, mainly on the ground of Gautemala's and President Barrio's difficulties at home.

A SAD STORY.

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa., Feb. 7.—A pathetic story comes from Cogan Valley County, where three children, ranging from six months to two years old, were found alone in their home with the body of their mother, having survived the cold and privation for two days and two nights. The husband left on Sunday for a lumber camp, and returning last night he found his wife dead in a chair and the almost frozen and famished children huddled together in a bed.

THE SEAT OF WAR.

LONDON, Feb. 7.—The Shanghai Mercury reports that at the Emperor's orders the Chinese peace envoys will remain in Nagasaki awaiting further instructions. His Majesty having declared that he had been misinformed as to the true state of affairs.

A despatch dated Chee Foo today says: All is quiet here. The Chinese fleet and island at Weihaiwei still hold out and the bombardment still continues.

CONSIDERED A RUSE.

The Latest About the Imprisoned Queen of Hawaii.

Special to the Times.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 7.—Advices from Honolulu say that the Queen's abdication was not unexpected. In many quarters it is looked upon as a ruse to secure clemency when she appears before the military court now sitting. It is not generally considered that she is sincere in making the protestation.

The profound secrecy with which affairs are conducted has led many citizens to believe that the rebels will be dealt with in a lenient manner. In consequence of this theory, members of the Citizens' Guards have met and signed a petition to President Dole to be firm and punish the rebels as they deserve. Among those on trial, charged with treason, is Volney Ashford, formerly of Ontario, Canada.

The Government, replying to the ex-Queen's abdication, addresses her as Mrs. Liliuokalani Dominis, and states that it cannot be taken to exempt her in the slightest degree from personal and individual liability for such complicity as a due investigation and trial may show that she had in the late conspiracy against the Government and the consequent loss of life.

It concludes by saying: "So far as your communication may be taken as a notice to the disaffected, that it is your desire that the Republic shall be recognized by them as the sole and lawful Government of the country, it is fully appreciated. In this connection your unselfish appeal for clemency for those who took part in the late insurrection will receive full consideration."

Spanish-American Treaty.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 7.—The modus vivendi between Spain and the United States providing for the low tariff on American imports to Cuba and Porto Rico goes into effect to day, having been signed by the Queen yesterday. The rates under the new arrangement are the same as they were under the reciprocity conventions negotiated under the McKinley act.

To Search for the Explorers.

HAMILTON, Feb. 7.—Mr. J. W. Tyrrell, C.E., has been offered command of an expedition to be sent by an American society into Ellesmereland to search for the Swedish explorers, Bjorling and Kollstenius, who are lost somewhere up in that region. The plan is to locate a cache of supplies at the head of Baffin's Bay and explore from that centre with dog sleighs.

Winnipeg.

WINNIPEG, Feb. 6.—The Liberals of Brandon meet at Brandon on Feb. 28th to name a candidate for the Commons.

The Great Northwest Central road is endeavoring to make arrangements with the C. P. R. for the running of trains on that road, which is now almost defunct.

Man Shot by a Burglar.

PUEBLO, Col., Feb. 6.—A despatch from Trinidad says that George McCormick, formerly night operator at Elmoro, Col., a station on the Denver & Rio Grande railroad, 25 miles south of Pueblo, was probably fatally shot by a robber last night. F. Cole, the present night operator, and McCormick were talking in the station, when a masked man entered and commanded them to hold up. He discharged his revolver at the same moment. The bullet struck McCormick in the left breast, and he fell over unconscious. Cole fired five shots at the robber, who disappeared in the darkness.

The Times.

PETERBOROUGH, FEBRUARY 8, 1895.

Good morning!

Don't leave off your flannels yet.

Sheam-beating plants are in full bloom.

It's a queer world. Now, when everybody can have ice without money and without price, nobody wants it.

Several estimable citizens have caught their deaths o' cold this winter through sitting on street car stoves.

There is hardly a thermometer in the town which has not been prostrated by the weather. As soon as the frost is out of the ground, digging for the mercury will be resumed.

The mercury seems to have fallen about as low as it can if it has any hope of still being recognized by respectable people.

The story of the New York man who claims that his wife hypnotized him into assigning all his property to her is a dangerous one to make puplic. All the women will be studying hypnotism now.

In Toronto the other night Mr. Laurier defined his policy on the Manitoba School question. He means to wait and see what the other fellows do before starting in to make a fuss. This is what you might call canny.

The chief objection to this sort of weather is that it encourages imaginative persons with hazy ideas on the subject of truth-telling to recall gladsome days when it was two or three times colder than it is now. Mortal man does love to break the records.

In dealing with the Manitoba school question, Mr. Laurier takes care to state that he is a strong believer in Provincial rights. The words are significant, as no believer in Provincial rights can justify any attempt to force on the people of Manitoba a system of education they do not want. It looks as if the hierarchy has little to hope for from the leader of the Opposition.

A dispatch from the east informs us that "the Chinese authorities at Che-Foo are arresting and beheading the soldiers who have run away from Wei-Hai-Wei; the extreme cold weather prevents further operations." We are left in doubt as to what these further operations would be if the cold weather had not prevented them. Burial ceremonies, perhaps.

It is many years since the people in this part of the world have suffered from such a cold "spell" at once so prolonged and so intense as the present one. For about six weeks we have had real winter weather, broken only by one or two days of thaw, and during the last two or three days the mercury has shown the lowest temperature that we have have had for years in this part of the country. Even well-to-do citizens and their families, amply fortified against wintry weather by snug houses, good heating apparatus and plenty of fuel, warm clothing an abundance of food, have not found it easy to keep comfortable. Let such people contrast their own condition with that of the many who suffer the lack of these things in this cruel weather. It is all very to say "God help the poor!" but the mere wish is more like a curse than a blessing if it is unaccompanied by an effort to help the poor yourself.

CECIL RHODES ON "EMPERIALISM."

That marvellous colonial statesman Cecil Rhodes, took occasion at the late fourth annual meeting of the British South Africa Co., to lecture the "little Englanders" upon the folly of their more or less active opposition to the extension of the British domain in Africa. He said that on his way "home" some one handed him a copy of the London, Eng., Daily Chronicle, in which he read the following: "Not a single unemployed workman in England is likely to secure a week's steady labor as the result of the forward policy in South Africa." To this Mr. Rhodes made reply by reminding the Company that "we have built 200 miles of railway—the rails are made in England, and the locomotives also; we have constructed 1,300 miles of telegraphs—the telegraph poles and wire all made in England; everything we wear and almost everything we consume is imported from England:" Mr. Rhodes' point is that it pays the workmen of Britain to establish and maintain markets for their wares abroad. They are essentially a trading people, and if cut off from outside markets because of their possession by hostile powers, every industry on the island must suffer. The comparison between the respective values of the Canadian and American markets to the British exporters has often been made. Mr. Rhodes established in his speech a similar comparison of striking force between the vast American markets and the much smaller one of British South Africa and British Egypt. He said:

There are sixty million of your people in the United States. You created that Government; that is your production, if I may call it so......What is your trade with the United States? Your exports there are about £40,000,000 per annum. In South Africa and Egypt we have only 600,000 whites, but your exports there amounts to £20,000,000. You have £15,000,000 with the Cape and Natal, almost entirely British goods, and £4,000,000 with Egypt, where you have a fair chance for our goods. You are doing £20,000,000 with these two small dependencies as against £40,000,000 with another creation of yours which has shut your goods out, and where there are 60,000,000 of your own people If they gave a fair chance to your trade you would be doing £150,000,000 with the United States—to your advantage and the advantage of the American people.

Evidence of this kind is most conclusive proof of the incalculable value of the Colonial Empire to the home traders. It is not only glory and national stability that Britain finds abroad—it is commercial prosperity as well. The "little Englanders" are not very much to the fore just now, when the leaders of both parties are broadly and optimistically Imperial; but their spirit speaks occasionally, and it is always for retrogression. The day, however, is now with the Cecil Rhodes, the Sir Harry Parkes and the Sir John Macdonalds. All Britondom is in favor of Imperial extension and of closer imperial union. We are spanning the continent with railways, and linking the termini together with oceanic cables; we are marking out for destrction all barriers that lie uselessly in the path of inter-Imperial trade; and in the colonies, as in the Mother Country, the sentiment aganst sectional and separate ambition is growing lustly.

"RESPECTING THE POLICE FORCE."

Editor Morning Times.

SIR,—In reply to "Citizen," whose nerves seems to be in an excitable state, the writer would say that while the actions of those who brought forward the proposed declaring of certain official situations vacant is and should always be subject to criticism, the judgment of the motives which actuate the proposal is wrong and unmanly. For the information of "Citizen" I might add that the men in the Council who advocate the proposed system are as solicitious of the public welfare and morality as ever "Citizen" was or likely to be, and that respecting the efficiency of the police force in the past, opinions differ—opinions just as good and sound as "Citizens." Every good action is quite right and appreciated by the Councillors seeking intranchment with efficency, but they do not want lobsided efficency nor men who can see a parade of public immorality and not a finger raised in defiance of decency and morality—the late Stevens case for instance, when a man lived in open adultry with his sister-in-law and was denounced by the press for so doing, but where was the efficency of the police in that instance? Were not public morals as much shocked as they were with the pictures on bill boards?

Good men are not quite so scarce as "Citizen" would fancy, nor are these Councillors put in positions of trust by the ratepayers this year cowards or blacklegs, and I can assure "Citizen" that neither threats nor flattery can move them from their duty to serve the ratepayers honestly and fearlessly, and they have more behind them than "whisperings" and "evil surmisings." They are in perfect accord with the moral sentiment of the town, purpose ignoring bluster and blatherskite and consider that if a general lowering of high salaried people was to take place these hard times it would meet with public approbation and go more towards convincing ratepayers that "Citizen" is in touch with the people than trying to thwart honest endeavors for improvement.

A MARYLAND HOME.

FAMOUS WYE MANSION, WITH ITS GRACIOUS MEMORIES.

A Sturdy Domicile and its Outbuildings and "Quarters"—A Land of Mint Juleps and Winsome Maidens—Fred Douglass Visits His Boyhood's Home.

If one might be frisked by the mere magic of a wish away from the vulgar scrambling and the din and all the heartless impertinences of this impatient time back to those ways of pleasantness and paths of peace which were the familiar conditions of old Maryland, he might choose to find himself trundling in an antiquated gig through the long, dim stretch of woods and the double colonnade of locusts and beeches which formed the approach to the "great house" and ended in the graveled drive that belted the noble lawn—from five to seven acres of close, clean sward, dotted with firs and cedars and terraced from end to end. Here stood the sturdy domicile, broad and square, built of bricks brought over from England in the ships that came for tobacco. It was flanked on each hand with offices and strung out to the very edge of the woods with outbuildings—kitchen, dairy, icehouse, overseer's lodge and the "quarter" for the dusky colony of slaves. This latter might be either a group of cabins or a single spacious tenement of logs or stone, affording one big sitting room below, floored with earth and rude dormitories, bunked and blanketed above. On the ground floor the negroes loved to lie around the great hearth, with their feet to the fire, and to sleep that sleep of insouciant beatitude which was broken only by the familiar cry of warning, "Some fool nigger's heel a-burning!"

In the distance was the clumsy windmill for the grinding of the maize which was presently to find itself transformed and famous in coquetries of johnny cake and pone, and flapjacks flattered with golden butter, and beyond, between the willows by the creek, glimpsed and glanced the rippling silver of the bay, with its sleepy coves and inlets dotted with canoes and barges, and with the slender spars of pungies in among the cuddling little isles, where Sambo tonged for "eyesheters" in the sun and the larger fisher took his finny treasures from the weir.

Here was a land flowing with mint juleps and blooming with delectable damsels. Mistress Rebecca Lloyd, beautiful and gracious, greeted the newcomer with a winsome courtesy on the broad piazza, and the grizzled butler, who had "toted" his young missus around so long that there were still times when he forgot himself and called her "honey," brought you the beguiling beverage on a silver salver engraved with the family arms and was distressed if your straw refused to draw. That broad piazza was burned, with the rest of the noble house of Wye, on March 13, 1781, when a British marauding party looted the plantation and the mansion and carried off plate, jewelry and watches, swords, spurs, sashes and cocked beavers, muffs, turbans and tippets, wigs and embroidered waistcoats, plumed hats and cardinals, the whole splendid plunder of brave apparel and dainty bedeckings. The fair Rebecca has long since been choired among the angels, and the grizzled butler sleeps with his toes turned up to the mint, but when I crossed the lawn one kindly day in December I was greeted as graciously by Rebecca's later kinswoman and conducted into the great hall, which never yet, whether in the parent house or in this, was big enough for the hospitalities it has harbored. The grand old manor house gave its body to the flames, but its soul survives in the later mansion, where its traditions of courtesy and kindness are piously cherished.

Near the site of the historic domicile, a fragment of which still remains, stands the beautiful structure, impressive by its proud simplicity, which invites the wayfarer today in the name of eight generations of Maryland worthies who have kept house there since Edward Lloyd I, the Puritan, in 1668, set up his son Philemon to be lord of the manor of Wye and master of Wye House—incunabula majorum. The main building of two lofty stories, including the hall, drawing room, parlor, dining room and chambers, all of noble proportions, is connected by corridors with one storied wings, which are the library on one side and the domestic offices on the other, presenting a pleasing facade of 200 feet, looking out upon the lawn and the leafy avenue, and over the woods to Wye river and the bay.

In Governor Lloyd's time there was a certain steward, or bailiff, at Wye, one Captain Anthony of St. Michael's, at one time master of a bay craft in the service of the governor. This man was the owner of a likely negro boy who escaped from bondage, and by his remarkable powers, acquirements and address became known to the world as Frederick Douglass. In 1881 Mr. Douglass, being then marshal of the District of Columbia, was moved to revisit the scenes of his childhood and his thrall, and one day found himself on the porch of Wye House, where he was received by the sons of Colonel Lloyd, their father being absent, with that courtesy which is extended to every stranger who finds his way thither. When he had made known the motive of his visit, he was conducted over the estate, from spot to spot that he remembered and described with all their childish associations—here a spring, there a hedge, a lane, a field, a tree. He called them by their names or recalled them by some simple incident, and all the glowing heart of the man seemed to go out to the place as he passed from ghost to ghost as in a dream. And then a strange thing happened. Standing mute and musing for awhile, he said slowly and low, as one who talks in his sleep, "Over in them woods was whar me and Mars Dan useter trap rabbits." "Mars Dan" was the governor's son. Was it the man's half playful, half pathetic sense of the grotesque incongruity of the situation, or was it glamour—all the tremendous significance of a phenomenal life compacted into the homely reflection and phrase of a barefoot "darky?"

He plucked flowers from the graves of dead Lloyds he had known and at the table drank to the health of the master of the old house and of his children, "that they and their descendants may worthily maintain the character and the fame of their ancestors."—Dr. John W. Palmer in Century.

His Bonanza.

Fags—They say that Dr. Capsule has made a fortune within the last five years.

Gags—Gracious! What a lot of people he must have cured!

Keweenaw Point, in Michigan, was so called by the Indians. The word means "a portage."

A COMPARISON.

On o'er the pastures, where the mountain flowers
Starring the sward trim garden beds outshow!
On through sweet pine woods, cross the torrents' flow.
On o'er vast bowlder mounds, while still the hours
Make labor lightsome! For above thee towers
Unseen as yet, the peak, on o'er the snow!
Nor heedless tread its smoother plain, for, lo!
The blue abysses yawn, the avalanche lowers!

Scale yonder beetling cliffs, where now the sun
Beats fiercely, hew sure steps in walls of ice.
What though with toil worn limb and laboring breath.
Hold bravely on until the height be won.
So runs life's tale—childhood, youth's paradise,

—Spectator.

GAMBLING ORIENTALS.

Games of Chance Are as the Breath of Life to Them.

There appear to be three races of men—the Chinese, the Malays and the natives of Manilla, to whom in every grade and under all conditions of life gambling in some form or other is as the breath of their nostrils. The love of it is inborn. They seem unable to live contented lives without the pleasurable excitement that is to be found in games of mingled chance and skill, but among Chinamen generally, and certainly among Chinamen abroad, the gambling is of a very mild type indeed. In most cities where there is a considerable alien Chinese population to be dealt with the necessity for licensing and regulating or at least winking at the existence of their gaming houses is recognized. It is the one pastime in a life of continuous toil, the denial of which would be intolerable and practically impossible.

But the evil never assumes proportions of any more seriousness than our own domestic hand of "Napoleon" or the club rubber of whist or nominal points so long as the authorities confine the games strictly to the Chinamen themselves, a course followed in such cities as Calcutta and Sydney. It is only when the riffraff of other races are allowed to "take a hand" and to utilize the Chinese games, tables and banks for the gratification of their own gambling propensities that anything like widespread mischief is wrought. A Chinaman may, in rare instances, lose his all when gaming among his own countrymen, but if this result does happen he goes next day contentedly back to work and is not, like most ruined gamblers of European stock, permanently incapacitated for honest toil.

If white men lose money in a Chinese gambling house, they are at once illogical, dishonest and contemptible in denouncing the Chinese as the cause of their misfortune. The bush workers inveigh against their Chinese competitors for their habit of gambling, yet it is notorious that the shearers and the roustabouts' huts on the sheep stations are frequently scenes where men are, in colonial phraseology, "lambed down" and fleeced of all their season's earnings by quasiprofessional gamblers, who find the evening game at cards far more profitable and to their taste than the day's work on or around the shearing board. Similarly in the cities the poor Chinaman is denounced for his fondness for fantan or pakapu, played for coppers, while the very men who throw the stone openly frequent race courses and card clubs.—Nineteenth Century.

Childhood's Simple Pleasures.

The exultation which Mrs. Kate Douglas Wiggin feels over her real childhood, with its copper toed shoes and rag doll, in her chapter on training children, will find an echo in the breasts of many city mothers. It is what many of them fight for for their children as they fight for health in the city's microbe and bacillus laden air.

"How can a real child keep her happy enjoyment in simple pleasures?" said a woman, discussing this point recently, "when every influence to which she is subject is against it? My little girl had a birthday lately, her tenth, and she was thrown into an ecstasy of delight over a little silver pin an aunt sent her.

"She rushed over to show it to her other self, the little neighbor over the way, and returned in a few minutes with the serpent in her Eden. I saw the cloud and soon found its cause.

"'Mamma,' she whispered, coming close to me, 'Kitty thinks my pin isn't sterling. What is sterling, mamma?'

"That's the whole thing in a nutshell. Everything today must represent so many dollars, or it has no value. The atmosphere of life is so surcharged with this strife for the high priced that even the babies absorb it, and childhood, with no discrimination, is tormented by it. It makes my heart ache to think that the birthright of my little ones—the capacity to enjoy without knowing—is being stolen from them, and I must stand by powerless to prevent it."—New York Times.

Would Blow Himself.

The ideas of men who have been living a rough frontier life for years with reference to what constitutes a big spread and what luxury is become strangely modified.

Several miners who had been in the mining districts of Colorado for years were discussing what they would do if they were to become rich or strike it lucky.

"Well," said one, "I know what I'll do. I'll go to New York as straight as the cars will take me, and when I get there I'll make a bee line for Delmonico's, and I'll get the biggest dinner money can buy. I don't care if it costs me $50 or more, I'll have it."

"Now, what do you think you would order if you were to go to Delmonico's for a $50 dinner?"

"Well, I dunno, but I guess I'd have some ham and eggs—yes, I'd just have some ham and eggs."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

A Duck's Death From Grief.

Mr. E. C. Lanier of Waynesboro tells a pathetic duck story. He owned a pair of ducks, one of which was seriously injured and was put in a pen for protection. The old drake was faithful to his better half and sat around the pen with all the patience of one anxious for the recovery of some dear one. The injured duck died within a few days, and the old drake refused to eat and finally died from grief, for he was apparently in the best of health and was fed regularly. Is there any lover whose eyes fall upon this pathetic love story who would stick to his "duck" so faithfully?—Atlanta Constitution.

The people of tropical countries almost invariably use some form of capsicum with maize as a stimulant to the stomach, maize being more difficult of digestion than some other grains.

Oskaloosa, the name of a Kansas town, is said to be a compound of Oska, the name of a noted Indian chief, and Loosa, his wife.

THE WALLED HERD.

STRANGE STORY OF AN INACCESSIBLE BAND OF CATTLE.

A Pyramid of Bones Marks the Spot Where Their Ancestors Fell Over a Precipice Twenty Years Ago—Dwell In Safety Where Man Has Never Trod.

In the wildest portion of the west, 7[illegible] miles northwest of Meeker, where, in 1879, the Utes massacred the Meeker family and every one at the agency, is the most wonderful cattle ranch in the world. Within a space of five miles in length and three miles in width roams a herd upon whose sides the branding iron has never been placed and around whose horns the lariat has never tightened. But a score or even fewer of them have ever seen a man or horse or other animal of their kind, and, in fact, their kin except at a distance of nearly 600 feet high above them. Ute Indians call them "p'check up," or red buffalo. And yet if an Indian who has seen them should be asked about it he would laugh and shake his head, and all the information obtainable would be, "P'check-up; 'em red; no ketch 'em." There are more than 1,000 of this herd, and yet no man owns them, nor is there a man, white or black or copper colored, who has ever been able to possess a single hoof of these fat and tempting beeves.

The cattle are in a prison. Out of it there is one method of escape, but to travel that road means death to the adventurous one. There is no way to get in except it be by use of a rope 1,000 feet in length. As the Indians say: "Heap see 'em; no ketch 'em; no come away." On the two long sides of the oblong space in which these cattle roam rise precipitous and even concave rocks for 500 or 600 feet—yawning, black and insurmountable. At either end seethes and rushes the Yampa or Bear river. For miles above and miles below it plunges and stumbles on in its headlong haste to reach the arms of its parent, the scarcely less tumultuous but deeper Green river. Like the wonderful flat top mountain of Colorado, this home of the imprisoned herd has no likeness in the world. It recalls in its inaccessibility the marvelous stories of the valley of verdure, into which Mayne Reid's adventurers only found their way by the assistance of the balloon.

The story of the way in which these cattle came there is as strange as their existence is curious. Over 20 years ago, when the government troops were pursuing the Mormon murderers of the innocent victims of the Mountain Meadow massacre, the Danites, or Avenging Angels of the Mormons, fled for their lives into what was then literally the wilderness. A few of these who had been the blindest followers of Lee, the Mormon fiend incarnate, whose hands were red with the blood of women and children, found in their wanderings a pretty valley or stream, which flows from the Wasatch range into the Green river. They stuck their stakes, built their campfires and during the night their sagacious leader had a vision, which told him there to stay. They could hardly have chosen in all Utah a more fertile or more isolated spot. They called it Ashley, and about them have since gathered more of their sect until where the refugees posted their pickets on the lonely nights of the first summer has grown a thriving village. It is 140 miles from the Union Pacific railroad south and 145 miles north of the Rio Grande Western. Until within a few years past it has been isolated entirely, but now it is but 80 miles from the Ute reservation, and furnishing supplies for the agency forms quite a business for the community.

It is a tenet of the Danites that robbing or theft from a gentile is no crime. So it was thought to be only a cunning trick when John Wyckliffe, one of the Mormon settlers of the new town, and his three sons made a night sortie on Henry's ford in Wyoming and carried away 800 head of cattle ranging there. This was in 1874. The owners of the cattle discovered their loss a few days after they were gone and started in pursuit.

The thieves and the stolen herd had reached a mesa of inviting grass at sundown one day and halted to camp for the night. A terrific storm arose. The lightning flashed incessantly, and the thunder pealed and cracked with intermitting fury. The four men desperately held the terror stricken cattle by riding around them constantly and chanting some weird tune. But the wild fearlessness of the furious storm excited the brutes beyond measure. They surged and ground, every moment growing less subject to control. All at once, as if by one mad impulse, they stampeded.

John Wyckliffe and his sons met their fate amid the lightning's glare and the thunder's roar. They endeavored to head off the stampeding herd. Instead they and their horses were swept on and driven in the terror to escape the charge of the maddened animals over the brink of the awful precipice which frowns up from the waters of the Bear. After them plunged the whole fright crazed herd, and down to the bottom of the fearful fall went horses, riders and horned creatures. Out of this strange plunge of life to what was seemingly certain death to all a few of the herd were not killed. Those which had gone ahead formed a cushion of death. Maimed, stunned, but still invested with a spark of life, when the dread storm was over the living cattle crawled out from the mass beneath them and formed a nucleus for the herd which now roams at will within its rocky confines. On the bank of the river, stretching back a few hundred yards, grow succulent grasses, and upon this the cattle have propagated and thrived. In looking over the edge of the precipice one can see that they are small and as wild and agile as deer. They have been shot at to see the effect and have learned to regard the appearance of a man, whether Indian or white, as a menace from which they flee, clambering over rocks and through underbrush in the chase to a point of concealment.

The place where the thieves and their horses and the herd fell is plainly marked by a pyramid of bones, which rises to the height of 30 feet. The ghastly reminder and relics of the human and animal victims of the terrible leap shine forth white and glistening when the sun is high and reaches that spot with its full glare. The progeny of the surviving animals from the fall are fat and sleek, though, and have their sunny beds, deerlike, where they lie for warmth in the winter, and to them the monument of skeletons is no source of disquietude. There is no fierce mountain lion or more dangerous bear, nor, in fact, any other animate thing within this cow garden of Eden. As yet, too, no man has been able to reach or disturb them.—San Francisco Examiner.

THE EXILE'S RETURN.

Henri Rochefort Welcomed to Paris by Thousand of Sympathizers.

Special to the Times.

PARIS, Feb. 6.—The crowd which went out Monday to see the last honors paid to the last Marshal of France was much smaller than the gathering later at the railway station, where Henri Rochefort, editor of the Intransigeant, was welcomed home from his years of exile in England. The whole Paris mob seemed packed in the open square. In it were all the socialistic deputies. The revolutionary societies had brought out their last man, and stood in solid phalanx close to the station entrance, while thousands looked down from the windows and roofs.

The staff of the Intransigeant received the chief with great ceremony and cordiality. The speeches of welcome and replies lasted more than an hour, during which the throng outside cheered incessantly. The enthusiasm surpassed anything seen here since the Russian naval officers departed, but there was no disorder and no arrests.

Kingsville Village Almost Wiped Out of Existence—Other Losses.

Special to the Times.

LEAMINGTON, Ont., Feb. 6.—The village of Kingsville, about eight miles from here, was today visited by a disastrous fire, which destroyed a large portion of the business part on the south side of Talbot street. The fire appears to have originated in Shain's dry good's store, and extended either way, destroying the buildings known as the Dunlop, Andrew, Wigle's and the Conklin blocks. The sufferers, besides the owners of the buildings, are: W. J. Shain, dry goods; James Wigle, grocer; Thornton's millinery, Brown's barber shop, Pierce's grocery, S. L. McKay's hardware, Wriee's barber shop and the mechanics' institute, over S. L. McKay's hardware store. Loss $30,000; mostly covered by insurance.

DID SHE KILL HIM?

Brusseau Says Mrs. Pope Murdered Her Husband.

Special to the Times.

DETROIT, Mich., Feb. 6.—Brusseau adheres to his story that Mrs. Pope killed her husband, and says she told him so herself. According to his story the woman often proposed the deed and he quieted her with laudanum and sulfonal. He and Mrs. Pope had a drink of whiskey on the fatal night and Mrs. Pope proposed to kill her husband. Brusseau gave her twenty grains of sulfonal in two doses and sat up till 2.30. Mrs. Pope awakened him in the morning and told him she had "killed the Doc" and also the story he was to tell the police. Then the little girl was awakened and told what to say. Mrs. Pope threatened to lay the murder to him if he did not do as she wished.

Prosecuting Attorney Fraser will arraign both Brusseau and the woman on the charge of murder, but he believes Brusseau's story.

Heavy Loss in Cincinnati.

CINCINNATI, Ohio., Feb. 6.—The Bodman Leaf tobacco warehouse, a large structure on West Front street, near the Northern road of the suspension bridge, caught fire at 6.30 a.m., and is now a hollow ruin. The loss on stock is estimated at $340,000, and on building $60,000, fully insured.

HARRY GREEN'S WAY

Four Aces Will Always Beat Four Kings, but In This Case There Was Another Hand, Held by an "Outsider," That Was In at the Showdown.

Do you know how to play poker? If you do and chance to meet an old man who looks like a stockman from Montana, with money to burn, just looking for a good time, don't. If you do, you will be sorry.

A well known business man, who at one time kept a furniture store on State street and has retired from business, paid $1,400 for his experience with the Montana stockman.

As every one knows the furniture man, he may as well be called Smith. Mr. Smith, since he is not engaged actively in business, has been spending a share of his time in a down town bucket shop every day. One morning while Mr. Smith was watching the market and listening to the voice of the caller a stranger who "happened" to sit next him engaged him in conversation.

"Wheat is dull today, isn't it?" said the stranger.

"Yes," drawled Mr. Smith.

The ice had been broken, and the stranger, whose appearance indicated that he was a westerner, became communicative. He told Mr. Smith he had just come from Montana and was taking a little rest. He declared he had enough money to have some fun and pulled a big roll of fifties and hundreds out of his pocket to prove it.

"By gosh, I will have a good time, and if I don't it won't be no fault o' mine," said the Montana man as he got up to take a walk about the room.

Mr. Smith paid little attention to the incident until a man who had just entered and was leaning against the wall, and who had seen the stockman display his money, stepped up to him. He asked Mr. Smith if he knew the "old fellow." Mr. Smith said he did not, but the man had told him he was from Montana and had a good deal of money.

"Yes, I saw it," said stranger No. 2. "And do you know I think I could get it if we could get him into a poker game?"

After considerable persuasion Mr. Smith condescended to ask the stockman if he would play a little poker.

"Well, I don't mind," said the stockman, and arrangements were made to play in a down town hotel in the evening.

In the meantime the stranger had a quiet talk with Mr. Smith. He told him he was a professional gambler and knew how to "fix" the cards. They were to get the old man's money and divide the spoils. The plan was as follows: A deck was to be fixed up in which were two hands. Mr. Smith was to get four aces and the stockman four kings. The hands were to be sprung in the stockman's own deal. Stranger No. 2 fixed the cards and said: "Now, you keep the cards on your lap, and when it is the granger's deal I will attract his attention when he gives the cards to you to cut, and at that moment you substitute this deck for the one he hands you. But we must have another man. We can't play three handed."

Mr. Smith knew a great many men, he said, but they were all business men, and all of them were too busy to play. At the stranger's suggestion they started out together to look for the fourth man. They dropped into the Saratoga hotel, and stranger No. 2 saw a man who appeared much bored sitting near the window.

"Perhaps he will play. Shall I ask him?"

"Go ahead," said Mr. Smith.

Stranger No. 3 said he played poker, but not for money or with strangers.

No. 3 produced the card of an Iowa firm. "That's my card," said he.

"You're all right, then," said the stranger.

Mr. Smith then said, "I'm Mr. Smith, and every one around here knows me."

The stranger was still a little shy, but finally yielded to Mr. Smith's persuasions and agreed to sit in the game. The stockman was found in the barroom of the hotel. The quartet went around to a Monroe street hotel, and the game began.

The game dragged along for awhile without incident. After an hour or so it came the stockman's deal. He shuffled the cards clumsily and handed them to Mr. Smith to cut. At that moment the stockman was seized with a fit of "sneezing," and stranger No. 2 gave Mr. Smith a signal to run in the "cold deck." He did it successfully. In the deal Mr. Smith got four aces, according to programme. He made a good bet, and the stockman, as he expected, raised him handsomely. But to Mr. Smith's surprise and gratification the Saratoga hotel stranger also staid. No. 2 dropped out, of course.

He bet with confidence, and so did the stockman, and, to Mr. Smith's continued delight, the stranger kept coming in. He didn't raise any bets, but just staid.

The betting was lively and lasted until Mr. Smith came to the end of his pile and had $1,400 on the table. He was kicking because he didn't have more, but had to call for a show.

"Well, I am sorry for you, my friend," said the stockman, "but I have four big kings," and he started to rake in the pot.

"You needn't feel sorry, old man," exclaimed Mr. Smith triumphantly. "I have four aces. The money is mine. Did you think I was bluffing?" and he started to grab the money and checks.

"Hold on, hold on!" spoke up No. 3. "Ain't I in this? I've got a straight flush."

It was like a voice from the tombs to Mr. Smith, and the game broke up.

An adjournment was taken to the bar, but the straight flush man and the stockman got away as quickly as possible, leaving Mr. Smith and his friend. His friend proceeded to give Mr. Smith a terrible roasting.

"Confound you," said he, "I thought you said you knew how to play poker. You've made a nice mess of it. Here we are broke, and the makeshift that we picked up gets all the money. We might just as well have had all that stockman's money and the other fellow's too!"

Mr. Smith's friend talked in this strain until Mr. Smith was convinced that he was a double distilled idiot and knew nothing about the noble American game. Then Mr. Smith's friend bade him a sorrowful and indignant good night and left, leaving him to wonder how the outsider got the straight flush.

If Mr. Smith had only known that the stockman was Harry Green, one of the smoothest confidence men and gamblers in the world, all would have been different. He has played that same kind of a game for 20 years and in that time has caught many a fish. Stranger No. 3 was his Baltimore partner, Fred Porter. He, and Harry Green made barrels of money years ago on the big Atlantic liners, and stranger No. 2 was a well known Chicago gambler who came in for a share of the "divvy."—Chicago Tribune.

PROVISION FOR LADY THOMPSON.

The Imperial Government to be Asked to Make a Grant.

Special to the Times.

LONDON, Feb. 7.—John Heywood Johnstone, Conservative member for the Horsham division of Sussex, has given notice that tomorrow he will ask Sir William Harcourt, Chancellor of the Exchequer, whether it is the intention of the Government to make pecuniary provision for Lady Thompson and the junior members of the family of the late Sir John Thompson, Premier of the Dominion of Canada.

Linwood Suspects Arrested.

DRAYTON, Feb. 7.—Constable C. W. Parcill, of Linwood, was in town yesterday on the track of the man and woman who are the parties implicated in the disappearance of a child at Linwood, the other day, by burning. Constable T. Flath, Drayton, arrested the man and woman near Goldstone yesterday morning and turned them over to Constable Parcill. The man gives the name of Archibald Dancey, Holt P. O., and says the woman is his wife. They are tramping through the country begging, but deny having had a child with them when in or near Linwood, and say they went into the woods and built a fire because they had been refused shelter at some farmhouse and were cold. Constable Parcill leaves this p. m. with the prisoners for Linwood.

The Whiteway Ministry.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., Feb. 7.—It is rumored that the Whiteway Ministry will be gazetted today. It is probable that the new Cabinet will be made up of Sir William Whiteway and Messrs. Bond, Morris, Woods, Emerson and Duff. The allotment of offices has not yet been made. Much dissatisfaction exists among the rank and file of the Whitewayites at their treatment. They claim that they have not been consulted. It is expected that the new Ministry will meet with an unfavorable reception when it faces the Legislature.

PREACHER AND ROBBER.

A Baptist Preacher Caught in the Act of Plundering a Bank.

Special to the Times.

PORTLAND, Ore., Feb. 7.—Yesterday afternoon a man entered the First National Bank of East Portland and presented a revolver, called on Cashier E. T. Holgate, who was alone in the bank, to throw up his hands. The cashier complied, and the intruder bound and gagged him, after which he started to empty the coin tray into a sack which he carried.

At this juncture the cashier of the Citizen's Bank across the street, who saw the affair, rushed in with a shot gun and arrested the robber, who was turned over to the police. The thief was identified as the Rev. J. F. Reid, a Baptist minister.

Reid came into notoriety a few months ago by disappearing after leaving his clothes on the river bank to give the impression that he had been drowned. He afterwards turned up in Illinois, where he claimed to be suffering from mental troubles.

When Reid entered the bank he wore a long false beard but in the scuffle it was torn off, revealing his identity.

CITY AND COUNTY NEWS

LOCAL AND DISTRICT HAPPENINGS OF THE DAY.

Ladies' Aid.

On Tuesday afternoon the annual meeting for election of officers of the George street Methodist church was held and the following officers were elected: President, Mrs. (Rev.) W. R. Young; vice-president, Mrs. Monroe; secretary, Mrs. Brown; treasurer, Mrs. Glass.

Arranging for Ice Races.

This afternoon a meeting will he held at the Oriental, of several citizens interested in ice racing, the purpose being to arrange for the holding of races on Little Lake some time this month. A fund has been started already, and it is altogether likely that Peterborough will have ice racing at an early date.

A Store Window Blaze.

The contents of Mr. J. C. Stenson's store window were burned on Wednesday night. One of the employees accidentally ignited some cotton batting while lighting the gas. The damage done amounted to nearly $100, covered by insurance. The prompt application of several pails of water prevented the fire from spreading in the store.

Separate School Board.

At the last regular meeting of the Separate School Board, the following motion was carried: On motion of Mr. LeHane, seconded by Mr. Hickey, the resignation of Rev. Father Collins, as local superintendent, was accepted with regret, and the thanks of the Board tendered the reverend gentlemen for the valued services rendered the Board while acting in that capacity.

They Were Satisfied.

The Harboard Street Collegiate Hockey seven of Toronto remained over until yesterday afternoon in order to have another dash with the local collegiate team as they were not satisfied with the result of the night before. The Peterborough boys easily satisfied them when they defeated them by a score of 13 to 5. King, Bellegham and Crossley played a great game, while the work of Hamilton as goal met with loud applause from the spectators. The Toronto boys left for home at 4.30 yesterday afternoon.

McCarthy's Meeting Tonight.

Mr. D'Alton McCarthy will address a public meeting in the Opera House to-night. He will arrive in Peterborough on the 5.13 G.T.R. this afternoon, and will be met at the station by a deputation of the McCarthy League. From the station, the distinguished gentlemen will be escorted to the Grand Central Hotel and before going to the Opera House will hold a conference with his supporters. Following closely on the heels of the Conservative rally, Mr. McCarthy's utterances will be most interesting. His acknowledged ability, and his clear conception and able handling of the important questions of the day, should insure him a popular and enthusiastic demonstration.

THE VISITING MINISTERS.

failing. Continuing, the speaker compared the expenditure of the present Administration from 1888 to 1893 with that of the provinces under Liberal Administration, proving the increase in the former case to have been from 16 to 64 per cent. as against a quarter of one per cent. in the former. The doctor referred to Mr. Laurier's statement at Massey Hall, in Toronto, that he thought was ungenerous to the Conservative party. He had stated that Mr. Mackenzie had been abused and vilified by the Conservative party, and given the most unkind treatment, "treatment," said he, "that would make any Conservative blush for shame." So far as the speaker's knowledge of the Conservative party was concerned he absolutely denied that statement. (Hear, hear.) They had criticised Mr. Mackenzie's policy and administration, as they had a right to do, and as they would do again, or that of Mr. Laurier or anyone else but they had criticised it honestly and manfully, and the people had declared they were right in 1878. (Hear, hear.) Mr. Mackenzie had made mistakes and his judgment was not always correct, but he (Dr. Montague) believed he had been actuated by an honest purpose and had endeavored to do right, and, as his character was so high, perhaps it would be well to tell them what Mr. Mackenzie thought of his associates, the men who were now seeking their assistance to get into office. In 1875 he had said of them in a letter written to a friend, that he would like to be relieved of the Public Works Department, as friends expected to be benefited by offices for which they were unfit, and that he was compelled to lie on his arms night and day, and feared that he had offended at least twenty friends by his defence of the citadel. He (Dr. Montague) wished to call their attention to the fact that the man who had defended the citadel was gone, but the fellows who wanted to assault and rob it were still with them, and were appealing to them under various guises for support, and they were the same men whom the people had turned out of office for incapacity and dishonesty in 1878.

Continuing, the speaker said that for years the Liberal party had been attacking the National Policy, but it was only recently they had openly declared their determination to sweep away that policy when, once in power. And Sir Richard Cartwright had announced the N. P. to be worse than war or famine. Mr. Laurier had himself asserted that he would not rest until he had wiped out every protective measure in the country. These are not his (Dr. Montague) statements, but those of the Liberal leaders; and when you go to the poll you should bear in mind that you are either casting your ballot for "the removal of a fiscal policy" or for Protection. Don't forget this.

Continuing, the speaker referred to the commercial and widespread depression that prevailed, in the midst of which Canada stood "as a chimney in a heap of smoking ruins," said the Financial News, of London, England, a paper which kept a keen eye on the commercial world. The Dominion, said that paper, was the only country which had successfully weathered the financial disasters in which other nations had gone down. What better testimony of the value of their National Policy could they have? How would they have stood if they had adopted Commercial Union or Unrestricted Reciprocity? Was there a Liberal that would say they would have been better off? Why, during the Mackenzie Administration farm laborers farmers and mechanics travelled to Ottawa and petitioned the Government for relief, so great was the depression in trade. The cause of this was our markets were teeming with foreign produce and manufactured goods; our own people were consuming the products of others, and still there was an imposed tariff of 17 1-2 per cent. at that time. Notwithstanding this the Reform party will ask you to vote for the destruction of the N. P. Free Trade will not necessarily accrue from the introduction of the Opposition's policy; it means throwing open our own markets without receiving the same privileges from abroad. The only way to secure Free Trade is to keep the tariff up against the world and negotiating with other countries for reciprocal relations, where beneficial to ourselves. When the world ever gets our markets it is independent of us and we would not then be in a position to demand equal consideration in return. The speaker then reviewed the history of European countries which had tried free trade in this century. It each case it had been disastrous, proving that only under very exceptional circumstances could such a policy be successfully operated. There were three things that the Conservative party had striven for and meant to hold to. First, that if they could not get another market they should at least hold on to their own; secondly, that as the Government was compelled to impose a tariff for revenue they proposed to place it where it would insure the most employment to their own people; and, thirdly, that as they had to impose a tariff they would do it themselves and not permit a foreign nation to do so. (Applause.)

Continuing, the doctor opined that even the Reformers were in favor of a protective policy where their own individual interests were concerned and instanced the action taken by the city of Brantford in granting a bonus to retain the Waterous Manufacturing Co. in the city. He felt quite confident that the member for that constituency, Mr. Paterson, a Reformer, favored the measure, and would wager him a bran new suit of clothes that he voted in favor of the bonus rather than it should remove to some other locality. He referred to the fact that no taxes go to the Government excepting those on wines, liquors and cigars and the customs. Regarding the former the man who takes a glass of liquor does not care much for what he is taxed for the indulgence, and the more he drinks the less he cares.

The doctor expatiated upon the economical action of the Government, in reducing the tariff to the extent of two million dollars during the past five years. The policy of the present administration is to reduce taxation on the necessaries of life, and keep it up where it will ensure the nation's interests in the employment of Canadian workingmen. He referred in glowing terms to the Governments refusing to treat with the United States on their stipulated condition of discriminating against the Mother Country and alluded to the protection we enjoy from her protection. He urged his audience to ever remember the praiseworthy sentiment:

> "A British subject I was born,
> A British subject I will die,"

and hoped the young men would stand forth with the Conservative party and defend the Dominion against the enemies of Canadian and British interests. (Loud Cheers.)

HON. JOHN HAGGART,

Minister of Railways and Canals, received three hearty British cheers on being introduced by the chairman. His welcome was undoubtedly doubly assured by the expectancy of the audience in receiving a statement of the Government's intentions regarding the Trent Valley Canal. He was sorry time would not permit of a lengthy speech, and would be as brief and concise as possible. Referring to the date of the coming election, he said it would be some time shortly within a week or a month or a year—it is bound to come. (laughter.) He corroborated the previous speaker's statements regarding the fiscal policy of the two parties, and divided the Opposition's statement that the Administration could be conducted at a less expenditure than at present—$36,000,000. They said they could work with a reduced tariff, but when asked to explain their proposed method of economical administration, one can never get them to particularize. He opined the advent of the Laurier party into power would prove ruinous to the country, especially should they carry out the same policy that ruined Quebec, under the administration of Mr. Mercier, condemned the proposed policy of Mr. Laurier, that of destroying the present protective tariff which would prove deterimental to the interests of the country at large. Alluding to the specific taxation enjoyed by the great Free Trade country, Great Britain, and maintained that it was levelled up by taxation on income, mortgages, horses, and many other luxuries enjoyed by the wealthy. Should Mr. Laurier succeed in abolishing our tariff we would have neither specific nor customs taxation. We promised to place the taxes so as not to prohibit importation. We cannot have improved articles and machinery, but by competition, which tends to keep up the skill of artizans. He opined that our woollen, cotton and leather goods were as good as any manufactured in the world, with which we can successfully compete under the Protective Policy. Our agricultural implements also are excellent, and are being exported to Australia and other countries, which demonstrates that we can not only supply our own markets in the face of competition, but can secure markets all over the world. The iron of this Dominion of ours will also compare favorably with that of foreign powers, and had an import been placed upon this metal early enough we should now be enjoying the same advantages in this respect as the United States, the iron of which is no better than our own. In Alabama they are now producing pig iron at $6.75 per ton cheaper than that which can be imported, which is the result of a Protective Tariff. He believed the N. P. would have in time the same result regarding the metal as it had in United States, and in this country regarding leather, woollen and cotton goods, etc. The N. P. affords protective to our home industries and ensures our own market to our own people, which is now the policy of every country in the world. Continuing, the speaker alluded to the Free Trade of England, concerning which Lord Salisbury has stated that the day is coming when England will have to adopt the Protective Tariff. He referred to the action of Great Britain in giving a percentage of her steel rail industry to Germany and Belgium in order to keep the trade that was originally her own.

Continuing, the speaker was positive that a sweeping away of the N. P. would prove disastrous to the country producing depression even worse than that of the United States last year, when over 450 banks were wiped out. Alluding to the policy of the reformers he presumed it would receive as decent a burial as their Commercial Union and unrestricted reciprocity, when the electors thoroughly understand the situation (cheers).

In conclusion, the speaker said he had a word or two to say regarding the Government's intentions with reference to the Trent Valley Canal. (Loud and prolonged cheers.) It will undoubtedly be completed as fast as the finances of the county will permit. They had already awarded the contract for that section from Balsam Lake to Lake Simcoe to Mr. Onderdonk, which will be placed under way at once, and will be finished by the end of next summer. The contract for the section from Peterborough to Lakefield will be let immediately, the plans therefore are prepared and the other sections will be proceeded with as soon as practicable. He hopes to live long enough to see as Minister of Railways and Canals the whole thing completed. He eulogised Mr. Stevenson for the interest he had manifested in the matter and he remarked that he lived in dread of his importunities in this direction. He believed the canal will prove beneficial to the country, for should only a few boats pass over it each day it will have a tendency to regulate railway freights. The Conservative Government always fulfilled its promises, and if this section of the country has as much right to beneficial improvements as any other, he hoped to see both Mr. Stevenson and Mr. Burnham returned at the pending election, for both gentlemen were beloved by the Conservative members of the House. (Cheers.)

A vote of thanks was unanimously tendered the several speakers and the chairman, after which the meeting dispersed with three rousing cheers.

THE CHILDREN'S AID SOCIETY.

Editor of the Times.

DEAR SIR,—Mr. John Sawers announced to me this morning that he was going "to fight the Children's Aid Society from the word, go!" He was no doubt riled just then because our agent, Mr. Miller, had investigated a case requiring the Charity Committee's attention. An applicant had knocked at the Relief Officer's door but as Mr. Sawers was not within our agent took the complaint and investigated. He reported the facts to Mr. Sawers who received our "meddlesome interference" with very bad grace. I endeavored to explain to Mr. Sawers that the Society was a purely benevolent institution looking to the protection and the rescue not to the punishment of people. To this he answered that the "poor man's house was his castle" and that we were invading the poor man's rights. I characterised this as a false and maliciously false statement, made for the purpose of belying a society that is only one of a vast number the world over. Must the two governments that provided the enlightened legislation taken from similar legislation in England and other countries where the system has been tried and found a godsend to the poor, for whose benefit it was primarily established, undo the legislative work? Must we, too, withdraw from a friendly co-operation with like minded people because Mr. Sawers says it is a fad? I would treat his statement with silent contempt, but his misstatements I am advised to attack. We appeal to public sentiment. If the facts are against us, then we ought to fail, but if they are distinctly in our favor, we ask the public to judge us accordingly.

Our sole aim is to HELP the poor and defenceless, and we have shown in the courts that we are no respectors of persons. Mr. Sawers vehemently denounced the large expenditure for charity. "There was $3,000 spent for charity last year and I'm going to stop it," he said; and this too from the poor man's friend.

Yours, etc.,
HAMPDEN BURNHAM.

Personal.

Mr. John O'Meara, barrister, of Ottawa, is spending a few days in town renewing acquaintances. Mr. O'Meara has filled the office of Reeve of Huntington, a suburb of Ottawa, for several years. He is the nominee for parliament of the Junior Conservative Association of Ottawa, and his chances of election are very good.

Mr. Alf. Jackson, the popular representative of the Dominion Brewery, Toronto, spent yesterday in town, calling on the many customers of his company. The excellent brands of ale brewed by the Dominion finds a large consumption all over Ontario and Mr. Jackson is kept hustling to look after the flow of orders. He reports business brisk and the demand for his goods greater than ever.

A Metal Breadboard

THE WOMAN WHO HAS BEEN USED to kneading dough on the old fashioned wooden breadboard knows what a bother it is to get them clean and how cumbersome and heavy they are. When they begin to crack or check it is almost impossible to thoroughly cleanse them, and they may easily become dangerous coveyances of disease. It was left for a woman, of course, to remedy this state of affairs, and Mrs. M. M. Everhard, of St. Joseph, Mich., has patented a metal bread board, which is one of the greatest labor-savers imaginable. It is light, does not absorb grease, dough does not adhere to it, and while it possesses all the advantages of the marble bread board it is much cheaper and, of course, far lighter and easier to handle. If readers want to confer a favor upon their wives that will be forever appreciated, let them send $1 to the manufacturers, 101 Bay street, Toronto, for one of these boards.

FOUR KILLED!

Grand Trunk Pitch-in Near Toronto.

17 HURT, SOME FATALLY.

CARS CATCH ON FIRE!

Special to The Times.

TORONTO, Feb. 8.—A pitch-in on the Grand Trunk Railway, near Weston, ten miles west of this city, occurred at 2.30 this afternoon, instantly killing four and injuring some 16 or 17 of the passengers, some fatally.

No. 4. express from Detroit became stalled in the snow, when No. 6 mail and express crashed into her, telescoping the Pullman car, which immediately caught on fire, consuming it and train No. 4's express, baggage and second-class cars. The passengers were buried under the debris, some scalding and burning and others freezing in the intense cold.

It is now storming very heavily and most of the Grand Trunk trains are cancelled.

AN EXPRESS IN COLLISION

A Disastrous Railway Smash on the New York Central.

Special to the Times.

NEWBURG, N.Y., Feb. 8.—A collision occurred this morning between the Montreal express and a freight train, at New Hamburg depot on the New York Central. Three engines are off the track.

NEWBURG, N.Y., Feb. 8.—The accident occurred about three o'clock this morning. The caboose of the freight train was broken to pieces but nobody was hurt. Wrecking crews are at the scene and will probably have the tracks cleared by noon. The lights on the freight train were obscured by the snowstorm and were not seen by the engineer of the express.

THE ARMENIANS.

The Commission—A Special Moslem Enquiry—A Project of Armenian Reform.

Special to The Times.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Feb. 8.—A letter received here from Moosh states that prior to the departure of the Armenian Commission another commission, composed of Mussulman officials from Erzinghian, was sent to Moosh by order of the Sultan, to enquire into and report upon the true state of affairs there. As soon as the first commission arrived at Moosh, each inhabitant of Sassoun who had escaped the massacres and sought refuge at Moosh wished to submit a statement of his grievances in the Turkish language, but Tansin Pasha ordered all the professional letter-writers to write nothing for the Armenians under severe penalties. The Armenians then attempted to present a memorial to the commission in Armenia, but they were driven from the place where the commission was sitting by the guards. The letter also says that the members of the commission included among their number a certain Turkish major who took part in "repressing" the Armenians who were charged with causing disturbances.

The Sultan has ordered Prince Caratheodori Pasha to prepare a project of Armenian reforms. The first draft of the scheme has been submitted to the Sultan, who considered it incomplete. The Prince was instructed to make the scheme as final as possible. He is one of the most able and honest Greeks in the Turkish service. He has been Foreign Minister, and was Turkey's envoy to the Berlin Congress.

Turkish officials arrested the Abbot of the French Catholic Brotherhood at Ismidt for a trivial offence. The French Minister demanded that an apology be made by Turkey, and that the officials who made the arrest be dismissed. He further demanded that the Abbot be reinstated in his office with full pomp. The Porte apologized for the arrest, but refused to do anything further in the matter, whereupon the French despatch boat Petrel was sent to Ismidt, where she landed sailors, who formally reinstated the Abbot.

AN INMATE BURNED TO DEATH.

The Woman's Clothing Caught Fire From a Stove.

Special to the Times.

TORONTO, Feb. 8.—A sad accident occurred at the York Industrial Home Tuesday. An old lady by the name of Mary Lovett, one of the inmates, was standing before the fire in one of the bath rooms warming herself when her clothes caught on fire, and although every effort was made to put the fire out she was so badly burned that she died the following day, Wednesday. The coroner was sent for, but after hearing the facts of the case he decided that an inquest was unnecessary.

◆

Major Harrison, for twelve years an officer of the Royal Grenadiers, Canadian militia, and well and popularly known in the service, died at his residence at Toronto Thursday morning.

La Croix du Canada says that in one month the year will have expired during which the Federal Government has the power of disallowing the last Manitoba School Act, and wants to know what the Ministers are waiting for.

STORMS IN EUROPE.

Very Severe Weather Throughout Britain—Snowstorms on the Continent.

Special to the Times.

LONDON, Feb. 8.—The storms which have been so severely impeding traffic recently throughout Great Britain are becoming more severe. The Highlands of Scotland are completely isolated, and all the railroads are blocked with snow. An unknown vessel has foundered off Port Patrick, Scotland, with the loss of seven lives; and a two masted steamer, having white smoke stacks with a black band around them, is ashore on the Isle of Man. The River Thames is frozen over at Chelsea, and the Scheldt at Antwerp is covered with ice. At Antwerp the thermometer registered 15 degrees below zero, centigrade, the lowest point recorded for 20 years. In Wales thousands of people are out of work on account of severe weather.

LONDON, Feb. 8.—A despatch to the Standard from Vienna says that at several stations on the railway to Fiume the snow is twenty feet deep. Snowploughs are useless. Traffic has been interrupted for the last ten days. Four persons were frozen to death while on their way to a market town in the Province of Bukovina.

A SCAPEGRACE IN JAIL.

Chief Justice Fuller's Son-in-Law Charged With Defrauding a Hotelkeeper.

Special to the Times.

SIOUX CITY, Ia., Feb. 8.—J. Matthew Aubrey, of Chicago, the scapegoat son-in-law of Chief Justice Fuller, who eloped six years ago from Chicago with Pauline Fuller and married her in Milwaukee, is in jail here for defrauding a hotelkeeper.

When he was arrested he declared that he was a brother of the son-in-law of Fuller. The police have received a letter from Chicago which told his real identity. When questioned he admitted the truth to the officers. His father is General Western Agent for the Merchants' Fast Freight line at Chicago, and is expected here to help him out of the scrape.

ADMITS HIS OFFENCE.

The Ex-Police Magistrate of Nanaimo in Jail on a Serious Charge.

Special to the Times.

NANAIMO, B. C., Feb. 8.—Ex-Police Magistrate Joseph P. Planta is now an inmate of the provincial jail and awaiting trial, charged with the misappropriation of $1,280, funds belonging to the estate of the late Fred Humkey, of which he was official administrator. Planta admits his offence. Several other charges of a similar nature involving large amounts, will be proceeded with later.

TWO STEAMERS OVERDUE.

THE LA GASCOGNE AND TEUTONIC STILL UNHEARD FROM.

A Hurricane at Sea—Part of a Good-Sized Vessel, with Three Dead Bodies, Washed Ashore on the Massachusetts Coast.

Special to the Times.

NEW YORK, Feb. 8.—No tidings have been received from any quarter of the French line steamship La Gascogne, which is now more than four days overdue. The England, from London, about three days behind her usual time, and the Dutch tank steamer steamer La Flandre, from Antwerp, arrived early this morning. La Flandre reports that she experienced a hurricane on January 30, lasting nine hours, and another on February 2, which assumed cyclonic force, coming out from the east-southeast, changing to northeast, lasting twelve hours, with heavy head seas, snow and hail, and severe cold weather, accompanied by dense vapor. The White Star Line steamer Teutonic, from Liverpool, which was due here yesterday morning, has not yet been sighted.

VINEYARD HAVEN, Mass., Feb. 8.—The after part of a good-sized vessel, covered with ice, with what appears to be the lifeless bodies of three men encased in the ice and frozen to the top of the cabin, has drifted ashore on this island.

LONDON, Feb. 8.—The Cunard steamer Cephalonia, from Boston Jan. 26 for Liverpool, passed Browhead this morning, between two and three days behind her schedule time. She signalled that she was in need of coal.

The steamer Princess May, with passengers and mails, which left Larne, Ireland, for Stranraer, Scotland, at 6 o'clock last evening, had not arrived at the latter place at 8 o'clock this morning, though it should have taken her only two hours to make the passage. The steamer Princess May arrived at Stranraer at 11 o'clock today. Her passengers were unable to proceed further, the railways being blocked with snow.

SOUTHAMPTON, Feb. 8.—The steamer Lahn from New York, reports having experienced easterly gales for five days. She was compelled to stop of eight hours by the violence of the weather.

PARIS, Feb. 8.—At the offices of the Compagnie Generale Trans Atlantique this morning it was stated that nothing had yet been heard of the missing steamer La Gasconge, now five days overdue at New York.

QUEENSTOWN, Feb. 7.—The steamer Cephalonia, from Boston, has arrived here and is taking on coal. She experienced terrific easterly and westerly gales during the passage, and had part of her port rail carried away. Her passengers state that on Thursday last a vessel was seen showing a blazing light, like the burning of a tar barrel, and blowing her fog horn. The light soon vanished, and nothing more was seen of it.

BERLIN, Feb. 8.—In the Reichstag today Barons Von Stumm-Halberg and Von Manteuffel introduced requests to the Government to take immediate measures to minimize the occurrence of disasters on the high seas.

Some of the Teutonic's Passengers.

TORONTO, Feb. 8.—Chas. Cockshutt, of Cockshutt & Co. of Front street, is one of the passengers on the Teutonic, as are also the two daughters of W. T. Murray, who is at present in New York awaiting the arrival of the ship.

Sir William Van Horne and R. B. Angus are also passengers on the Teutonic.

It is not expected that they are any Torontonians on the Gascogne.

Lord Goes on Suspended Sentence.

LONDON, Ont., Feb. 8.—John M. Lord, who pleaded guilty to stealing about $1,700 of London West money while acting as tax collector, was brought before Judge Elliott for sentence on the four charges to which he had pleaded guilty. Three petitions were presented to the court asking for leniency, the offences occurring through lack of business ability and His Lordship allowed the prisoner to go on suspended sentence.

THE WAR IN THE EAST.

CHINESE FLEET PRACTICALLY NOT IN EXISTENCE.

Possible Peace Terms—The Powers Interfering to Put an End to Further Hostilities—The Wei Hai Wei Fight.

Special to the Times.

LONDON, Feb. 8.—A despatch from Shanghai to the Central News says that on Sunday a number of Chinese soldiers attacked Captain Cartwright, of the British warship Pigeon, in the streets of Nankin, hooting at him and pelting him with mud. No reparation for the assault has been made.

DESPERATE NAVAL FIGHT.

A despatch from Wei Hai Wei, dated Feb. 5th, says that the Chinese fleet has practically ceased to exist. The ironclad Chen Yuen and her sister ship, the Ling Yuen, have been sunk, and other vessels of the Chinese fleet are within the grasp of the Japanese. The despatch adds that at daybreak on Sunday the Japanese fleet opened fire on the Lui King forts, which replied vigorously. The bombardment became terrible. The first Japanese division, including the flagship, directed its fire against the Eastern Island batteries, while the second division shelled Fort Zhih. The Chinese fleet soon came to the assistance of the forts. The Ting Yuen used her 37-ton gun without effect, but succeeded in diverting some of the Japanese fire from the forts to herself. The Lai Yuen, a smaller ship, was also fought well. She sustained much damage. There were many casualties. Two Chinese gunboats also assisted, but were not badly damaged. These four vessels fought desperately until dark, when the firing ceased on both sides.

THE WEI HAI WEI FIGHT.

YOKOHAMA, Feb. 8.—An official despatch received here from Wei Hai Wei, dated February 3, says:—"The Japanese flying squadron today bombarded the forts, which, assisted by the Chinese warships, resisted obstinately. Admiral Ting (the Chinese naval commander) is determined to hold the forts on Li Kung Tao island and the ships under his command. Another attack by torpedo boats will be made tonight."

POSSIBLE PEACE TERMS.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Feb. 8.—The cable despatch from London showing a purpose on the part of Great Britain, France, and Russia to interfere at the proper stage of hostilities between Japan and China has attracted much attention in diplomatic circles here, and has acquired additional significance when taken in conjunction with the recent speech from the throne in the British Parliament. The latter, in a very guarded and diplomatic manner, hinted that when the time came the relations between the great powers would be found sufficiently harmonious to ensure the restoration of peace between Japan and China. By the terms of the understanding, as reported, Japan will not be permitted to acquire an inch of territory on the Chinese mainland. This, of course, would prevent her retaining Port Arthur or Wei Hai Wei, the great Chinese naval strongholds, or any part of Manchuria, which she has occupied after hard fighting. But, on the other hand, it is believed here that the statement carries a distinct intimation that Japan may claim the great Island of Formosa, which is a most important strategical position. This is inhabited by fierce Malay tribes, who have never been subjugated, and even after their long nominal possession the Chinese have been unable to do more than get a foothold on the coast. It has been confidently expected here that the European powers would intervene between Japan and China whenever it should appear that the latter country was really vanquished, and was suing in vain for peace upon reasonable terms. But so far as the despatch referred to indicates any possibility of action in that line by the United States in conjunction with the other powers, it is clearly erroneous, for it can be positively stated that under no probable conditions can the President be induced to depart so far from our established policy of non-intervention. It is no cause of surprise here that Germany, too, will refrain from joining in an intervention which would be surely distasteful to Japan, for the latest reports from our Consuls in the latter country show that the German traders are making extraordinary progress in supplanting all other foreigners, even Americans, in securing control of the valuable Japanese foreign trade.

Two Bandits Killed.

CLAREMONT, I. T., Feb. 8.—Last night Jim French and Slaughter Kid undertook to rob the general merchandise store of W. B. Patten at Catoosa, about twelve miles south of here. The bandits were recognized as they rode into town. They dismounted before the store of W. B. Patten, when a Texas cowboy from within opened fire on them, instantly killing Slaughter Kid with his second shot. He fired a third shot at Jim French, but missed. Having no more cartridges, he secreted his revolver. French entered the store, and accused the cowboy of killing his partner in crime, but the cowbow protested that he had no gun, hence he was not the one; whereupon French turned and shot Manager Irvin, chief clerk of the store, through the body. Irvin drew a revolver and returned the fire, shooting French through the body and through the right eye. French managed to reach his horse, and, mounting, rode to a house a short distance away. The owner of the house at once informed the town officers, and a crowd assembled to capture the dying bandit. The latter, hearing them approach, raised himself and looked out of the window, and at that instant received a load of buckshot in the face, almost tearing his head off. He died instantly. Mr. Irvin's death is expected hourly.

The Watters Case Adjourned.

OTTAWA, Feb. 8.—The case against Thos. J. Watters, acting Commissioner of Customs, was called in the Police Court this morning. A. Ferguson, Q.C., who appeared for Mr. Watters, asked for a postponement of the case for a week. Mr. Hogg, Q.C., who was present for the Crown, consented to, this being done, and Police Magistrate O'Gara agreed. Bail was renewed, Mr. Watters for $2,000, and James Isberter and Joseph Kavangh $1,000 each. The case was postponed until Thursday next.

The Steamer Alpha Overdue.

HALIFAX, N. S., Feb. 8.—The steamer Alpha is three days overdue from Bermuda, a most unusual thing for this boat. She should have been on the coast on Monday, but probably met the strong northwest gales of the past three days. Possibly the Alpha may have something to report of the overdue La Gascogne. The steamer Baracoa, from New York, is also overdue.

A SUCCESSFUL YEAR.

A Great Record for Twelve Months.

MARKED ADVANCES MADE

Annual Meeting of the North American Life Assurance Society.

The annual meeting of this company was held at its head office, Toronto, Tuesday, January 29th, 1895. John L. Blaikie, Esq., president, was appointed chairman, and William McCabe secretary, when the following report was submitted:—

The directors have much pleasure, at the close of such a year of financial stringency as 1894, in presenting a report showing so many proofs of continued prosperity in every important branch of the company's work.

During the year applications for new insurances and restorations were received for $3,028,920, and insurances thereon for $2,850,460 were granted, being an increase considerably in excess of that of any former year. The premiums actually received in cash show an increase of $63,859 63, being by far the largest of any year in the company's history.

The interest on the investments was well paid, and coupled with the premium income, aggregates $558,394.93, a strong proof of the solidity of the business and investments of the company.

The assets amount to $1,987,446.30, of which the large sum of $244,510 represents the addition to the reserve fund, which now amounts to $1,564,020. Dur-the year the sum of $133 426.52 was paid to policy-holders, and after making full provision, on the most conservative basis, for every liability, there remains the relatively large sum of $338.216 as net surplus available for policy holders. It is pleasing to report that the results of the company's investment policies which matured during the year gave, as heretofore, entire satisfaction to the holders. The allocation of surplus to the investment policies maturing in 1895 was approved as recommended by the company's consulting actuary, whose report of the company's work for 1894 is herewith submitted. The books of the company were closed on the last day of the year, and, as heretofore, the full Government report was promptly mailed to the Superintendent of Insurance at Ottawa.

The auditor made a complete audit of the company's affairs monthly, and at the close of the year verified the cash in hand and in banks, and also examined each mortgage and every other security held by the company. This report, and also that of the Auditing Committee, which made a minute audit quarterly, are herewith submitted. The services of the company's staff of officers, inspectors, and agents continue to deserve special commendation.

JOHN L. BLAIKIE,
President.

WILLIAM McCABE,
Managing Director.
JAMES CARLYLE, M. D.,
Auditor.

Auditing Committee of the Board.
EDWARD GALLEY, JAMES SCOTT.

To the Directors of the North American Life Asurance Co.:

Gentlemen.—I have made a very careful investigation of your methods and systems of business as they are indicated by your books, accounts, and various home office records. I cannot refrain from saying that this investigation has been unusually interesting to me, because it has so very clearly and conclusively proven to me the great degree of executive and administrative capacity brought to bear by the officers of your company upon even the minute details of the business.

One consideration has been very forcibly impressed upon my mind as I examined your books and records, and enquired into various details of your business, that the North American Life is being built up on a foundation that is faultless. The structure that you are rearing, year by year, could never have attained such perfect harmony of outline and proportion, and never could have been so solid and enduring as it now is, if the foundation of the company's business had been hastily or carelessly laid in the initial years of your corporate existence.

Life insurance companies are subjected to such a searching public and official scrutiny in every detail of their business, that it is of vital import that no flaw shall be permitted to impair their usefulness or weaken their claim to public confidence.

If you wish to know the secret of your success, you must look back to what you and your executive officers did in 1881. What you have done since then has been in harmony with the foundation you then laid. You then gave the stamp of your approval and adoption to methods, plans, and systems that appealed to a conservative judgment, and which were consistent with an enduring success, and success has followed almost as a matter of course.

In view of the serious depression in business circles during the past two years, your increase in premium income is very noteworthy, and will be found to be very unusual. The increase of $63,859.65 in premium income for 1894 evidences the adaptability of your agency staff, and proves that it consists of men of vigour and intelligence who know how to apply their energies with the best effect.

Your gain in interest receipts speak well for the judiciousness of your investments. The comparatively high rates of interest obtainable is something for which the holders of your deferred dividend policies may be profoundly grateful.

The valuation of your assets, and the determination of your liabilities, have been conducted conservatively, and they show a clear surplus of $338,216.75. This surplus fund shows beyond any question the absolute security you are enabled to offer to policy-holders during even the severest of monetary depression. The profits you are in a position to earn are very largely in excess of what can be earned by companies debarred from privileges of being able to invest their assets in Canadian securities.

Policy-holders are often carried away by the size or age of a life company. The crucial test is the ratio of assets to total liabilities. Next in order of importance, probably, stands the surplus and surplus-earning power of a company.

With assets held down to a rigid gold basis, you nevertheless fully cover every liability, and have a large margin of safety over and above every requirement.

Undoubtedly the North American Life Assurance Company has attained that degree of solidity which can best be understood by comparison with any of the large companies. In all essentials—especially those of acquired surplus and surplus-earning power—it is not excelled to-day by any other company.

Insurers are too apt to overlook these requisites and give undue importance to mere age and size, which, unsupported by other valuable considerations, really count for nothing. Illustrations of this can be seen to-day in the United States, where many of the smaller companies, although forced into competition with their larger rivals, are giving much better and more satisfactory returns to their policy-holders than many of the largest companies.

Stupendous assets are offset by correspondingly large liabilities. In the balance sheet they do not add strength, the test of which, in well established companies, is the true ratio of resources of assets to liabilities, which is absolutely independent of the question of size.

WM. T. STANDEN,
Consulting Actuary.

Mr. John L. Blaikie, in moving the adoption of the report, said:—

Gentlemen,—I have a pleasant duty to discharge in moving the adoption of the report and balance sheet now submitted for your approval.

That you will heartily approve of them and adopt them I do not doubt for a moment, as in all the vital particulars that make up solid success in a life assurance company there is most gratifying progress, and results have been attained which cannot fail to afford great satisfaction to policy-holders and guarantors, and at the same time cheer our agents in the prosecution of their ardous labors for the company.

This is fully borne out by the facts and figures to which I invite your attention.

" " " " 1893....	482,514 08
Increase (16 per cent.)..........$	75,880 85
Total assets, December 31st, 1894..........................$	1,987,446 30
Total assets, December 31st, 1893..........................	1,703,453 39
Increase (17 per cent.)........$	283,992 91
Total reserve and surplus funds, December 31st, 1894..$	1,902,236 75
Increase (18 per cent.)..... ....$	285,664 49

These large increases are all the more gratifying when we consider the hard times so many have experienced during the past year, and the keenness of the competition for business by all classes of companies.

Any thoughtful and intelligent person who studies these figures cannot fail to come to the conclusion that ample provision is made to meet every contract entered into with its policy holders, and not only so, but also that the North American Life is building up a large surplus, out of which profits for policy-holders alone can come, which compares most favorably with any other company making returns to Government.

Payments to policy-holders for 1894, including death claims, endowments, profits on investment policies, etc., for 1894..... ....$	133,426 52
do do. for 1893.....	80,665 33
Increase (65 per cent.)............$	52,750 99

The mortality in 1893 was exceptionally light, and though in 1894 it has been greater, it is still largely within expectation, and it has to be borne in mind that there is a much larger amount of risk in the increase of policies in force. There is real satisfaction, however, in paying promptly every fair death claim as it arises, as has been the practice of the company from the beginning, as in so doing we are fulfilling the functions and purposes of a life assurance company, and helping to provide for widows and helpless children.

When I tell you that the interest and rents due are less than 3-4 of 1 per cent. of total assets, you must admit that it speaks well for the care and ability with which the Finance Committe and the executive officers of the company have discharged their duties.

A comparison of the business of the company as it was five years ago with what it was at the close of 1894 is at once interesting and encouraging:—

	December 31.		Increases.
	1894.	1889.	Amount.	Percentages.
Assets...	$1,987,446 30	$816,710 04	$1,170,736 26	143
Surplus	338,216 75	71,304 69	[illegible]	374
Cash income...	558,394 93	301,741 08	[illegible]	[illegible]
Insur'nce in force.	14,471,253 00	9,[illegible] 00	[illegible]	[illegible]
Paym't's to policy holders.	133,426 52	[illegible]	72,[illegible]	120

These figures show that the company's surplus has during the brief period of five years increased about fourfold, while the assets have increased about one and a half fold.

The more closely any person scrutinizes the figures of all the life insurance companies doing business in the Dominion of Canada, with a view to ascertain which can do the best for insurers, the more he will be convinced that the North American Life stands in the very front rank.

The independent report made by Mr. Standen, our consulting actuary, is not only of unusual interest, but is also extremely gratifying, endorsing in such an unqualified manner, as it does, all the methods by which the North American Life prosecutes its business, giving it a very high position among successful life insurance companies as respects solidity, equity, and profit-earning power for the benefit of its policy-holders.

I gladly avail myself of this opportunity to say the success in which we all rejoice is largely due to ability and devotion to duty of Mr. McCabe, our managing director; of Mr. Goldman, our secretary; and other officers of the company; also to the unceasing care and great professional skill of our medical director, Dr. Thorburn.

During the past fourteen years the company has disbursed for death losses, endowments, profits on investment policies, etc., over three quarters of a million of dollars, and at the present time holds as security for its policy-holders assets, as per balance sheet, $1,987,446.30, and in addition, uncalled guarantee fund of $240,000, or in all the large sum of $2,227,446.30, thus giving a relative security doubtless unsurpassed by any other company.

For my own satisfaction I have examined into the relative position attained by this company and four leading companies. I found this investigation very interesting and satisfactory, and I am sure you will be pleased to hear the result, as it indicates very clearly the great growth and unexcelled position attained by our company.

Comparing the business of the North American Life, at the end of its fourteenth year, with that of the companies referred to at the same period in their history, it will be found that the oldest of these companies had but about one-third the business in force that the North American has, that the surplus of the second was over 20 per cent less than that of the North American's, that the assets of the third were more than a million dollars less than those of the North American's, while the cash income of the fourth was less than one half of that of this company. Now, gentlemen, I have said enough in support of the motion to adopt the report and balance sheet, and enough to make us all proud of the North American Life Assurance Company; enough, too to serve as a stimulus to our numerous agents in the field to renew their labors with redoubled energy and zeal, so that at the close of 1895 a large increase of business will be shown, and a positive benefit accrue to every person who has been induced to become a policy-holder in the company.

During the past year the company paid many death claims where, but for the policy, widows and fatherless children would have been left in dire want and distress. This fact must always be a powerful argument by our agents in canvassing for business, as many men are so circumstanced as to be entirely unable to provide for their families in any other way than by insuring their lives, and hence failure to do this becomes criminal neglect. Many insurers, however, can be approached and convinced by an entirely different kind of argument.

Keen, calculating men are met with, who won't listen to any argument other than IT WILL PAY—and our agents can meet such men and satisfy them that to take out an endowment policy in the North American Life Assurance Company is a paying investment, and at the same time a much safer and sounder one than many of the investments for money now obtainable.

Gentlemen, I would like to repeat what I said on a former occasion, and to do it by way of warning, and that is, that a class of companies are pushing business in our midst whose methods are radically unsound, who make contracts that will not mature for many years, making no adequate provision for their payment at maturity, so that the holders of such policies are doomed to cruel and bitter disappointment.

It does appear to intelligent onlookers that it is a most important thing, and in entire disregard of public interests, that any companies should be permitted to carry on such business, and at the same time not be subject to inspection by the Dominion Government in the same way as all the regular life insurance companies are.

In conclusion, I have only to say, let every gentleman here present, whether policy-holder, guarantor, director, or agent, not only resolve to push forward the interests of the North American Life Assurance Company, but watch for opportunities of doing so, and thus ensure a large and steadily growing business for the year on which we have now entered.

The vice-president, Hon. G. W. Allan, seconding the resolution, said that the president had so fully covered every point in the report that it really left him nothing further to say, except that he fully endorsed every remark of the Chairman as to the progress of the Company and the solid position it had attained, and as a Canadian institution we could all look forward with perfect confidence to its increased growth and future prosperity. The motion was unaminously carried.

The Chairman expressed great regret at the absence, through illness, of Mr. James Scott, chairman of the Finance Committee, whose able and comprehensive report on the satisfactory position of the investments of the Company was read by the Hon. G. W. Allan, who said:—I should like to be permitted to add to what Mr. Scott has said a few words with regard to our mortgage investments. Perhaps I may claim to speak with the advantage of some little experience, having been connected as a director and president with loan companies for over thirty years. I have taken a good deal of interest in the subject as a member of the Board of Directors of this company, and I can say without hesitation to our policy-holders and others, that I doubt very much if there is any other company in the country whose securities are of so high a character as those held by the North American Life. They have been selected with great judgment, and we have the advantage of a man of very large experience in Mr. Galley, who exercises great care in reporting on all properties offered to us for loans.

James Thorburn, M. D., presented his full and interesting annual report on the mortality experience of the Company, after which Mr. J. K. Kerr, Q. C., moved a vote of thanks to the Medical Director for the able manner in which he had conducted the affairs of the medical department. This was seconded by Sir Frank Smith, who expressed confidence in the future of the Company, and his satisfaction at the excellent financial result of the past year's work.

Hearty votes of thanks were tendered the Board, officers and agents of the Company, and at a subsequent meeting of the newly-elected Board Mr. John Blaikie was unaminously re-elected President and Hon. G. W. Allan and J. K. Kerr, Q. C., Vice-Presidents.

IN A JUNGLE STORM.

You Hear It, but Can't See It Until It Can Also Be Felt.

People who have never been in a jungle talk of the sky as a painter talks of the horizon or a seafaring man of the offing—as if when you wanted to see it you only need use your eyes. But in the jungle you don't see the sky—at least you only see a few scraggy patches of it overhead through the openings in the twigs and leaves. Neither do you feel the wind blowing, nor get burned or dazzled by the sun, nor even see that luminary, except by momentary glimpses about midday, from which it follows that a jungleman does not usually pretend to be weatherwise. If he does, he is even a greater humbug than the rest of the weather prophets. On the afternoon about which we are speaking I remember setting forth on my walk in the still glow of the tropical calm and wondering rather at the intense stillness of the surrounding forest. Then the air grew cooler, and the green of the foliage in front seemed to deepen, and presently there was a sound as of a giant waterfall in the distance. Waterfalls do not, however, grow louder every second, whereas the noise in front did so. Then there was a loud, angry growl, as of a dozen lions. A minute more, and the whole jungle began to roar as if 50 squadrons of heavy cavalry were coming up at a gallop. Then came a drop of rain and a peal of thunder which seemed to make the world stop.

Then the storm began. The sky above darkened; the trees clattered; the brushwood beneath hissed and bowed itself. A deluge of raindrops blotted out the narrow view. Down it came, soaking through the densest leaves under which one fled for refuge, striking the grass and sand with millions of dull thuds, dashing furiously against the leaves as if they were so many hostile shields, streaking the air with innumerable perpendicular lines and hurling itself down with the force of bullets.

In such a downpour one may as well walk and get wet as stand still and get wet. Unfortunately one did not know where to walk to. The "circumbendibus system" presupposes the fact that the wagon wheels and bullock tracks can be seen and noted, but when the cart track is no longer a cart track, but "all turned to rushing waters," such tracks cannot be seen, and unless you have a pocket compass you may as well try to fly as to get back to where you came from. When one reads of travelers lost in the backwoods, they always steer by the sun—and probably very badly—but when there is no sun what are you to do?—Siam Free Press.

CHRONIC CHILLINESS.

The Remedy Suggested Is Outdoor Exercise at All Seasons.

How some people suffer in winter! They are constantly having chills. A feeling of cold water trickling down the back or some local stagnation of blood, with altered nervous sensations, is experienced. The hands, feet, nose or ears are especially likely to give inconvenience. Such individuals cannot get warm even in bed, and, as a consequence, often suffer from insomnia, for sleeplessness is often caused by cold feet. Many such conditions arise from the fear of taking outdoor exercise, because the weather is too cold. Hence the circulation is not kept going, and the blood, vitiated by the close, impure air of the house, has no chance offered it of being allowed to purify itself. The foulest river or stream of water is rendered pure by exposure to the air as it comes along, and after a run of a few miles becomes fit for consumption. Why, then, will delicate people deny the stream of life an opportunity to purify itself as it courses through their veins? Here is the secret of how to keep warm in winter—outdoor exercise in pure air.

Many individuals mistake the feeling of cold for "catarrh." But feeling cold and "taking a cold" are different things. A shiver from exposure to cold—indeed a half frozen condition—is not in itself likely to end in a so called "cold," so long as the exposure has been in the open air. But we hold that by breathing the impure air of badly ventilated rooms a chill may be very easily contracted that will end in a "cold."

In cold weather we distinctly recommend the ordinarily healthy man or woman to try the effect of outdoor exercise, especially when the feeling is strong that it is too cold to go out of doors. Exercise under such circumstances will usually act as a tonic to the whole frame and brace up the nervous system, the special function of which is to regulate the heat of the body. The skin should be freely exposed to the air before dressing in the morning, and after the morning washing or cold tepid bath rub the body into a glow with a coarse towel, and you will be very nearly cold and waterproof.—Philadelphia Times.

Studying to Please.

He had been particularly fortunate in his business and felt in the mood for tipping the waiters at his hotel rather liberally. As a result, every time he entered the dining room half a dozen willing waiters rushed for him like football players in a big match. This came to be annoying after awhile, so he called the head waiter to him and said:

"Now, see here, I don't want all the waiters in the place bothering me every time I get something to eat. Settle on one man and let him attend to my wants."

Then his eye roamed around at the assembled attendants, and without any particular reason he said:

So it was settled, and for some time the designated waiter was on hand. One day, however, the man with money found another attendant at his table. He motioned to the head waiter.

"Didn't I tell you to let me have the waiter with a wart on his nose?" he demanded.

"Yes, sah, but this one will be better, sah. He has two warts on his nose."—Philadelphia Press.

Life Worth Living.

Those people who say that life is not worth living find it so because they do not go to work to make it worth living. Why does sadness overpower them? Is it so much harder for them than others to see sin and suffering? What right have they to add their weight to the world's burdens? Is it a sign of intellect to be cowardly? And do these people not dream that the spiritual power which makes such an intellectual condition impossible is vastly superior to any power that the intellect alone can attain?—Elizabeth Peabody.

MET DEATH IN SLEEP.

A FAMILY OF SIX PERISH BY FIRE IN MICHIGAN.

Starving Miners—Families in Need of Food and Fuel—Children Found Benumbed at One Side of Their Dead Mother.

Special to the Times.

STANDISH, Mich., Feb. 7.—One of the most distressing casualties that ever occurred in this county happened this morning about 5 o'clock, near the village of Ower, 8 miles from here by an entire family consisting of John Beck, his wife and four children were burned to death in their home.

On reaching the house after the alarm was given, neighbors found the house nearly consumed. On quenching the flames and looking around the ruins, the blackened bodies of the entire family were found. It appears that they had been trying to escape and had been overtaken by the flames and smoke near the windows as the bodies of Beck and wife and one of the children in her arms were found in the bed room. The child was held so closely to the mother that the clothing between them was not burned. The remains presented a sickening sight. Beck was a hard working man and had a host of friends. There is no doubt that the fire was under great headway when discovered as none of the family had made any effort to dress.

STARVING MINERS.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—The stories in regard to the destitution among the Washington county coal miners has been officially confirmed. At Venetia the miners and their families to the number of over 100 persons are in a deplorable condition, and unless quickly supplied with food will suffer seriously from starvation.

PEACE IN SIGHT.

CITY OF MEXICO, Feb. 7.—Public affairs are comparatively tranquil, and the truculence of a few days ago has almost ceased. This morning's newspapers said confidently that Gautemala was giving way, even on the question of indemnity, although it is thought that Mexico will abate her claims, mainly on the ground of Gautemala's and President Barrio's difficulties at home.

A SAD STORY.

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa., Feb. 7.—A pathetic story comes from Cogan Valley County, where three children, ranging from six months to two years old, were found alone in their home with the body of their mother, having survived the cold and privation for two days and two nights. The husband left on Sunday for a lumber camp, and returning last night he found his wife dead in a chair and the almost frozen and famished children huddled together in a bed.

THE SEAT OF WAR.

LONDON, Feb. 7.—The Shanghai Mercury reports that at the Emperor's orders the Chinese peace envoys will remain in Nagasaki awaiting further instructions, His Majesty having declared that he had been misinformed as to the true state of affairs.

A despatch dated Chee Foo today says: All is quiet here. The Chinese fleet and island at Weihaiwei still hold out and the bombardment still continues.

Spanish-American Treaty.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 7.—The modus vivendi between Spain and the United States providing for the low tariff on American imports to Cuba and Porto Rico goes into effect to day, having been signed by the Queen yesterday. The rates under the new arrangement are the same as they were under the reciprocity conventions negotiated under the McKinley act.

To Search for the Explorers.

HAMILTON, Feb. 7.—Mr. J. W. Tyrrell, C.E., has been offered command of an expedition to be sent by an American society into Ellesmereland to search for the Swedish explorers. Bjorling and Kallstenius, who are lost somewhere up in that region. The plan is to locate a cache of supplies at the head of Baffin's Bay and explore from that centre with dog sleighs.

On His Native Heath.

MONTREAL, Feb. 7.—Hon. W. Laurier arrived in this morning accompanied by Mr. Chas. H. Hyman, of London, and spent the day receiving friends and perfecting arrangements. He declared himself delighted with his Toronto meeting. He goes home tomorrow.

Man Shot by a Burglar.

PUEBLO, Col., Feb. 6.—A despatch from Trinidad says that George McCormick, formerly night operator at Elmore, Col., a station on the Denver & Rio Grande railroad, 25 miles south of Pueblo, was probably fatally shot by a robber last night. F. Cole, the present night operator, and McCormick were talking in the station, when a masked man entered and commanded them to hold up. He discharged his revolver at the same moment. The bullet struck McCormick in the left breast, and he fell over unconscious. Cole fired five shots at the robber, who disappeared in the darkness.

Ice on the Mersey.

LIVERPOOL, Feb. 7.—An ice floe from the upper Mersey has drifted down to the river's mouth, forming a mass half a mile long and several hundred yards wide. The ice has blocked access to the landing stage and compelled the stoppage of the ferries.

The story of the New York man who claims that his wife hypnotered him into assinging all his property to her is a dangerous one to make puplic. All the women will be studying hypnotism now.

PREACHER AND ROBBER.

A Baptist Preacher Caught in the Act of Plundering a Bank.

Special to the Times.

PORTLAND, Ore., Feb. 7.—Yesterday afternoon a man entered the First National Bank of East Portland and presented a revolver, called on Cashier E. T. Holgate, who was alone in the bank, to throw up his hands. The cashier complied, and the intruder bound and gagged him, after which he started to empty the coin tray into a sack which he carried.

At this juncture the cashier of the Citizen's Bank across the street, who saw the affair, rushed in with a shot gun and arrested the robber, who was turned over to the police. The thief was identified as the Rev. J. F. Reid, a Baptist minister.

Reid came into notoriety a few months ago by disappearing after leaving his clothes on the river bank to give the impression that he had been drowned. He afterwards turned up in Illinois, where he claimed to be suffering from mental troubles.

When Reid entered the bank he wore a long false beard but in the scuffle it was torn off, revealing his identity.

DEFENDING THE FORTS.

Chinese Hold Out Against a Japanese Assault—Cowardly Officers.

Special to the Times.

LONDON, Feb. 6.—A despatch to the Pall Mall Gazette from Hiroshima says the Japanese attack upon the forts of Liu Kung Tao was resumed on Saturday and continued till noon on Monday.

LONDON, Feb. 6.—A despatch from Tien Tsin to the Central News says that an Imperial edict has been issued degrading Colonels Han, Tai and Shao, and Captains Yeo and Wen for their action in retreating from Yung Cheng.

They are not dismissed from the army, however, but will remain in the service in subordinate capacities and endeavor to regain their lost rank.

LA GASCONGE MISSING.

The Big French Liner is Reported Four Days Overdue.

Special to the Times.

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—Up to a late hour tonight the French line steamer La Gasconge had not been sighted. She is nearly four days overdue, as she should have arrived Sunday morning. As the steamers of this line come and go with regularity, the impression gains ground that she has met with some kind of mishap. The fact that the White Star steamer Runic, from Liverpool, and the Netherland-American liner Werkendam, from Rotterdam, have arrived about on time, tends to strengthen the belief that the La Gasconge had not had plain sailing. There are many things which tend to delay her that would not be considered of a serious nature by mariners, and while it can hardly be said that there is any apprehension as to the big steamer's safety, the friends of those on board would gladly welcome the news of her having been sighted off this shore. The vessel left Havre a week ago last Saturday. She has 163 passengers, a cargo of miscellaneous merchandise and the French mails. Her crew number 210. A. Forget, agent of the line, said this afternoon he entertained no fear for the ship's safety, and that be expected to hear from her at any moment.

THE FIRE RECORD.

Lumber Plant Destroyed at Fort Wayne—House at Frankford Burned.

Special to the Times.

PORT DALHOUSIE, Feb. 7.—About 10.30 o'clock last night fire broke out in the frame house owned by Mr. John Howe, sr., of this place. John Howe, jr., the only occupant of the house at the time, narrowly escaped with his life. The adjoining house, owned by Mrs. M. J. Irwin, who keeps a boarding house, was also consumed. There was no insurance on Mrs. Irwin's building or furniture; probable loss $2,000. Mr. Howe's loss will amount to about $1,500, with insurance on house for $350 in Norwich Union. Several men had their ears, fingers and feet frozen while working at the fire.

FORT WAYNE, Ind., Feb. 7.—The Peters Box and Lumber Company's plant was destroyed by fire this morning. Loss, $75,000; insurance, $35,000.

PLYMOUTH, Ind., Feb. 7.—G. Wolf's clothing store and three other establishments were destroyed by fire today. Loss, $80,000; insurance, $30,000.

FRANKFORD, Ont., Feb. 7.—The house and contents of Mr. C. Hendrick, about three miles from this place, were destroyed by fire this morning. The house was totally, and the contents partially destroyed. Loss, about $800; insurance, only $400.

PROVISION FOR LADY THOMPSON.

The Imperial Government to be Asked to Make a Grant.

Special to the Times.

LONDON, Feb. 7.—John Heywood Johnstone, Conservative member for the Horsham division of Sussex, has given notice that tomorrow he will ask Sir William Harcourt, Chancellor of the Exchequer, whether it is the intention of the Government to make pecuniary provision for Lady Thompson and the junior members of the family of the late Sir John Thompson, Premier of the Dominion of Canada.

Linwood Suspects Arrested.

DRAYTON, Feb. 7.—Constable C. W. Parcill, of Linwood, was in town yesterday on the track of the man and woman who are the parties implicated in the disappearance of a child at Linwood, the other day, by burning. Constable T. Flath, Drayton, arrested the man and woman near Goldstone yesterday morning and turned them over to Constable Parcill. The man gives the name of Archibald Dancey, Holt P. O., and says the woman is his wife. They are tramping through the country begging, but deny having had a child with them when in or near Linwood, and say they went into the woods and built a fire because they had been refused shelter at some farmhouse and were cold. Constable Parcill leaves this p. m. with the prisoners for Linwood.

The Whiteway Ministry.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., Feb. 7.—It is rumored that the Whiteway Ministry will be gazetted today. It is probable that the new Cabinet will be made up of Sir William Whiteway and Messrs. Bond, Morris, Woods, Emerson and Duff. The allotment of offices has not yet been made. Much dissatisfaction exists among the rank and file of the Whitewayites at their treatment. They claim that they have not been consulted. It is expected that the new Ministry will meet with an unfavorable reception when it faces the Legislature.

Mother and Child Starving.

NIAGARA FALLS, Feb. 7.—Mrs. Morris Haines, the second wife of the bigamist, who resided in Toronto for several years, was found in a destitute condition here, with her two-year-old child. Hebrew friends are looking after her.

Four Days Overdue.

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—No tidings have been received from any quarter of the French line steamship La Gascogne, which is now more than four days overdue.

The Times.

PETERBOROUGH. FEBRUARY 9, 1895.

Good morning!

Don't leave off your flannels yet.

Sheam-heating plants are in full bloom.

The Patrons of industry will soon be able to get hats that will fit them again.

It's a queer world. Now, when everybody can have ice without money and without price, nobody wants it.

Several estimable citizens have caught their deaths o' cold this winter through sitting on street-car stoves.

The mercury seems to have fallen about as low as it can if it has any hope of still being recognized by respectable people.

The capture of Wei-Hai-Wei places the last important Chinese stronghold in the hands of the Japs and will probably mark the practical close of the war.

There is hardly a thermometer in the town which has not been prostrated by the weather. As soon as the frost is out of the ground, digging for the mercury will be resumed.

In Toronto the other night Mr. Laurier defined his policy on the Manitoba School question. He means to wait and see what the other fellows do before starting in to make a fuss. This is what you might call canny.

The chief objection to this sort of weather is that it encourages imaginative persons with hazy ideas on the subject of truth-telling to recall gladsome days when it was two or three times colder than it is now. Mortal man does love to break the records.

It is predicted by some of the papers that remedical legislation will be only another name for civil war in Manitoba. That is possible, of course. But people have to be mightily excited because they gather up their breech-loading shotguns and go on the warpath.

The growing importance of Canada's national highway as a link in the means of international communications is once more illustrated by the announcement that the Shah of Persia will take the Canadian route on his next visit to Europe.

In dealing with the Manitoba school question, Mr. Laurier takes care to state that he is a strong believer in Provincial rights. The words are significant, as no believer in Provincial rights can justify any attempt to force on the people of Manitoba a system of education they do not want. It looks as if the hierarchy has little to hope for from the leader of the Opposition.

When an ordinary individual chops down a tree, the world is unconcerned, but when Gladstone does it matters are different. The New Age tells the story of one occasion when Gladstone's attack on a stately trunk was watched by a large concourse of people including a number of cheap trippers. When the tree had fallen and the Prime Minister and some of his family who were with him were moving away there was a rush for the chips. One of the trippers secured a big piece and exclaimed: "Hey, lads, when I dee this shall go in my coffin!" Then cried his wife, a shrewd, motherly old woman with a merry twinkle in her eye: 'Sam, my lad, if thou'd worship God as thou worships Gladstone, thou'd stand a better chance of going where thy chip wouldn't burn!"

Many of the towns and cities around us are curtailing expenses by cutting down salaries and reducing the number of civic employees. Peterborough should do likewise.

J. Sloat Fassett is authority for the statement that over 100,000 citizens of New York purposely refrain from voting in order to keep their names of the polling lists from which jury lists are made up.

Certain evil-minded Tories have asserted that Mr. Laurier has deemed it advisable to inoculate Sir Richard with anti-talkaine. No corroboration has yet been found for the statement.

The Toronto Electric Light Company averred that it was making little or nothing on its civic contract, then reduced its tender by over $30 per lamp, and now is fighting desperately to secure the contract at the lower figure.

The Canadian winters may be growing milder as some people assert, but if they are they have a queer way of showing it. If this sort of weather lasts much longer the winter will be getting its nose frozen.

The Chinese peace-envoys to Japan having been sent back home because their credentials did not give them power to make a permanent treaty of peace, it must be admitted that the Chinese government shows as little aptitude for diplomacy as for war.

A dispatch from the east informs us that "the Chinese authorities at Che-Foo are arresting and beheading the soldiers who have run away from Wei-Hai-Wel; the extreme cold weather prevents further operations." We are left in doubt as to what these further operations would be if the cold weather had not prevented them. Burial cermonies, perhaps.

The Hamilton Times urges Premier Bowell to make up his mind at once and settle the Manitoba school question in one way or the other. The advice comes from an unfriendly source, but it is sound all the same. Nothing is to be gained from a party standpoint by postponement, and every hour of unnecessary delay is an injury to the country, which will know no peace until the difficulty is disposed of.

Sir Alexander Mackenzie, President of the Royal Academy of Music, who received knighthood on New Year's day, is the sixteenth musician whom the Queen has knighted. The first was Sir Henry Bishop, in 1842; then came Sir Michael Costa, in 1868; Sir Sterndale Bennett and Julius Benedict were knighted in 1871; Sir Arthur Sullivan, Sir George Grove, and Sir G. A. Macfarren in 1883.

In the discussion which took place at Council meeting on Monday evening over a rearrangement of the town officials, with a view to a more economical as well as a better service, it is safe to say that nearly every ratepayer in the room—and there were hundreds present—was in favor of a change. When Councillor Dawson attempted to defend Chief Roszel, a tornado of hisses greeted him. On the contrary, when speakers in favor of reform were heard the applauses was universal.

In ten years the English Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children has rescued 109,000 little children from the inhumanity of their parents. Of these, 25,437 were victims of violence, 62,887 were suffering from neglect and starvation, 12,663 were compelled to beg, 4,460 young girls were rescued from a life of vice, and 3 205 children were taken from travelling shows, where they were employed in dangerous performances or as monstrosities.

Good horses are cheaper in some parts of the west now than dogs are in the east, for there are few dogs not owned by some one, while the horses cannot be given away. All over the west horses have been astoundingly cheap for some time, and $2 or $3 has been a good price for a good animal. A hundred head of ranch horses—sturdy, unbroken bronchos from Wymong—were sold in Denver for $90 and the freight recently. It is reported that a big stock farm in Idaho has turned more than 250 ponies adrift to shift for themselves during the winter, as it was cheaper to do this than to provide food for them. The firm could not give even a dollar apiece for them.

It is many years since the people in this part of the world have suffered from such a cold "spell" at once so prolonged and so intense as the present one. For about six weeks we have had real winter weather, broken only by one or two days of thaw, and during the last two or three days the mercury has shown the lowest temperature that we have have had for years in this part of the country. Even well-to-do citizens and their families, amply fortified against wintry weather by snug houses, good heating apparatus and plenty of fuel, warm clothing an abundance of food, have not found it easy to keep comfortable. Let such people contrast their own condition with that of the many who suffer the lack of these things in this cruel weather. It is all very to say "God help the poor!" but the mere wish is more like a curse than a blessing if it is unaccompanied by an effort to help the poor yourself.

A PROSPEROUS COMPANY.

Elsewhere will be found the report of the North Amerian Life Assurance Company, which took place at the general offices of the company, Toronto, on Tuesday January 26th 1895.

The report presented showed that notwithstanding the general depression which has prevailed throughout all countries in the world, and the failure of many monetary institutions, entailing serious loss to investors, the North American is very prosperous, and to-day stands amongst the foremost institutions in the land in regard to progress and financial solidity.

At the annual gatherings of most financial institutions the report is read, and very little more done than than the usual motions being passed; but in the case of the North American Life Assurance Company, the experienced president, Mr. John L. Blaikie, always deals in a exhaustive manner with the past and present position of the company. His remarks and those of the other speakers at the meeting are worthy of perusal, especially to holders of policies in the company. The past year had been the most successful one the company has had. From the comparison made of its financial position five years ago, and that of to-day, it appears, the assets now amount to almost two million dollars, being an increase during the period referred to of over 143 per cent. A matter of great interest to the holders of policies in the company is the large amount of net surplus accumulated for their benefit, which now figures up over $338,000, being an increase of 374 per cent, over the surplus five years ago. The cash income has shown a great increase for the past year, being $567,000, while the insurance in force now exceeds fourteen millions of dollars. The consulting actuary, in his report, points out that the essentials for a person to consider when thinking about the selection of a company to insure in are the ratio of assets a total liabilities, the amount of surplus, and the surplusearning power of a company. Towards the close of his remarks he stated in this connection that undoubtedly the North American Life Assurance Company had attained that degree of solidity which could best be undertood by a comparison with any of the large companies. In all essentials, especially those of acquired surplus and surplus-earning power, it was not excelled by any other company. The directors and executive officers of the company are well known for their financial experience and business ability, and the progress the company has so far made under their direction is the best indication of future prosperity.

The inerests of the company are ably looked after in this town by Mr. S. G. Faulkner, district agent, Peterborough.

CECIL RHODES ON "EMPERIALISM.

That marvellous colonial statesman Cecil Rhodes, took occasion at the late fourth annual meeting of the British South Africa Co., to lecture the "little Englanders" upon the folly of their more or less active opposition to the extension of the British domain in Africa. He said that on his way "home" some one handed him a copy of the London, Eng., Daily Chronicle, in which he read the following: "Not a single unemployed workman in England is likely to secure a week's steady labor as the result of the forward policy in South Africa." To this Mr. Rhodes made reply by reminding the Company that "we have built 200 miles of railway—the rails are made in England and the locomotives also; we have constructed 1,300 miles of telegraphs—the telegraph poles and wire all made in England; everything we wear and almost everything we consume is imported from England." Mr. Rhodes' point is that it pays the workmen of Britain to establish and maintain markets for their wares abroad. They are essentially a trading people, and if cut off from outside markets because of their possession by hostile powers, every industry on the island must suffer. The comparison between the respective values of the Canadian and American markets to the British exporters has often been made. Mr. Rhodes established in his speech a similar comparison of striking force between the vast American markets and the much smaller one of British South Africa and British Egypt. He said:

> There are sixty million of your people in the United States. You created that Government; that is your production, if I may call it so......What is your trade with the United States? Your exports there are about £40,000,000 per annum. In South Africa and Egypt we have only 600,000 whites, but your exports there amounts to £20,000,000. You have £15,000,000 with the Cape and Natal, almost entirely British goods, and £4,000,000 with Egypt, where you have a fair chance for our goods. You are doing £20,000,000 with these two small dependencies as against £42,000,000 with another creation of yours which has shut your goods out, and where there are 60,000,000 of your own people. If they gave a fair chance to your trade you would be doing £150,000,000 with the United States—to your advantage and the advantage of the American people.

Evidence of this kind is most conclusive proof of the incalculable value of the Colonial Empire to the home traders. It is not only glory and national stability that Britain finds abroad—it is commercial prosperity as well. The "little Englanders" are not very much to the fore just now, when the leaders of both parties are broadly and optimistically Imperial; but their spirit speaks occasionally, and it is always for retrogression. The day, however, is now with the Cecil Rhodes, the Sir Harry Parkes and the Sir John Macdonalds. All Britondom is in favor of Imperial extension and of closer imperial union. We are spanning the continent with railways, and linking the termini together with oceanic cables; we are marking out for destrction all barriers that lie uselessly in the path of inter-Imperial trade; and in the colonies, as in the Mother Country, the sentiment aganst sectional and separate ambition is growing lustly.

LIVE STOCK MARKET.

Feb 8.—Live Stock—Local shippers have sent out a good many sheep via American ports during the past week and if the English market holds they will turn over a fair profit. There was not much done at the Point St. Charles market this morning, in fact butchers bought too feely in Toronto yesterday to trade in Montreal to any great extent. Sheep are firm; west they are quoted at 3c and shippers are paying that figure. Hogs are quiet. At the East End Abattoir this morning business was quiet. The offerings were 500 head of cattle, 25 calves and 300 sheep and lambs. Prices were scarcely altered from last week. Cattle sold at 3½c live weight and calves all the way from $3 to $10 each. Sheep were slightly easier and in one or two cases sold fractionally 'ower than on Monday. Sales were made at about 3½c.

THE LIME JUICE CLUB.

REGULAR WEEKLY MEETING OF THIS CHASTE SOCIETY.

The President Makes Some Pungent Remarks.

"I have been deeply pained," began Sir Richard, as he slowly rose up and stood with his hands under his coat tails. "I have been deepiy pained at coming across fresh evidences to show that the average man is mentally wabbling about instead of walking right ahead in the middle of the road. Two weeks ago to-night I was in Brother Harry LeBrun's store when Talkaway Foulweather came in and got measured for three shirts, and ordered Bro. Peter Corkery, to make them to button behind. He didn't see me, and I was so paralized that I couldn't have spoken to him if he had. All my life I have bought unbleached cotton at six cents a yard, and had the old lady make my shirts—and they were shirts same as Sir John A. Macdonald wore before he took to politics. The shirt that buttoned in front with buttons costing six cents a dozen, has been good enough for poets, warriors and statesmen. The home made shirt won liberty for the British people, and cleared our Canadian forests, ploughed our fertile North-West forests, and laid the foundation of our present greatness. The idea that the time has arrived when a person earning six dollars a week, and having only one lung left to breathe with feels that he must have two dollar shirts to be in the swim, just takes my breath away!

"A few nights ago I met Fortypercent Duncefort in a drug store. Fortypercent is an old man. Any one to look at him would say that he was sot to stay sot. I have always considered him a man without any foolishness, and you can imagine my surprise when he boldly enquired for scented soap, vaseline, cold cream and tooth powder! He actually turned away from a ten cent tooth brush and took one at 25! Bro. Bob Fife himself seemed kind of dazed as he packed up the goods. Did John A. enquire for scented soap before he sent that memorable dispatch, 'Send me another ten thousand?' Does Chief Roszel hold a bottle of vaseline in his hand when he goes to make an arrest? Did Burrit Edwards go and brush his teeth with pink powder before commencing that outfall sewer case? Shakespeare, Byron and Milton cleaned their teeth with a rag tied to a stick, but our Fortypeecent Duncefort must fill his mouth with Paris powder, and grease up his jaws like a Duke!

"Where is Anvil Davis to-night? I answer that he is home and in bed, and the doctor says his backbone is two inches out of plumb. I was working in my garden the other day when Bro. Davis came in to see me. He leaned up against the fence and talked, and by and by he sprung it on me. What do you suppose that person wanted? Wanted to borrow five dollars to get a pair of shoes—patent leather shoes—and another dollar to buy a couple of pairs of silk stocks! My friends, I didn't appear to breathe for three minutes. Then my breath came with a rush, and I picked up Bro. Davis and threw him over a nine-foot fence on a heap of bricks.

"My old woman was taken sick the other night, and I went over to the house of Cripes Mulcahey to borrow a little ginger. Bro. Mulcahey has always appeared to me to be a solid, sensible man, and I couldn't scarcely believe that I was awake when I looked around that house. There was a cuckoo clock, same as Queen Victoria goes to bed by. There were three stuffed chairs, a bust of Napoleon, a footstool that never cost less than fifty cents, and right on the floor, being stepped on by all the family a dozen times a day, was a rug that cost $8! When Mr. Fulton invented the steamboat, did he have his feet on an $8 rug? When Sir Isaac Newton discovered gravity, did he have a cuckoo clock cuckooing to him? When the Duke of Wellington fought and licked the French, did he sit on a stuffed chair and direct his battles?

"But that was not all, my friends. I got a peep into the spare bedroom and beheld a shamholders on the bed and a canopacious canopy above it, same as the kings of Europe. There was a red tablecloth on the table, and albums fit for a queen lying around, and all the knives and forks had handles on them. Bro. Mulcahey works in a woodyard for $6 a week and has a wife and eight children, but he must be in the swim! I know one time last winter when he went without socks in order to buy a soup dish with two regular handles to it!

"My friends, I have mentioned only three or four instances out of a dozen I could name. It makes me sick at heart to see these things. If the time has arrived in the history of man when he has got to sit down on stuffed chairs, dangle his feet on $8 rugs and be sung to sleep by cuckoo clocks, then the sooner I am called to go the better. It's ahead of my time, and I can't catch up to it. I am not going to say any more about it, but I want it understood right here and now that the man who is in the swim hadn't better come to my house to borrow money. About the time he gets through explaining to me that he has got to have $6 to get a set of silk underclothes to wear to the baseball game I shall light down on him and make him wish he had never been born."

WINTER MOTTOES.

Henroost Bell, Chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, submitted the following new winter mottoes, which were ordered to be hung up around the Hall of Wisdom.

"One ton of coal is worth forty predictions that it is going to be a hard winter.

"Too much talk is like a spring freshet in a creek. There's heaps of water, but it don't do anybody any good."

"The world certainly owes every man a living, but it doesn't specify whether he is to have sweet-cake or Indian-meal."

"Almost any religion is good enough to live by, but when it comes to a religion to die by there is a great scramble for an A1 brand."

"But for the few really honest people in this world there would be no need for poor-houses."

"It makes a heap of difference whether you lose your wallet or find somebody else's in the road. In the one case honesty is the best policy; in the other you walk about four weeks to think it over."

"It was not intended that man should take solid comfort. No sooner has the cold weather killed off the mosquitoes than along comes the chap who wants to borrow a dollar."

"The person who is chuck-full of promises is pretty certain to have empty pockets."

KNOCKED OUT.

Boneyard Billyjim had been looked upon as a deep thinker and a wise philosopher. Great was the astonishment, therefore, when he slowly arose and offered a resolution to the effect that the sum of $25 be voted from the treasury for the purpose of purchasing a pier glass for the anteroom in the Hall of Wisdom. The motion was not supported, and the silence for the next sixty seconds was so deep that the cracking of Fortypercent Duncefort's toejoints sounded like the explosion of musketry. The President looked down upon Bro. Billyjim in a cold-blooded way, and finally replied:

Bro. Billyjim, that motion is only 16 degrees of longitude out of order, but it betrays a reckless disregard of the eternal fitness of things that almost paralyzes me. When this Great Club imagines that it has become so pretty, and the various members so filled up with vanity that the business of the Dominion of Canada must go to grass while we grin at ourselves in a looking glass, it will be time for us to disband. You have evidently become soft on the top of the head. But for believing this to be the case, I would fine you as high as $28,000 and costs. Sit right down. Bro. Billyjim, and the less you say between now and next New Year's, the better it will be for you.

A PROPOSAL.

The janitor handed a sealed envelope to the President. He stated that he had received it annonymously.

On opening the letter it was found to contain an offer from Professor Gustavus Johnstone, of Bobcaygeon, to deliver his celebrated lecture on astromony for $9 (to be paid in advance) He went on to say that he could prove that the popular theory of the sun moving is entirely wrong. He would expect some member of the Lime Juice Club to board and lodge him, and the Fire Brigade Band to meet him at the depot.

The Secretary was instructed to answer that this club did not care a continental whether the sun moved or not, provided the moon appeared on regular dates, as several members held stock in the Peterborough Electric Light Company, and that $2.50 was the highest price the club would pay for any kind of a lecture, not followed by a grand display of fireworks.

ADJOURNED.

Bro. Buckeye called the President's attention to rule 376,428, which states that no business transacted after 11 p. m. would be legal, so the balance of the business was put in the safe, and the meeting went home for one week.

"RESPECTING THE POLICE FORCE."

Editor Morning Times.

SIR,—In reply to "Citizen," whose nerves seems to be in an excitable state, the writer would say that while the actions of those who brought forward the proposed declaring of certain official situations vacant is and should always be subject to criticism, the judgment of the motives which actuate the proposal is wrong and unmanly. For the information of "Citizen" I might add that the men in the Council who advocate the proposed system are as solicitious of the public welfare and morality as ever "Citizen" was or likely to be, and that respecting the efficiency of the police force in the past, opinions differ—opinions just as good and sound as "Citizens." Every good action is quite right and appreciated by the Councillors seeking intrenchment with efficency, but they do not want lobsided efficency nor men who can see a parade of public immorality and not a finger raised in defiance of decency and morality—the late Stevens case for instance, when a man lived in open adultry with his sister-in-law and was denounced by the press for so doing, but where was the efficency of the police in that instance? Were not public morals as much shocked as they were with the pictures on bill boards?

Good men are not quite so scarce as "Citizen" would fancy, nor are these Councillors put in positions of trust by the ratepayers this year cowards or blacklegs, and I can assure "Citizen" that neither threats nor flattery can move them from their duty to serve the ratepayers honestly and fearlessly, and they have more behind them than "whisperings" and "evil surmisings." They are in perfect accord with the moral sentiment of the town, purpose ignoring bluster and blatherskite and consider that if a general lowering of high salaried people was to take place these hard times it would meet with public approbation and go more towards convincing ratepayers that "Citizen" is in touch with the people than trying to thwart honest endeavors for improvement.

A Clerical Bank Robber.

PORTLAND, Ore., Feb. 8.—On Wednesday afternoon a man entered the First National Bank, of East Portland, and presented a revolver and called on Cashier E. T. Holgate, who was alone in the bank, to throw up his hands. The cashier complied, and the intruder then bound and gagged him, after which he started to empty the coin trays into a sack which he carried. At this juncture the cashier of the Citizens' Bank, across the street, who saw the affair, rushed in with a shotgun and arrested the robber, who was then turned over to the police. The thief was identified as the Rev. J. F. Reid, a Baptist minister. Reid came into notoriety a few months ago by disappearing, after leaving his clothes on the river bank, to give the impression that he had been drowned. He afterwards turned up in Illinois, where he claimed to be suffering from mental troubles. When Reid entered the bank he wore a long, false beard, but in the scuffle it was torn off, revealing his identity.

The Worst Cases of Rheumatism Are Cured by Paine's Celery Compound.

A MARVELOUS CURE IN THOROLD, ONT.

F. McMANN.

Thousands of men and women in all ranks and classes of society, owe their present comfort, ease, health and strength to the life-giving virtues of Paine's Celery Compound.

Paine's Celery Compound has conquered more hard and desperate cases of rheumatism, and conferred greater blessings on men and women, than all the combined efforts of other medicines.

Paine's Celery Compound from the start begins the good work; every drop is charged with curing power, and the grand results always astonish the sufferer.

The case of Mr. F. McMann, of Thorold, Ont., was a remarkable one; and astonished hundreds. Few men ever suffered more; his condition was a desperate one, but Paine's Celery Compound was all-powerful and prevailed over his disease. Mrs. McMann, writing for her husband, says:—

"I think it my duty to let you know what Paine's Celery Compound has done for my husband. For two years he suffered very much with rheumatism in the back, and became so bad that he could not bend, stoop, or sit in a chair at table, and I was obliged to take his meals to him while he lay in bed. He was treated by various physicians, but received no benefit until he used Paine's Celery Compound. The first bottle gave him relief, and after he had used six bottles he was quite free from the rheumatism. He was troubled with piles for fourteen years, and found great relief from the Compound. He says he feels like a new man just now. We think there is no medicine like Paine's Celery Compound."

THE CHILDREN'S AID SOCIETY.

Editor of the Times.

DEAR SIR,—Mr. John Sawers announced to me this morning that he was going "to fight the Children's Aid Society from the word, go!" He was no doubt riled just then because our agent, Mr. Miller, had investigated a case requiring the Charity Committee's attention. An applicant had knocked at the Relief Officer's door but as Mr. Sawers was not within our agent took the complaint and investigated. He reported the facts to Mr. Sawers who received our "meddlesome interference" with very bad grace. I endeavored to explain to Mr. Sawers that the Society was a purely benevolent institution looking to the protection and the rescue not to the punishment of people. To this he answered that the "poor man's house was his castle" and that we were invading the poor man's rights. I characterised this as a false and maliciously false statement, made for the purpose of belying a society that is only one of a vast number the world over. Must the two governments that provided the enlightened legislation taken from similar legislation in England and other countries where the system has been tried and found a godsend to the poor, for whose benefit it was primarily established, undo the legislative work! Must we, too, withdraw from a friendly co-operation with like minded people because Mr. Sawers says it is a fad! I would treat his statement with silent contempt, but his misstatements I am advised to attack. We appeal to public sentiment. If the facts are against us, then we ought to fail, but if they are distinctly in our favor, we ask the public to judge us accordingly.

Our sole aim is to HELP the poor and defenceless, and we have shown in the courts that we are no respectors of persons. Mr. Sawers vehemently denounced the large expenditure for charity. "There was $3,000 spent for charity last year and I'm going to stop it," he said; and this too from the poor man's friend.

Yours, etc.,
HAMPDEN BURNHAM.

CONSIDERED A RUSE.

The Latest About the Imprisoned Queen of Hawaii.

Special to the Times.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 7.—Advices from Honolulu say that the Queen's abdication was not unexpected. In many quarters it is looked upon as a ruse to secure clemency when she appears before the military court now sitting. It is not generally considered that she is sincere in making the protestation.

The profound secrecy with which affairs are conducted has led many citizens to believe that the rebels will be dealt with in a lenient manner. In consequence of this theory, members of the Citizens' Guards have met and signed a petition to President Dole to be firm and punish the rebels as they deserve. Among those on trial, charged with treason, is Volney Ashford, formerly of Ontario, Canada.

The Government, replying to the ex-Queen's abdication, addresses her as Mrs. Liliuokalani Dominis, and states that it cannot be taken to exempt her in the slightest degree from personal and individual liability for such complicity as a due investigation and trial may show that she had in the late conspiracy against the Government and the consequent loss of life.

It concludes by saying: "So far as your communication may be taken as a notice to the disaffected, that it is your desire that the Republic shall be recognized by them as the sole and lawful Government of the country, it is fully appreciated. In this connection your unselfish appeal for clemency for those who took part in the late insurrection will receive full consideration."

THE OLD-TIME FIRE.

Talk about yer buildin's
  That's het up by steam—
Give me the old oak fire
  Where the old folks used to dream.
The rickety dog-irons,
  One-sided as could be;
The ashes banked with taters
  That was roastin' there fer me.
The dog on one side drowsin',
  Or barkin' nigh the door;
The kitten cuttin' capers
  With the knittin' on the floor.
An' me a little tow-head
  By mammy's side at night;
With both my cheeks a burnin'
  From the red flames leapin' bright.
These steam-het buildin's make me
  Jest weary fer the blaze
That was heap more comfortable
  In my childhood's nights and days
An' I'd give the finest heater
  In the buildin's het by steam
For the old-time chimbly corner
  Where the old-folks used to dream.

THE VISITING MINISTERS.

Policy of the Government Defended.

LIVE ISSUES DISCUSSED.

Mr. Laurier's Toronto Speech Severely Criticised—What Protection Has Done For Canada—An Enthusiastic Gathering.

The demonstration tendered the visiting Cabinet Ministers, the reception given them by the citizens and the vast turn-out that crowded the Opera House at the Grand Conservative Rally held last night, was creditable to the Conservatives of this riding and to the patriotism of Peterborough.

The Ministerial car containing Hon. John Haggart, Minister of Railways and Canals; Hon. Thomas Mayne Daly, Minister of the Interior, and Dr. Montague, arrived at the Grand Trunk station at 5.15 yesterday afternoon. A large crowd, composed of members of the Liberal Conservative Association and citizens, headed by the band, had gathered at the depot. Upon alighting from the car the Ministers were greeted with cheers. They were welcomed by Mayor Kendry, Mr. James Stevenson, M. P., and Mr. John Burnham, M. P., and immediately conducted to carriages, which proceeded to the Oriental hotel, followed by a long procession of cabs and headed by the band playing patriotic airs.

The ministers dined privately with the mayor and the members from East and West Peterborough. From 7 o'clock until 7.30 a reception was held, and a large number of prominent conservatives were received by the ministers.

IN THE OPERA HOUSE.

THE BUILDING CROWDED TO THE DOORS—A LARGELY ATTENDED MEETING.

It had been announced that the chair would be taken at the meeting in the evening at 8 o'clock. Long before that hour every available seat in the Opera House had been filled. A few minutes before eight the Ministers were escorted from the Oriental hotel, the band leading. When they reached the Opera House they were greeted by an immense throng, that filled every seat and every available inch of standing room.

The Opera House was profusely decorated with flags, colored bunting, banners and mottoes. Across the right hand box were lettered banners containing the words: "Canada for Her Sons," "Welcome, thrice Welcome," and on the left hand box, "No alien party need apply." Around the walls were other mottoes as "We Stand by the National Policy," "The Maple Leaf Forever," "Canada for Canadians," "Georgian Bay to Lake Ontario by Trent Valley Canal," "Our Great National Work, the Trent Valley Canal," "A United Empire," "Haggart, the Protector of Canadian Workmen." Across the front of the stage in large letters was the word "Welcome," and in the rear "God Save the Queen."

On the stage were numerous citizens and members of the Liberal-Conservative Associations of both ridings. The Ministers entered with the Mayor, who presided and Messrs. Jas. Stevenson, M.P., and John Burnham, M.P. They were greeted with applause. Mayor Kendry opened the meeting, welcoming the Ministers to Peterborough in the name of the citizens, whose feeling of welcome, he thought he voiced. There were most important questions to be discussed that were vital to Peterborough, the most important of which was the Trent Valley Canal. He had no doubt the Ministers would make themselves clear on that matter, as well as explain and define the policy of the government. He then referred to the speech made by Mr. Laurier, whose policy, he said would result in pitting the farmers against the manufacturers, and the manufacturers against the farmers. If the country was to progress the farmers and the manufacturers would have to work together. He spoke of Peterborough's market as the best in Ontario, and a direct result of a combination of the farming and manufacturing industries of the county. He then attacked Mr. Laurier's speech in Massey Music Hall, Toronto. He declared that the country did not desire nor want a revenue tariff if it operated as it did in the United States.

MR. JAMES STEVENSON, M.P.

Mr. James Stevenson, M.P., was the first speaker introduced. He didn't propose to take up the time of the audience, who were anxious to hear the Ministers. He would take another opportunity to explain how he had worked in furthering the construction of the Trent Valley Canal. Hon. Mr. Haggart had some interesting things to say on this matter, and he assured the gathering they could rely on everything the Minister of Railways and Canals said. The Ministers would satisfy the audience that the policy of the party was the true one, and that protection was necessary to the future growth and prosperity of Canada. "We can't live without protection," concluded the speaker.

Mr. John Burnham, M.P., followed his colleague. He simply wished to state his position as a member of parliament, and the position of the government. "I am a stronger protectionist than I ever was," said Mr. Burnham. He thought protection was necessary to the party and he had no doubt the electors would again endorse the policy of the country at the next elections, did they occur sooner or later.

HON. MR. DALY.

The Minister of the Interior was greeted with cheers when he arose to speak. He stated that he and his colleagues were present to outline the policy of his party to criticise the "policies" of the opposition. Mr. Daly then recited the old story that, since 1874, the Liberal leaders had been constantly changing their policy, and had not succeeded in fastening themselves to any one which the people would accept. He prophesied that the people of this country would diagnose their present policy and give the same verdict in regard to it that they had to all those they had had in the past, namely, they would reject it at the polls. Mr. Laurier had said that protection was slavery. "Why is it," asked the speaker, "the people of Canada have not thrown off this bondage at any of the times they had an opportunity of doing so, from 1878 to 1891?" Continuing, Mr. Daly accused Mr. Laurier of having publicly declared his allegiance to the policy of protection 19 years ago. So had many of the leaders of his party, but they had changed with Mr. Laurier, and had changed for the purpose of getting into power. Mr. Charlton and Mr. William Paterson had expressed themselves emphatically in favor of protection, and yet these were the men who were on the platform of Massey Hall declaring that this policy which they had formerly declared their belief in was an oppressive one on the country and kept the people in bondage. It was, Mr. Daly said, the policy in the interest of the country, it was the one which the Conservative party had unalterably followed.

The National Policy had meant the building up of the country from one end to the other, and not simply the levying of a duty on certain classes of goods. It was the policy for the making of a nation. To show that this object had been achieved, Mr. Daly went back to the time of Confederation and devoted some considerable time to showing how Sir John Macdonald had built the C.P.R., and how, in his opinion, the construction of this work had cemented the Provinces together and gone far towards making Canada not only known to the world but prosperous. But the Conservative Government had done much more than this. They had constructed canals and other great public works and had jealously guarded the best interests of the people.

Mr. Daly said he was glad that Mr. Laurier and Sir Richard Cartwright had abandoned their policy of unrestricted reciprocity, but he contended that the policy they now promulgated would be rejected by the people as emphatically as the other policies had been. Such a policy would not work in this country. Mr. Daly said that it was not on account of the National Policy, as intimated by the Liberal leaders, that the depression existed during the past two years. The depression was a universal one, and but for the National Policy the country would be in a great deal worse condition. The speaker then contrasted the condition of the country today with its condition when the Reform party was in power.

Then the speaker referred to the debt of the country of $247,000,000, and contended that for every dollar spent splendid value had been obtained. He argued that the Government departments were carefully and well managed, and he took the Liberal leaders to task for their criticism, especially of Hon. Mr. Haggart. Referring to Mr. Laurier's statement that the towns and cities were being built up at the expense of the rural districts, Mr. Daly said it was true that for the past 30 years, in every civilized country in the world, the people had been drifting from the farms to the cities.

In regard to Mr. Laurier's reference to the 500,000 immigrants who did not remain in this country, Mr. Daly said that the Liberal leader's utterances were misleading. The passenger list of every vessel did not show the destination of its passengers and if it had a destination placed opposite the names these points of destination as given were not always the right ones. Mr. Laurier, too, had not taken into consideration output, namely, those people who had left the country during the period of which he was speaking. Mr. Daly then spoke of the increase of population of Manitoba since 1881, showing that a considerable increase had taken place. He ended in a flight of eloquence crediting the government with farsightedness, and outlining its policy as one conductive to a progress of the whole and not individual industries. Ours was a grand Canada—a Canada for Canadians.

The speaker was frequently applauded.

DR. MONTAGUE.

Dr. Montague was introduced with loud and prolonged applause. He alluded to the vast audience that had so enthusiastically welcomed him and his party, which was but a repetition of the receptions tendered them on every hand, and which he opined evinced more than party spirit. He regarded their warm welcome in every municipality throughout the country indicative of the safety of his party and felt assurred that on their appeal to the country the government would be sustained by an unprecedented majority. Referring to the various reasons given by the opposition for the approaching dissolution, he emphaized that given by the Hon. Mr. Mills, the philosopher of Bothwell, who asserted that the Government was postponing the date for fear of the sword preventing the Conservative electors from reaching the polls. He fancied that the philosopher himself, together with his party, were rather expecting to be snowed under." The doctor alluded to the disasters of the Liberal party during the past few years which they apparently attribute to "Unrestricted Reciprocity" and Sir Richard Cartwright. Sir Richard's absence from their recent meetings was significant in itself, and it seemed as though the Reformers had made a Jonah of him, and thrown him overboard to save their sinking vessel. (laughter.) He hoped that Mr. Laurier's trip abroad would prove beneficial in proving to his satisfaction the mistakes he and his party had been guilty of in opposing the North Shore Railway and the many other schemes, accruing from the National Policy, to promote the interests of the Dominion. He alluded to the increase of industries, during late years, in almost every town and village in the country, to the satisfaction of even Liberals themselves, who did not wish the Policy disturbed. The London Advertiser even, commented that one tall chimney was worth a thousand talkative but inactive men, such as he claimed the Laurier party to be composed of. In the town of Peterborough he noticed the population had increased 42 per cent. and 12½ per cent. in the country, which was in accord with the interests of both the town and rural districts. We do not need an equal increase in the farming districts with that of the town. The consumers should outnumber the producers to ensure prosperity to both parties. He felt confident that when the time arrived for the Government to appeal to the country, the electors of East and West Peterborough would return Messrs. Stevenson and Burnham with overwhelming majorities. (Cheers.) Continuing, the doctor expressed his pleasure in being in the company of the Minister of Railways and Canals. He had been accused of extravagancy, but comparing the administration of his department under the National Policy with that of the Mackenzie Government the results were astounding. The present Government had not only wiped off the enormous deficit amounting close upon one million dollars of the Intercolonial Railway under the Mackenzie administration, but had also paid to the country a surplus of $5,000 and this had been accomplished during a season when American Railways were going to the wall. He denied the accusation of the present Dominion Administration being an extravagant one, and would ask if the Mowat Government were not guilty of this failing. Continuing, the speaker compared the expenditure of the present Administration from 1888 to 1893 with that of the provinces under Liberal Administration, proving the increase in the former case to have been from 16 to 64 per cent. as against a quarter of one per cent. in the former. The doctor referred to Mr. Laurier's statement at Massey Hall, in Toronto, that he thought was ungenerous to the Conservative party. He had stated that Mr. Mackenzie had been abused and vilified by the Conservative party, and given the most unkind treatment, "treatment," said he, "that would make any Conservative blush for shame." So far as the speaker's knowledge of the Conservative party was concerned he absolutely denied that statement. (Hear, hear.) They had criticised Mr. Mackenzie's policy and administration, as they had a right to do, and as they would do again, or that of Mr. Laurier or anyone else but they had criticised it honestly and manfully, and the people had declared they were right in 1878. (Hear, hear.) Mr. Mackenzie had made mistakes and his judgment was not always correct, but he (Dr. Montague) believed he had been actuated by an honest purpose and had endeavored to do right, and, as his character was so high, perhaps it would be well to tell them what Mr. Mackenzie thought of his associates, the men who were now seeking their assistance to get into office. In 1875 he had said of them in a letter written to a friend, that he would like to be relieved of the Public Works Department, as friends expected to be benefited by offices for which they were unfit, and that he was compelled to lie on his arms night and day, and feared that he had offended at least twenty friends by his defence of the citadel. He (Dr. Montague) wished to call their attention to the fact that the man who had defended the citadel was gone, but the fellows who wanted to assault and rob it were still with them, and were appealing to them under various guises for support, and they were the same men whom the people had turned out of office for incapacity and dishonesty in 1878.

Continuing, the speaker said that for years the Liberal party had been attacking the National Policy, but it was only recently they had openly declared their determination to sweep away that policy when once in power. And Sir Richard Cartwright had announced the N. P. to be worse than war or famine. Mr. Laurier had himself asserted that he would not rest until he had wiped out every protective measure in the country. These are not his (Dr. Montague) statements, but those of the Liberal leaders; and when you go to the poll you should bear in mind that you are either casting your ballot for "the removal of a fiscal policy" or for Protection. Don't forget this.

Continuing, the speaker referred to the commercial and widespread depression that prevailed, in the midst of which Canada stood "as a chimney in a heap of smoking ruins," said the Financial News, of London, England, a paper which kept a keen eye on the commercial world. The Dominion, said that paper, was the only country which had successfully weathered the financial disasters in which other nations had gone down. What better testimony of the value of their National Policy could they have? How would they have stood if they had adopted Commercial Union or Unrestricted Reciprocity? Was there a Liberal that would say they would have been better off? Why, during the Mackenzie Administration farm laborers farmers and mechanics travelled to Ottawa and petitioned the Government for relief, so great was the depression in trade. The cause of this was our markets were teeming with foreign produce and manufactured goods; our own people were consuming the products of others, and still there was an imposed tariff of 17 1-2 per cent. at that time. Notwithstanding this the Reform party will ask you to vote for the destruction of the N. P. Free Trade will not necessarily accrue from the introduction of the Opposition's policy; it means throwing open our own markets without receiving the same privileges from abroad. The only way to secure Free Trade is to keep the tariff up against the world and negotiating with other countries for reciprocal relations, where beneficial to ourselves. When the world ever gets our markets it is independent of us and we would not then be in a position to demand equal consideration in return. The speaker then reviewed the history of European countries which had tried free trade in this century. It each case it had been disastrous, proving that only under very exceptional circumstances could such a policy be successfully operated. There were three things that the Conservative party had striven for and meant to hold to. First, that if they could not get another market they should at least hold on to their own; secondly, that as the Government was compelled to impose a tariff for revenue they proposed to place it where it would insure the most employment to their own people; and, thirdly, that as they had to impose a tariff they would do it themselves and not permit a foreign nation to do so. (Applause.)

Continuing, the doctor opined that even the Reformers were in favor of a protective policy where their own individual interests were concerned and instanced the action taken by the city of Brantford in granting a bonus to retain the Waterous Manufacturing Co. in the city. He felt quite confident that the member for that constituency, Mr. Paterson, a Reformer, favored the the measure, and would wager him a bran new suit of clothes that he voted in favor of the bonus rather than it should remove to some other locality. He referred to the fact that no taxes go to the Government excepting those on wines, liquors and cigars and the customs. Regarding the former the man who takes a glass of liquor does not care much for what he is taxed for the indulgence, and the more he drinks the less he cares.

The doctor expatiated upon the economical action of the Government, in reducing the tariff to the extent of two million dollars during the past five years. The policy of the present administration is to reduce taxation on the necessaries of life, and keep it up where it will ensure the nation's interests in the employment of Canadian workingmen. He referred in glowing terms to the Governments refusing to treat with the United States on their stipulated condition of discriminating against the Mother Country and alluded to the protection we enjoy from her protection. He urged his audience to ever remember the praiseworthy sentiment:

> "A British subject I was born,
> A British subject I will die,"

and hoped the young men would stand forth with the Conservative party and defend the Dominion against the enemies of Canadian and British interests. (Loud Cheers.)

HON. JOHN HAGGART,

Minister of Railways and Canals, received three hearty British cheers on being introduced by the chairman. His welcome was undoubtedly doubly assured by the expectancy of the audience in receiving a statement of the Government's intentions regarding the Trent Valley Canal. He was sorry time would not permit of a lengthy speech, and would be as brief and concise as possible. Referring to the date of the coming election, he said it would be some time shortly within a week or a month or a year—it is bound to come. (laughter.) He corroborated the previous speaker's statements regarding the fiscal policy of the two parties, and divided the Opposition's statement that the Administration could be conducted at a less expenditure than at present—$38,000,000. They said they could work with a reduced tariff, but when asked to explain their proposed method of economical administration, one can never get them to particularize. He opined the advent of the Laurier party into power would prove ruinous to the country, especially should they carry out the same policy that ruined Quebec, under the administration of Mr. Mercier, condemned the proposed policy of Mr. Laurier, that of destroying the present protective tariff which would prove determental to the interests of the country at large. Alluding to the specific taxation enjoyed by the great Free Trade country, Great Britain, and maintained that it was levelled up by taxation on income, mortgages, horses, and many other luxuries enjoyed by the wealthy. Should Mr. Laurier succeed in abolishing our tariff we would have neither specific nor excheque taxation. We promised to place the taxes so as not to prohibit importation. We cannot have improved articles and machinery, but by competition, which tends to keep up the skill of artisans. He opined that our woollen, cotton and leather goods were as good as any manufactured in the world, with which we can successfully compete under the Protective Policy. Our agricultural implements also are excellent, and are being exported to Australia and other countries, which demonstrates that we can not only supply our own markets in the face of competition, but can secure markets all over the world. The iron of this Dominion of ours will also compare favorably with that of foreign powers, and had an import been placed upon this metal early enough we should now be enjoying the same advantages in this respect as the United States, the iron of which is no better than our own. In Alabama they are now producing pig iron at $6.75 per ton cheaper than that which can be imported, which is the result of a Protective Tariff. He believed the N. P. would have in time the same result regarding the metal as it had in United States, and in this country regarding leather, woollen and cotton goods, etc. The N. P. affords protective to our home industries and ensures our own market to our own people, which is now the policy of every country in the world. Continuing, the speaker alluded to the Free Trade of England, concerning which Lord Salisbury has stated that the day is coming when England will have to adopt the Protective Tariff. He referred to the action of Great Britain in giving a percentage of her steel rail industry to Germany and Belgium in order to keep the trade that was originally her own.

Continuing, the speaker was positive that a sweeping away of the N. P. would prove disastrous to the country producing depression even worse than that of the United States last year, when over 450 banks were wiped out. Alluding to the policy of the reformers he presumed it would receive as decent a burial as their Commercial Union and unrestricted reciprocity, when the electors thoroughly understand the situation (cheers).

In conclusion, the speaker said he had a word or two to say regarding the Government's intentions with reference to the Trent Valley Canal. (Loud and prolonged cheers.) It will undoubtedly be completed as fast as the finances of the county will permit. They had already awarded the contract for that section from Balsam Lake to Lake Simcoe to Mr. Onderdonk, which will be placed under way at once, and will be finished by the end of next summer. The contract for the section from Peterborough to Lakefield will be let immediately, the plans therefore are prepared and the other sections will be proceeded with as soon as practicable. He hopes to live long enough to see as Minister of Railways and Canals the whole thing completed. He eulogised Mr. Stevenson for the interest he had manifested in the matter and he remarked that he lived in dread of his importunities in this direction. He believed the canal will prove beneficial to the country, for should only a few boats pass over it each day it will have a tendency to regulate railway freights. The Conservative Government always fulfilled its promises, and if this section of the country has as much right to beneficial improvements as any other, he hoped to see both Mr. Stevenson and Mr. Burnham returned at the pending election, for both gentlemen were beloved by the Conservative members of the House. (Cheers.)

A vote of thanks was unanimously tendered the several speakers and the chairman, after which the meeting dispersed with three rousing cheers.

YOUNG'S POINT.

(From our our own correspondent.)

The social ball and supper held on Monday evening, under the auspices of the Young's Point Base Ball Club, was a brilliant success. The country for miles around was represented parties being present from Peterborough, Lakefield, Warsaw, Chemong and Ennismore. The hall was tastefully decorated with evergreen and bunting. Conspicuous among the decorations was a large diamond, at the head of the hall, in which hung the bats and balls. The programme was most magnificantly got up and carried out in first-class order with Butcher's orchestra furnishing most delightful music. Sixty-seven persons sat down to a sumptuous supper served by the club in P. A. Kearney's dining room. After supper the dancers returned to the hall and the programme was continued. About 5 o'clock the party dispersed and every one expressed themselves delighted with their evening's enjoyment, one and all agreeing that it was the best ball ever given in this vicinity.

ADVICE FOR THE NEW COUNCIL.

You owe your election to the people and them you should serve.

Do not allow a resolution to pass becuse you do not understand it.

It is your duty to be familiar with the town's business.

Vote for the town rather than for your party.

Do not shirk the divisions. 'Tis bettter you should vote and lose than you should never vote at all.

It is more profitable to talk sense than to address the back benches.

If you have nothing new to say on a question say nothing at all.

Silence is said to be golden. With some councillors it is diamonds and rubies beside.

A good committeeman makes a good councilman.

Fortunately all the wisdom of the Council is not in one skull; therefore keep your mind open to conviction.

It is not good form to vote on one side in committee and on the other in council. Beware the sudden somersault.

An open mouth is not a proof of wisdom. It is better to keep your eyes and ears open.

Manage the town's affairs as you would your own business.

New Post Office Regulations.

Under the new post office regulations of Canada undelivered letters will not be returned to the writer unless a request for such return is made in printed letters on the corner of the envelope. Written requests will not do. You can get at the TIMES office just the kind of envelope needed for very little more than blank envelopes would cost you.

Almost Frozen.

A gentleman named Bearden took the Bobcaygeon stage to that village on Thursday. When the stage was near its destination the driver discovered that his passenger was unconscious and nearly frozen. When Bobcaygeon was reached, and medical aid called in, it was found that Bearden had been actually freezing, and owing to insufficient clothing had relapsed into unconsciousness.

Special Features Crowded Out.

THE SATURDAY TIMES was compelled to omit from its columns this week, "Our Eligible Bachelors," "Peterborough Thirty Years Hence," and other special features, owing to a large amount of important political matter, and a long report of The North American Life Assurance Company contained in this issue. Next week we will have plenty of space and the special features will be published. The next issue of THE SATURDAY TIMES will more than make up for the deficiency in the line of special features this week.

Death of Miss Dixon.

Mr. A. E. Dixon has received the intelligence of the death of his neice, Miss Violet Dixon, at Maple Creek, N.W.T. Deceased went to the Northwest some months ago for her health. The excitement and exposure she was subject to at the time of the burning of her uncle's residence was a great shock to her constitution and undoubtedly hurried the end. Deceased was very popular in the circle in which she moved in Peterborough and a large number of friends will mourn her death. The interment will take place in Maple Creek today.

Not a Bright Outlook.

In his forecast of the weather, Mr. Walter H. Smith, of Montreal, has the following to say of February: This month will give us more "weather"—if that be possible—than its predecessor. Its mild spells will be productive of abundant snows and rains conducing to floods. Its cold terms will yield some wild storms. Contrary to its usual "dry cold" character, February will prove an essentially stormy month. A round dozen "general storm periods," are likely to traverse the lake region and the St. Lawrence Valley within its twenty-eight days, or say a fresh storm about every third day. Of thirteen major aspects occurring within the twenty-eight days, twelve are storm producers.

HOCKEY NOTES.

The Peterboroughs Will Journey to Kingston Next Saturday.

The Peterboroughs have decided to wait until next Saturday to go to Kingston. 'Varsity plays Kingston tonight, and as one match might detract from the other, it was thought best to postpone the trip. The boys will leave here next Saturday afternoon in a special car for themselves and friends.

Tonight on the rink the Collegiate I will play the Volte II in the town league series. A good game may be expected.

Rubenstein who was billed to appear on the rink tonight has postponed his skating exhibition.

THE MEETING POSTPONED,

Trains Were Snow Bound and McCarthy Could Not Get Here.

The McCarthy League demonstration advertised to be held in the Opera House last night did not take place.

Toronto, Feb. 8th, 1895.

Would not it be wiser to postpone meeting. It is storming so that it is very probable that our trains will be blocked.

DALTON McCARTHY,

Accordingly the meeting was postponed. It will be held some time in the future, the exact date yet to be arranged.

The postponement of the meeting was undoubtedly a wise move. The weather all day yesterday and last night was bitterly cold, and the country roads were blocked. It is doubtful, had the meeting been held, if the attendance would have been more than a mere handful.

THE DATE IS FIXED

The Masonic Lodge of Instruction, to consider and prepare for the holding of which here a strong committee from the two local lodges was appointed, will be held here on Wednesday and Thursday, Feb. 20 and 21. The committee have considered a program but it has not been completed in all details.

The D. D. G. M. will issue a summons calling all the lodges to convene at Peterboro' on dates mentioned and the lodge will open on Wednesday afternoon and continue in the evening, all day Thursday and close on Thursday evening.

It is expected that there will be a large number of the members of the craft from the lodges in Millbrook, Lakefield, Lindsay Port Hope, Oshawa, Bowmanville, Whitby, Keene and the other lodges in district No. 12 here for the occasion, which will be one of interest and profit to all Masons. The local committee will make all necessary arrangements for the entertainment of the visitors and the holding of the lodge. Brethren outside of the district will also be present.

ANOTHER PELTING STORM.

Snow and Wind Combine to Blockade Trains and Handicap Traffic.

The storm king is again in the ascendant, and the railway are in the the throes of a serious blockades.

A pelting snow storm set in shortly after midnight on Friday morning and has raged unceasingly ever since. Huge drifts of snow were piled across the railway tracks and yesterday all trains on both roads were late. On the Grand Trunk the Belleville train which should have arrived at 8.30 did not steam into the depot until the afternoon. The Belleville mixed and Lakefield trains were cancelled.

The C. P. R. trains were badly delayed. The noon express was over an hour late. The 7.40 local from Toronto, did not arrive here until two o'clock this morning and the 11.40 through train got in about three o'clock this morning. The train hands report the tracks to be buried beneath heavy drifts, and the work of the snow plough is quickly effaced by the fierce winds which cover the tracks as fast as they are cleared. A heavy storm, accompanied by fierce winds is raging as far west as Detroit and as far east as Ottawa. All Grand Trunk trains west of Toronto were cancelled after the disastrous pitch-in. It will be several days before regular traffic will be resumed.

The Lindsay Central and the North Victoria agricultural society have received financial aid from the county council to the extent of $200 each for their next fall fair.

The Rugby Minstrels had a rehearsal last night and will give the performance in the latter part of this month. The choruses and fancy drills promise to be especially interesting.

A man was last week sentenced in Toronto to four years in the penitentiary for perjury in connection with a liquor case. The punishment was well deserved in this instance, and it was necessary as a warning to others. There has been a shocking amount of false swearing of late, and it is quite time a vigorous effort were made to put a stop to it.

We regret that the game between the Peterborough pedagogues and the Lindsay pedagogues had to be postponed on account of Mr. Kenner, one of the Peterborough team, accidentally breaking his arm. It is expected that the game will be played on Saturday afternoon. Mr. M. O'Brien will take Mr. Kenner's place on the Peterborough team.—Lindsay Watchman.

Country editors always remain poor, but that is because they are not mean enough to get rich. In order to get rich it is only necessary to trust nobody or befriend none; to get everything and save all you get; to stint ourselves and everybody belonging to us; be a friend to no man and have no man for our friend; to be mean, miserly and despised for about 40 years. And when pretty near enough wealth is collected—by a disregard of the human heart—at the expense of every enjoyment save that of wallowing in filthy meanness, death comes to finish the work.

SPORTS OF ALL SORTS.

Jim Hall and his manager, L. T. Curtis, have parted company.

The salary of the secretary of the League of American Wheelmen now $3,000, is to be cut down one-third.

"Young Griffo" and Horace Leeds, the Philadelphian, are to meet before the Seaside Club of Coney Island on the 4th of March.

"Parson" Davies wants to match Joe Choynski against Charlie Mitchell to box in England for any stake from £200 to £2,000 a side.

Dan Creedon is announced to sail for England today, his mission being to take down "the Coffee-Cooler's" number. Slavin and the Cooler are to meet on the 11th of March.

Saturday, June 15th, has been selected as the day for the parade of the wheelmen to inaugurate the opening of the Coney Island cycle path. It is expected that fully 10,000 bicyclist will be in line on this occasion.

Fred Hoey, the American representative at Monte Carlo, certainly found the pigeon shooting there a hard game. He dropped out in the first round for the grand prize, missing two birds out of four. Signor Benvenuti won with 16 birds killed. Messieurs Derivon and Deschamays (French) were second with 15, followed by Signor Galari with 14.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Gossip of People You Know and Those You Don't Know.

Rev. Father Dube, of Arthur, formerly of the cathedral here, renewed acquaintances in town this week. The many friends of Father Dube were pleased to meet him once more.

Mrs. Simon H. Weir and a daughter of Mrs. Wanda Weir, arrived home from Manchester, Eng., last night via New York, after an extended visit of eight months with parents.

A Metal Breadboard

THE WOMAN WHO HAS BEEN USED to kneading dough on the old fashioned wooden breadboard knows what a bother it is to get them clean and how cumbersome and heavy they are. When they begin to crack or check it is almost impossible to thoroughly cleanse them, and they may easily become dangerous conveyances of disease. It was left for a woman, of course, to remedy this state of affairs, and Mrs. M. M. Everhard, of St. Joseph, Mich., has patented a metal bread board, which is one of the greatest labor-savers imaginable. It is light, does not absorb grease, dough does not adhere to it, and while it possesses all the advantages of the marble bread-board it is much cheaper and, of course, far lighter and easier to handle. If readers want to confer a favor upon their wives that will be forever appreciated, let them send $1 to the manufacturers, 101 Bay street, Toronto, for one of these boards.

TWO DISASTERS ON THE G. T. R.

Full Particulars of The Wrecks That Cost Two Human Lives.

Mr. Joseph Cremated Alive in the Wreck near Weston—His Charred Remains Recovered—Engineer Riggs Killed in the Wreck Near Agincourt and Six of the Trainhands Were Seriously Injured, Some Fatally—Story of the Awful Disaster.

TORONTO, Feb. 9.—G. T. R. train from Chicago, due here at 8.15 a.m. yesterday, and composed of six cars, the last two being Pullman—the Scott from Chicago and the Jamaica from Detroit was about five hours late when it arrived at a point a mile west of Weston station, about ten miles west of the city. At this point it was stuck fast in a snow drift. Shortly after the train came to a standstill the brakeman passed through the car Scott, which was the last but one on the train, and stated, in reply to a question as to what was the trouble, that the train had stuck in the snow and that he was going back on the track with a red flag to protect the rear. The engineer of the London local, due here at 12.30, which was also about two hours late, did not observe the signals of the flagman, a blinding snowstorm prevailing at the time. The local came up at a fair pace, being somewhat impeded by the snow, and ran into the rear car of the Chicago train with a terrific shock

AN AWFUL CRASH.

The Last Pullman was Driven Into the One in Front.

The last Pullman was driven into the one in front, being telescoped nearly a third of its length, while the engine of the local telescoped the other end for a couple of yards. The shock was tremendous right through the Chicago train and it was driven ahead a hundred yards. The baggage car of the local train was driven on top of the engine and the engine of the local was terribly smashed. In the rear Pullman was a party of Toronto gentlemen returning from Stratford, where they had been engaged in connection with the hearing of the South Perth election petition on the previous day. The party consisted of Mr. Justice Burton, Mr. Justice Osler, judges in the case: B. B. Osler, Q. C., A. B. Aylesworth, Q. C., counsel in the case; Official Court Reporter Monaghan, J. J. Joseph and J. E. Atkinson, of the Globe newspaper. The only other occupant of the car was Mr. C. A. E. Carr, of the Toronto Railway Company. Judge Osler and his brother, B. B. Osler, had left the car while it lay snow-bound and gone forward to the front to see what the prospect of going on was. All the gentlemen, except Mr. Joseph, at the moment of the shock rushed towards the centre of the car. Mr. Joseph when last seen was near the front of the car. The passengers were dashed violently about the car and received more or less injuries.

CREMATED ALIVE.

Mr. Joseph Was Missing and Supposed to Have Perished in the Flames.

Judge Burton was cut about the head and bled profusely. Court Reporter Monoghan had both legs broken. Reporter Atkinson escaped with a broken rib, and the other passengers escaped serious injury, save Mr. Joseph. Fire broke out at the both ends of the hind car, and the passengers had to be pulled out through the windows. It was taken for granted that all were out and it was not until some time later that Mr. Joseph was found not to be among the party. The two Pullmans were then burning fiercely and there was no possible way of rescuing the unfortunate man, who is now supposed to have met his death there. Some of the spectators subsequently in reference to the matter stated that they believed they had detected the odor of burning flesh. No word had been heard of Joseph late last night and his friends have given him up. Search is being made as quickly as possible among the ruins of the wreck, but it was impossible last night to learn the result.

Joseph was 58 years of age, assistant law clerk at the Parliament Buildings and one of the most highly respected of the Provincial officials. Deceased was a bachelor.

BETWEEN TIMBERS

Was Engineer Mankering Caught—Severely Injured.

The engineer of the local train was Charles Mankering of Stratford. He was very severely injured, being squeezed between timbers. He was subsequently badly scalded and with the terrible shock to his system his recovery is doubtful. Fireman Hesson of the local, also a Stratford man, was also badly hurt. After being attended by a physician, they were taken to Malton to be transferred to Stratford. The injured passengers were treated by a physician from Weston and were brought into the city on the Chicago train. The burned cars, three in number, the fire having spread to the third car from the end were brought to Weston. Many of the passengers and train hands had their ears, cheeks and fingers frost bitten, through being compelled to stand out in the bitter cold. Late last night Judge Burton was reported resting easily. Monoghan was doing fairly well. His left hand is terribly crushed, in addition to both legs being broken. The uninjured portion of the London train was taken back to Malton. The line is still blocked.

JOSEPH'S REMAINS.

Charred and Blackened Were Recovered From Beneath the Debris.

Special to The Times.

TORONTO, Ont., Feb. 10.—The charred remains of Frank S. Joseph, assistant law clerk of the Legislative Assembly, who was killed in the Grand Trunk wreck at Wardlaw's Cut, near Weston, on Friday afternoon, were found by the crew of the wrecking train Saturday morning. The wreckers had been working all night long to clear the lines and tow the ruined trucks, which were all that remained of the railway coaches, to Weston. Working from the Weston end of the wreck the men were compelled to clear away the debris as they met with it, and the ruins of the pullman Jamaica in which it was thought some trace of Mr. Joseph would be discovered, were not reached until 1.30 o'clock Saturday morning. The storm has been raging for several hours with unabated fury and the snow had drifted in around the wheels until the wreck was covered in many places more than a foot deep. When the auxiliary had towed away the wreck of three coaches and the men turned their attention to the pullman Jamaica the storm had subsided. Shovels were vigorously plied and the snow thrown clear off the front end of the pullman and the search for a trace of human remains was begun.

As the rear end of the wrecked coach was being reached the men worked in expectant silence and in the strange light of the moon each new piece of blackened wreck to appear through the snow resembled a human form. The searchers were about to relinquish their quest and attach the huge tow lines of the auxiliary engine to the wreck when one worker peering down beneath the wreck and between the rear axles of the coach discovered what he thought to be a blackened bone. When the heavy iron framework had been cleared away a workman crawled beneath soon returning with all the consuming flames had spared of the unfortunate man.

PROVED IT

Was Mr. Joseph—Literally Burned to a Crisp—An Intense Heat.

A correspondent published Saturday that Mr. Joseph was in all probability in the lavatory when the pitch in occurred. The spot in which the remains were found bears out this version of his death. The lavatory was less than eight feet from the rear of the car, and when the engine sent its iron nose crashing through the pullman there could be no escape for Mr. Joseph. There is every probability that death came with merciful instantanity in the first crash and spared the victim from the horrors of a living cremation. No cries were heard issuing from the wreck, but no human voice could have been heard above the roar of the winds and flames and the hiss of the escaping steam.

The lavatory was crushed like an egg shell by the force of the collision. The remains were immediately placed on board the auxiliary and taken to Weston. Upon arrival there Dr. Charlton, coroner, was summoned and he made an examination of the body. The heat of the fire surrounding the body must have been intense as is attested, not only by the condition of the remains, but by the appearance of the wreck of the locomotive, the bell of which had been literally melted from its fastenings. The limbs, head and shoulders had been consumed to ashes, not a trace of a bone remaining. The vertebrae had been spared but was molten into one large mass. The drifting snow had extinguished the flames before they had entirely reduced the trunk and vital organs beyond any possibility of being recognized as a portion of a human form. The body had lain on the track while the fire was in progress. The condition of the vital organs showed that Mr. Joseph's life was literally crushed out of him in the first smash. The heart was driven downwards and the liver crushed in an opposite direction. Two inches of the stump of the large bone of the right leg is all that remains of the limbs. The texture of the dead man's clothing could be discovered among the ashes, and a single button was discovered. His glasses were molten into an opaque substance, and the remnants of the silver watch worn by Mr. Joseph had the appearance of a large clinker taken from a coal stove with the form of a small cog wheel discernable. The chain was a gold one and two links still retain their original form.

Coroner Charlton empanelled a jury and an inquest was opened in Weston town hall Saturday evening. Those of the passengers whose injuries would permit were present but an adjournment was made to await the outcome of the injuries to engineer Mainwaring and court reporter Monaghan.

The wrecking crew succeeded in clearing the lines to admit of traffic at 10.30 a.m. Saturday. The ruins of three coaches and the engine are now standing in the siding and the trucks of the remaining coaches will be cleared away from the scene of the disaster today.

Condition of the Injured.

Mr. Justice Burton yesterday gave signs of recovering from the injuries he received in the Weston railway accident. He sustained a severe shock to the system. He was attended Saturday by Dr. J. H. Cameron, and it is hoped he will soon be able to resume his judicial duties.

C. S. Monaghan was reported at 8 o'clock Saturday evening to be progressing favorably as regards the broken limbs. His internal injuries, especially those to the bladder, render his condition very critical. Late on Saturday evening Drs. Riordan and Cameron held a consultation respecting his condition. It it is still problematical whether he will recover.

ANOTHER ACCIDENT.

One Killed and Many Injured in a Pitch-in at Agincourt—Engineer Rigg Killed—Body Cut in Two.

Special to the Times.

TORONTO, Feb. 10. At 3.45 on Friday evening the Port Hope express No. 1 from the east collided with a snow plow special on the Midland line, one and a half miles east of Agincourt. The special consisted of an engine, a snow plow, a scraper and a van. At Milliken's Corners the special became lodged in the snow drift and, as in the Weston accident, the engineer of the Port Hope express was prevented by the heavy storm from hearing the warning. The snow plow was manned by a crew from Lindsay including Engineer Rigg and firemen James Cullen, both of Toronto; Frank Burton, brakeman; George W. Riley, conductor; Charles Moore, brakeman, and J. Dovey, of Stouffville, section foreman. The scraper and the van were behind the engine and they were completely telescoped.

Engineer Rigg was buried under the ruins, and when his body was gotten out on Saturday morning it was mutilated beyond recognition. The fireman, Cullen, had a miraculous escape, landing on top of the ruins without a scratch, though in his hair was a splinter big enough to perforate his skull. George W. Riley, the conductor, sustained serious injuries. Both bones of the left forearm were fractured and protruded through the flesh. The upper part of the arm was also fractured. Several ribs are broken and his body was badly scalded. Charles Moore, brakeman sustained severe scalp wounds and had his legs burned. Both Riley and Moore live in Lindsay and are being tended for at the general hospital.

Section foreman Dovey, of Stouffville, sustained severe scalp wounds and is being tended at his brother's home in Toronto. Frank Burton sustained a like injury and went home to Lindsay on Saturday night. There were about twenty five passengers on the Port Hope train, but saving one person, who had his brow scratched all escaped with a slight shaking up. As soon as the farmers of the vicinity learned of the accident they came to the assistance of the train men and passengers. Hot tea and provisions were carried to the scene and every passenger got a good meal.

GOOD SAMARITANS.

Came to the Aid of the Injured and Passengers.

Saturday morning a number of farmers came and carried most of them to their homes for breakfast and later other neighbors came to the scene with more provisions so that none suffered from hunger. It was after noon Saturday before the train could move away from the scene and the tracks were covered with show all the way to Toronto. At half past 6 o'clock in the evening it reached the Union station and the injured men were taken away in the ambulance. Dr. E. Sisley, of Maple, was on the scene an hour after the accident and cared for the wounded. Dr. Walters, the company's doctor at East Toronto, was telegraped for but was unable to reach the scene until daylight on Saturday.

An inquest on the remains of Riggs was being held at Agincourt Saturday night. The jury was empanelled and viewed the remains.

Dead and Injured.

Killed: JOHN RIGG, engineer. Picked out of the wreck at 3 p.m. Saturday by the auxiliary crew Toronto.

Injured: GEORGE RILEY, conductor of snow plow. Severe wound to hand, compound fracture of the arm and other serious injuries. He was taken to the general hospital, Toronto.

E. G. DOVEY, Section man. Hurt about head back and face. Removed to his home on Denison avenue.

ALFRED KENNEDY, student, Agincourt. Shoulder dislocated.

HAS LA GASCOGNE SUNK?

SEVEN DAYS OVERDUE AND STILL UNHEARD FROM.

Was Not Sighted by the Teutonic Which Arrived Safely in Port Reporting High Winds and Heavy Seas—Hope is Lessening.

Special to The Times.

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—The French line steamer La Gascogne, from Havre, Jan. 26, had not been sighted up to 11 o'clock this morning, as she was due to arrive here on Sunday last she is now six days overdue. The hope entertained that she was in company with the White Star steamer Teutonic was disappointed by the arrival last night of the latter steamer which reported that she had seen nothing of La Gascogne, her own delay having been occasioned by head winds and high seas.

The cause of La Gascogne's nonappearance can only be conjectured, but there can be little doubt now that her machinery is in some way disabled and she is working for port under reduced steam. The severe weather reported by the Teutonic is no doubt being encountered by La Gascogne but her long passage can hardly be attributed to bad weather alone.

TEUTONIC ARRIVES.

The Overdue White Star Liner Safe in New York.

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—The White Star steamer Teutonic, two days overdue, anchored off the lightship at 2.15 this morning alone. It had been fondly hoped by those interested in La Gascogne that the delay of the Teutonic's arrival indicated that she had found the French liner in a disabled condition and taken her in tow. But now this ground of hope is taken from them, and the greatest fears are expressed on all sides. Even the local officials of the Campagnie General Transatlantique, while not willing to admit that their boat has been lost, still acknowledge that something out of the ordinary must have happened to her.

None of the crew or passengers of the Teutonic can be seen for hours so it cannot be known till after daylight if they bring any news of La Gascogne. On board the Teutonic is Sir William VanHorne, President of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company.

The Times.

PETERBOROUGH, FEBRUARY 9, 1895.

Good morning!

In England the crusade agains betting has become aggressive. The stewards of the Jockey Club, the Earl of March, the Earl of Ellesmere and Lord Rendlesham, have been summoned into court by the National Anti-Gambeling League for allowing betting to go on at Tattersall's and within the inclosures at the race tracks.

It might not be possible to find a more temperate body of me than the locomotive engineers. Of course, temperate habits are required on all railroads, but there are many engineers who, though they may never have taken any pledge, are more than temperate—they are teetotalers from personal choice.

The London Truth is responsible for this story:—H Bishop of St. David's confided to an old Welsh clergyman his difficulty in mastering the Welsh double L. The parson replied:—"Put the tip of your apostolical tongue in the roof of your episcopal mouth, my lord, and then hiss like a gander."

Some time ago the city of Lawrence, Massachusetts discovered that its death rate from typhoid fever was higher than that of any other town in New England. After an investigation of the cause the water supply of the place was filtered through sand, and the mortality from the disease has fallen from 43 to 8 in six months.

If the Princess Maud of Wales marries the Prince of Naples, another of the great crowns of Europe will be brought into family relations with the British throne. It looks as if a family alliance of the descendants of Queen Victoria about the middle of next century would make a very powerful combination; but a great deal may happen between now and then.

The president of the Central Farmers' Institute has joined in the demand that Canadian cheese be branded with the date of manufacture and the name of the factory from which it is produced. Something of this kind is necessary not only as a guard against fraud by our manufacturers but also to prevent Americans from carrying out the scheme they are now engaged in of sending their cheese through Canada branded as Canadian. This is a matter that should have attention at the next session of Parliament.

Though the Newfoundland Government has guaranteed a percentage of the of the failed banks in circulation on the island the people dislike them and they are generally at discount even on the proportion of their face value the country has pledged its credit for. There is a lesson in this for those who, in the United States and elsewhere, think a legislative enactment can give to a monetary medium a value it does not inherently possess. Calling a thing a dollar is effective only so long as those into whose hands it comes known where they can get a real dollar for it.

According to the British Medical Journal the rearing of fowls in Tunis, Italy, has been almost abandoned, owing to the enormous mortality caused by a diseased characterized by the formation of false membranes in the throat. Amongst persons attending to fowels in Tunis a large number of cases presenting symptoms of diphtheria occur. Loir and Ducloux have made a bacteriological examination of six such cases, and in one, a child suffering from severe angina, with false membranes which are neither very thick nor very adherent, they found the bacillus which they had observed in fowls. The child resided on a farm where the fowls had been suffering from diphtheria for six months.

LOCAL OPTION IN TAXATION.

A petition asking for local option in taxation has been sent for signature to all the municipalities in Ontario. It sets out that widely divergent views are entertained on the subject of municipal taxation; that the best method of settling the question is by giving to municipalities the power of raising their revenues on any basis of taxation that each municipality may choose; and that the principal of local option in taxation has been adopted to a greater or less extent in the Provinces of British Columbia and the North west Territories, besides being passed by the popu'er chambers of the parliaments of New Zealand and South Australia.

Accompanying the petition is a circular which gives some interesting data on the question. The following is an extract therefrom:—

"The question of taxation has been such discussed during the past year, and two opposing views have been developed, which may be termed respectively 'Taxation of Wealth' and 'Taxation of Privilege.'

"On the one hand it is urged that wealth should be taxed wherever found and in whatever shape; that stocks, bonds, mortgages, farm stock, implements, crops, houses, barns, fences, orchards, drainage and other improvements, as well as the value of land, should all be taxed; that this is taxing a man according to his means, and that it is the proper principle of taxation.

"On the other hand it is replied that taxation is not a mere means of collecting so much money, but is inseparably bound up with the questions of monopoly and special privilege, and should be so levied as to encourage industry and discorage speculation and monopoly. That the value of the land)which arises to such enormous figures in our cities) is caused by the people at large, and not by the individual owner; whereas the very opposite hold good with regard to buildings and other improvement, so that land value only is the proper subject of taxation. That a tax on personal property is shown by wide experience to fall very unjustly, to place a premium on dishonesty, and to be easily evaded, especially in towns and sities. That a tax on building, crops, etc., discourages industry and improvement, whereas a tax on land values discourages speculation and monopoly; because the one taxes a man in proportion to the use he makes of his land, whilst the other taxes him in proportion to the advantage of his location.

"Which view is the right one? That can be settled by the test of actual experience. such experience can be best obtained by giving municipalities the power to levy their own taxation in the manner each thinks best; in other words, by the principle of local option in taxation."

Of course, great complaint is made by farmers that if new barns and sheds are built, and new houses are erected, in order to improve the property, and add to the producing power of the farm, that these improvements are heavily taxed, whilst the slovenly farmer who is behind the age in advanced farming and the best constructed buildings goes scot free, whilst the energy of the go-ahead frmer is taxed. The majority of farmers and others appear opposed to the assessment of improvements, or at least to the extent that they now are. In New Zealand all farm property is exempt up to $15,000, and reports from that country state that this system of taxation works admirably, and that there are few farmers in that colony but pays taxes and are worth more than that amount.

LIQUOR SELLING IN NORWAY.

As far as the East is from the West, so far differs the Gothenburg system of liquor selling from the high license system of America. A recently returned traveler from Norway made an address to an audience in Springfield, Mass., not long ago, and he said some startling things. The barrooms there if they can be called such, are not meant for comfort. There is one chair, and the man who sells the liquor occupies that more and more each day, for the fewer glasses of liquor he sells the higher is his salary.

The walls are decorated, not with oil paintings in the altogether, and pictures of prize fights, but with the rules for the sale of liquor, and the thirsty and weary is forbidden even to linger over these, for he must go out of the room directly after he has taken his glass and he can't come back for three hours. The workingman is likely to be very, very sober, for these dispensaries do not open until he has gone to work and they are closed during the noon hour.

Results from this system are a good evidence of its value. The per capita consumption of alcohol has fallen in Scandinavia from 3.8 quarts in 1876 to 3.3 quarts in 1892, and Norway is now three times as sober as the United States.

AN AMERICAN EDITOR

CHARLES A. DANA, THE VENERABLE CHIEF OF THE NEW-YORK SUN.

The Little Corner Room and Its Plain Furnishings—Personal Appearance and Traits of a Man Whose Name Is Known In Every American Household.

The rather naked little corner room in The Sun building, in which Mr. Dana has sat almost daily for 25 years, is a surprise to many persons who see it for the first time. His genuine love of beautiful things, his disposition to acquire them if possible and the extraordinary range and accuracy of his æsthetic appreciations are so widely known that it is quite natural for those who do not understand him to expect to find his tastes reflected in his accustomed place of work. The room might be even barer than it is and yet serve Mr. Dana's purpose as well as if it were the gallery of Apollo. On the other hand, if his chair and desk were established in the middle of the vastest and most sumptuous presence chamber to be found anywhere and amid a throng of curious and noisy onlookers, Mr. Dana would work on with the same tranquil efficiency, providing his pen did not splutter and the capacious wastebasket at his feet were emptied from time to time. The processes of his mind are neither stimulated nor intimidated by the surroundings. The accessories of luxurious professional habits are absent because they are superfluous to Mr. Dana. If he thought they would help him to make a better newspaper, they would all be there.

In the middle of the small room is a desk table of black walnut, of the Fulton street style and the period of the first administration of Grant; a shabby little round table at the window, where Mr. Dana sits when the day is dark; one leather covered chair, which does duty at either post, and two wooden chairs, both rickety, for visitors on errands of business or ceremony. On the desk a revolving case, with a few dozen books of reference; an inkpot and pen, not much used except in correcting manuscript or proofs, for Mr. Dana talks off to a stenographer his editorial articles and his correspondence, sometimes spending on the revision of the former twice as much time as was required for the dictation; a window seat filled with exchanges, marked here and there in blue pencil for the editor's eyes; a big pair of shears and two or three extra pairs of spectacles in cache against an emergency. These few items constitute what is practically the whole objective equipment of the editor of The Sun. The shears are probably the newest article of furniture in the list. They replaced, three or four years ago, another pair of unknown antiquity, besought and obtained by Eugene Field and now occupying, alongside of Mr. Gladstone's ax, the place of honor in that poet's celebrated collection of edged instruments.

Into the corner room described there swings nearly every morning in the year a man of 75, looking 15 years younger; largely built, square framed, with a step as firm as a sea captain's; vigorous, sometimes to abruptness, in his bodily movements, but deliberate and gentle in his speech; dressed always in such a way that his clothes seem to belong to him and not he to them; with strong brown hands, rather large, which do not tremble as they hold book or paper, and a countenance familiar to most Americans through portraits or caricatures, whose marked features the caricaturists distort in various whimsical ways without ever succeeding in making the face seem either ridiculous or ignoble. Mr. Dana's full beard is trimmed more closely than in former years. It ranks as snow white only by courtesy. The last strongholds of the pigment are not yet conquered.

The impression which Mr. Dana makes upon those who come into contact with him personally for the first time or the fortieth is that of vigorous and sympathetic good will, both desirous and capable of pleasing. He is frank and engaging in conversation, and the wonderful range of his intellectual interests makes him equally ready to learn or to communicate. Men who seek him merely to measure their wits against his for a purpose often go away charmed with their reception and well satisfied with results until they begin to reckon at a distance what has actually been accomplished by the interview. If shrewd kindness beams on the stranger through one of the two lenses of his gold bowed spectacles, kind shrewdness is alert behind the other glass. He has learned how to say no when necessary, and even to say it in italics, but he has never learned to say an inconsiderate thing. Mr. Dana uses no tobacco, but that is not the reason why he is superior to petulance and never frets himself under any circumstances, whatever his mood. He knows wine and respects it and himself, but that is not the reason why he knows at a glance good poetry from bad, even if the good be disguised in cramped handwriting and words misspelled, while the bad is displayed in typography beautiful to see. He prefers the mushroom to mush and milk, being both a connoisseur and a cultivator of the former, but that is not the reason why, as a journalist, his perception of the interesting, the unexpected, the refreshing, has not been dulled by 50 years' exercise.

Mr. Dana was born with a voracious intellectual appetite, which has remained healthy and insatiate all of his life. He shrinks at nothing short of actual dullness or literary deformity so marked as to be repulsive. He is a tireless reader of books, magazines and journals in many languages. Whether print or manuscript comes under his eyes, he takes in the ideas seemingly by whole paragraphs rather than by words, lines or even sentences. Unlike most other very rapid readers that I have known, he does not merely sample the page or the chapter or the book.

A glance through his glasses seems to establish a circuit which at once puts his brain in possession not only of the essential facts, but also of any refinement of style that may be there, or any novel or felicitous verbal formula, no matter how inconspicuous. When he closes the book or throws aside the newspaper the probability is small that he has missed anything worth having. This process of acquisition has been going on without a break and with constantly increasing speed ever since his early boyhood. It is supported by a memory which selects with discrimination and then retains with tenacity.—Edward P. Mitchell in McClure's.

Love Apple.

When I first knew Covent garden, tomatoes in their raw state were habitually known as "love apples." It was only when they were preserved in bottles to be used as sauce that they took the name now universally applied to them. Very rarely were they eaten raw as a salad or cooked, stewed or stuffed or au gratin.—G. A. Sala in London Telegraph.

NOT THE SAME GIRL.

But She "Was Glad" Time Hadn't Made Any Changes In Her.

The following anecdote has both a comical and pathetic side. What a long time 50 years is in the life of a human being! And how far apart, how unlike in tastes, feelings, opinions and habits men and women can become who in childhood slept under the same roof, attended the same school and dreamed of nothing but of being friends forever! A gentleman whose "courtly manners" were mentioned in all the newspapers when he died, a few years after this incident, fancied in his old age that he wished to see his boyhood friends and most of all the fair young girl whose love long years before he almost, but not quite, had dared to ask.

He forgot country manners and called at half past 11 in the forenoon. He was asked to walk "right out into the kitchen," as there was no fire anywhere else.

His early admiration stood before him in a worn calico dress, no collar and a wide and not faultlessly clean apron. Her half combed grizzly hair was tucked under a rusty black lace cap trimmed with faded purple ribbon. She had no teeth, and a huge pair of silver bowed spectacles were pushed up on her brown, wrinkled forehead.

Fifty-two years before they had parted with a kiss, and he had been intending to meet her with one, and thus bridge the chasm of years, but he changed his mind when through his gold bowed glasses he took in the picture before him.

Wiping her hands on her apron, she gave him a hearty handshake and bade him "sit right down," adding that they were "killing hogs and trying up lard," but if he would "stay to dinner" she would have "a fire put in the front room."

Of course he declined the invitation, and for his own comfort as well as for his convenience he determined to make his call short. Still he must say something complimentary before leaving, but what could he say?

Just then the lard boiled over, and with a shrill cry to her daughter to "come quick" the woman jumped up and caught hold of the kettle. The smoke and perfume were in themselves far from agreeable, but they were grateful to the caller, as they gave him a chance for the desired compliment.

"Your step has lost none of its elasticity since the evening we sauntered together along the banks of the R," he said, "while this"—holding out his gold headed cane—"is needed to support mine."

"Yes," answered the woman, "I'm as spry as a kitten, and I have thought ever since you've been here that I was glad enough time hadn't changed me as it has you."—Youth's Companion.

COOKS AND THEIR DRINKS.

Why the Boss of the Kitchen Goes on an Occasional Spree.

"You ask if she is a drinking woman, ma'am?" said the proprietor of a restaurant to a lady who had inquired about the character of a cook. "Why, yes, to be sure, she has her sprees, but she always sobers up enough to do her work well. I gave her a recommendation as a first class cook, and I didn't think it necessary to say anything about her drinking, for they nearly all drink. They need it to keep themselves up, because they swallow so much hot air. We give them spirits on principle, and other houses do the same."

Various reasons have been given for the intemperance of this class. It is said to be due to the tasting of sauces, etc., flavored with spirits, to the lack of appetite which the constant sight and odor of cooking produce, and the consequent necessity for stimulants to give strength to continue work, or to the exhaustion of the system by the high temperature, which produces a craving for spirits. Whatever the cause, it is pitiable to know that many contract habits that blight their lives and entail a miserable old age.

Women who cook for small families and whose work is not exhausting are not specially prone to the excessive use of stimulants. The trouble is with those who in hotels, restaurants, large boarding houses, etc., are in the kitchen and over the stove from morning to night. Undoubtedly there are temperate women among these, but many are intemperate.—New York Tribune.

Netting Malay Tapirs.

Colonel Charles B. Hicks has arrived in this city after spending two years in the orient. The colonel has been hunting tigers and wild boars with the rajah of Jadpour, and has also been pursuing tapirs in the Malay peninsula. He said:

"In starting out after tapirs we take a flat bottomed boat, with a bamboo house on it, lights in the stern and equipped with a crew of natives. Thus provided the hunter sails up the river. Now, there is a leaf of a peculiar tree in Malay, which, if burned, emits an odor which can be smelled for miles and miles. The smell draws the tapirs. So no tapir hunter omits to keep a supply of these leaves.

"We were supplied with nets, and whenever a tapir was caught in a net we had a lively time. The tapir would flounder and fight. It took the best skill of the natives to hold him till he could be towed to land and secured. However, the natives such as we employed had had so much experience that they managed the work well.

"If we ever came unexpectedly upon old and young tapirs together, the old ones would immediately kill their young to prevent their capture."—San Francisco Examiner.

Keep the Feet Warm.

It is the great secret of health, I firmly believe, to keep one's feet warm and dry and then not to coddle oneself otherwise. So far as I have been able to observe, the feet require different treatment from all the rest of the body. Woolen is good for the feet, but beware of it elsewhere. Father Kneipp is undoubtedly right in forbidding flannel next the skin in the form of underclothing. It makes most people tender and gives some of them the fidgets. But the writer has seen no people who have adopted woolen stockings who have not been glad of them, all this on the supposition, of course, that people do wear shoes, for if they could discard these utterly and go barefooted, as they do in Woerishofen, no doubt that would be better still.—Boston Transcript.

Buried In Her Best Bonnet.

Being buried in a sealskin sack is not half so droll as the Boston woman ordering she should wear a certain particularly becoming bonnet on her last journey, an order, too, that was religiously carried out by her family when the time came for burial.—Boston Journal.

A Postal Order Is Safer.

In sending money in a letter, if it is folded inside a card, likewise folded, there is very little danger of even the practiced finger tips of the postoffice clerks discovering its presence in the envelope.

CHILDREN'S COLUMN.

"THE LOVELY CHILDREN."

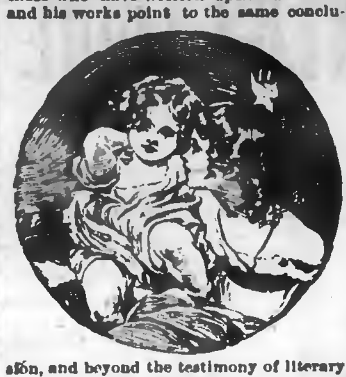
The delightful study of children which has been christened "Nature" and engraved under various other titles must be considered Sir Thomas Lawrence's masterpiece in this direction. The painter himself held that his fame must be justified by this and three or four works of similar quality. The pronouncements of those who have written upon the artist and his works point to the same conclusion, and beyond the testimony of literary and artistic criticisms there stands the evidence of the engraver's art to prove that the reproduction of no picture of childhood has probably ever reached the popularity attained by "The Lovely Children," "Nature," "The Daughters of Mr. Charles B. Calmady," "The Calmady Children," or whatever title this work has reappeared under.



F. C. Lewis, who was evidently a friend of the family, had often assured Mrs. Calmady, the wife of Captain Calmady of Woodcote, near Alresford, Hants, that her children, "ere their loveliness as babes should fleet into beauty of a more advanced childhood," would be admirable subjects, and that if Lawrence were to see them he would be glad to paint them on any terms. The eventuality—a lucky one for all concerned—occurred. Sir Thomas saw the children in July, 1823. This must have been at his painting room in Russell square. Captivated by the loveliness of the children, he asked a price lower than his current fee, which would have been 250 guineas. "I suppose," said Mrs. Calmady, "I must still have looked despairingly, for he immediately added, without my saying a word, 'Well, we must say £150 for merely the two little heads in a circle, and some sky—and finish at once.'" The next morning the sittings commenced with zest and pleasure. During the progress of the painting we find the artist deeply interested and showing himself the sympathetic friend of childhood. He was already so enthusiastic over his work that he continually assured the happy parents "it would be the best piece of the kind he ever painted." He retained the children the entire day, kept them entertained with stories, fed them himself, and when, by food and sport refreshed, they were again placed in the "sitter's chair," and the portraits proceeded with, Lawrence seemed to be rivaling Reynolds, as far as concerns his aptitude for making friends with youth. The children caught his humor, played with him as la bonne nourrice, and at one long sitting the little cherub, with her fat, rosy cheeks, relieved her own ennui and supplied him with a fund of laughter by her nursery tales of "Dame Wiggens" and "Field Mice and Raspberry Cream." At another sitting, after Lawrence had had little Emily Calmady's shoe often taken off and had attempted to catch her playful attitudes and expressions, he could not help exclaiming, "How disheartening it is, when we have nature before us, to see how far—with our best efforts and all our study—how very far short we fall of her!"

The little anecdotes concerning the progress of the Calmady picture, including how Sir Thomas was, with his servant, found, instead of painting, washing the face of one of the fair infants, who had got at the artist's palette and paints and bedaubed her countenance grotesquely, represent Lawrence in a familiar light.

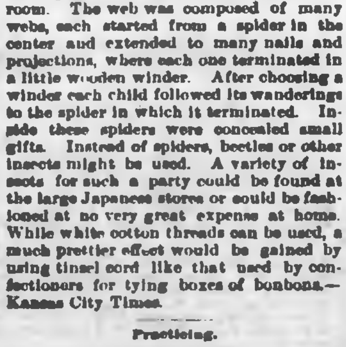
A Spider at Home.

The invitations sent out to a child's party had each in the corner a golden web, in the center of which was entangled a brown spider. They were invitations to "a spider at home," an English substitute for a Jack Horner pie, or, it might be, for a Christmas tree. On their arrival at the house of their hostess the little guests were shown into a good sized room, where an immense glittering spider seemed to have spun a web that stretched across the room. The web was composed of many webs, each started from a spider in the center and extended to many nails and projections, where each one terminated in a little wooden winder. After choosing a winder each child followed its wanderings to the spider in which it terminated. Inside these spiders were concealed small gifts. Instead of spiders, beetles or other insects might be used. A variety of insects for such a party could be found at the large Japanese stores or could be fashioned at no very great expense at home. While white cotton threads can be used, a much prettier effect would be gained by using tinsel cord like that used by confectioners for tying boxes of bonbons.—Kansas City Times.

Practicing.

Touch the keys lightly,
  Nellie, my dear!
The noise makes brother
  Impatient, I fear.

He looks very cross,
  I am sorry to see,
Not looking at all
  As a brother should be.



He'd think it quite hard,
  I must certainly say,
If you stopped up your ears
  At his noisy play!

Now, come, little brother,
  Just bear this in mind—
In all things in life
  It is best to be kind.

THE WAR IN THE EAST.

CHINESE FLEET PRACTICALLY NOT IN EXISTENCE.

Possible Peace Terms—The Powers Interfering to Put an End to Further Hostilities—The Wei Hai Wei Fight.

LONDON, Feb. 8.—A despatch from Shanghai to the Central News says that on Sunday a number of Chinese soldiers attacked Captain Cartwright, of the British warship Pigeon, in the streets of Nankin, hooting at him and pelting him with mud. No reparation for the assault has been made.

DESPERATE NAVAL FIGHT.

A despatch from Wei Hai Wei, dated Feb. 5th, says that the Chinese fleet has practically ceased to exist. The ironclad Chen Yuen and her sister ship, the Ling Yuen, have been sunk, and other vessels of the Chinese fleet are within the grasp of the Japanese. The despatch adds that at daybreak on Sunday the Japanese fleet opened fire on the Lui King forts, which replied vigorously. The bombardment became terrible. The first Japanese division, including the flagship, directed its fire against the Eastern Island batteries, while the second division shelled Fort Zhih. The Chinese fleet soon came to the assistance of the forts. The Ting Yuen used her 37-ton gun without effect, but succeeded in diverting some of the Japanese fire from the forts to herself. The Lai Yuen, a smaller ship, was also fought well. She sustained much damage. There were many casualties. Two Chinese gunboats also assisted, but were not badly damaged. These four vessels fought desperately until dark, when the firing ceased on both sides.

THE WEI HAI WEI FIGHT.

YOKOHAMA, Feb. 8.—An official despatch received here from Wei Hai Wei, dated February 3, says:—"The Japanese flying squadron today bombarded the forts, which, assisted by the Chinese warships, resisted obstinately. Admiral Ting (the Chinese naval commander) is determined to hold the forts on Li Kung Tao island and the ships under his command. Another attack by torpedo boats will be made tonight."

POSSIBLE PEACE TERMS.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Feb. 8.—The cable despatch from London showing a purpose on the part of Great Britain, France, and Russia to interfere at the proper stage of hostilities between Japan and China has attracted much attention in diplomatic circles here, and has acquired additional significance when taken in conjunction with the recent speech from the throne in the British Parliament. The latter, in a very guarded and diplomatic manner, hinted that when the time came the relations between the great powers would be found sufficiently harmonious to ensure the restoration of peace between Japan and China. By the terms of the understanding, as reported, Japan will not be permitted to acquire an inch of territory on the Chinese mainland. This, of course, would prevent her retaining Port Arthur or Wei Hai Wei, the great Chinese naval strongholds, or any part of Manchuria, which she has occupied after hard fighting. But, on the other hand, it is believed here that the statement carries a distinct intimation that Japan may claim the great Island of Formosa, which is a most important strategical position. This is inhabited by fierce Malay tribes, who have never been subjugated, and even after their long nominal possession the Chinese have been unable to do more than get a foothold on the coast. It has been confidently expected here that the European powers would intervene between Japan and China whenever it should appear that the latter country was really vanquished, and was suing in vain for peace upon reasonable terms. But so far as the despatch referred to indicates any possibility of action in that line by the United States in conjunction with the other powers, it is clearly erroneous, for it can be positively stated that under no probable conditions can the President be induced to depart so far from our established policy of non-intervention. It is no cause of surprise here that Germany, too, will refrain from joining in an intervention which would be surely distasteful to Japan, for the latest reports from our Consuls in the latter country show that the German traders are making extraordinary progress in supplanting all other foreigners, even Americans, in securing control of the valuable Japanese foreign trade.

Two Bandits Killed.

CLAREMONT, I. T., Feb. 8.—Last night Jim French and Slaughter Kid undertook to rob the general merchandise store of W. B. Patten at Catoosa, about twelve miles south of here. The bandits were recognized as they rode into town. They dismounted before the store of W. B. Patten, when a Texas cowboy from within opened fire on them, instantly killing Slaughter Kid with his second shot. He fired a third shot at Jim French, but missed. Having no more cartridges, he secreted his revolver. French entered the store, and accused the cowboy of killing his partner in crime, but the cowboy protested that he had no gun, hence he was not the one; whereupon French turned and shot Manager Irvin, chief clerk of the store, through the body. Irvin drew a revolver and returned the fire, shooting French through the body and through the right eye. French managed to reach his horse, and, mounting, rode to a house a short distance away. The owner of the house at once informed the town officers, and a crowd assembled to capture the dying bandit. The latter, hearing them approach, raised himself and looked out of the window, and at that instant received a load of buckshot in the face, almost tearing his head off. He died instantly. Mr. Irvin's death is expected hourly.

A JAPANESE HOME.

LIFE OF THE PEOPLE DESCRIBED BY A NATIVE YOUNG LADY.

How the Houses Are Constructed—Interesting Interiors—Walls, Floors and Furniture—How They Keep Warm—Kitchen and Cooking.

So much is said nowadays in the world's press about our people's warlike spirit and exploits, writes a Japanese young lady educated in Europe to a friend, that you, my sisters in the west, may perhaps like to have a true description of our homes and the peaceful pursuits of our life amid the family circle.

People say our dwellings are like the Swiss chalet in outward appearance. Possibly so, if the latter is built of wood, with three substantial walls and an overhanging roof covered with tiles. The south side is always open and has only sliding doors, consisting of thin wooden frames covered over with white paper, called "shoji," to shut out the wind and cold. Along this side of the house there is a highly polished wooden veranda, and as it is every mistress' aim to keep the wood as bright and spotless as possible it is wiped over with a cloth many times a day.

At night heavy wooden shutters are put up, which are fastened on the inside by means of a hook and ring. In front of the house we have a small sliding door of lattice work. When any one wishes to enter, he stands outside and calls out, "O tano moshi masu" (I beg for honorable admittance) and then waits until some one answers from the inside, "Donata sama?" meaning who may it honorably be. The visitor thereupon gives his name and is admitted through the little door.

In the interior there are rarely any walls, the rooms being partitioned off by means of sliding doors called "karakami." These differ from the "shoji," or white paper walls, which lead to the veranda, in generally being covered with thick painted paper, silk or other materials. Instead of a door handle, we have pretty little bronze indentations on either side of the "karakami." The floors of the rooms are covered with beautiful white mats, made of many layers of rice straw fastened together, on the top of which the fine white matting is placed. The whole is 2 or 3 inches thick and is generally bound round with black glazed cotton cloth. As these mats are always made 6 feet long by 3 feet wide, the size of a room is determined by the number of mats it contains. There is no furniture in a Japanese house. Chairs are unnecessary, for everybody sits on the floor in a kneeling position, with the feet crossed underneath him. Soft silk or crape cushions filled with cotton wadding are strewn around the rooms and are always offered to a guest, but not used in a general way. At mealtimes small tables are brought in for each member of the family, on which are placed the dishes containing each one's portion of the dinner, the soup bowl, rice cup and chopsticks.

As a rule, the foreigner will find none of the many things considered indispensable for a western home to make it attractive. The sole decorations are found on one side, where a dais is raised four to five inches from the ground and made of pretty polished wood, supported by pillars of pine or cherry tree. Upon this are placed quaint curios or vases of flowers and suspended on the wall over it a silk picture called a "kakemono." These pictures are changed according to the season or special occasion. In November, for instance, a "kakemono" with the picture of a chrysanthemum will be hung up, in March one representing a branch of cherry blossoms, others for any particular function, as funerals or weddings.

The raised dais, or "tokonoma," is the only place where we put our pretty ornaments, and then only one at a time, so that none of the beauty of the article may be lost by close connection with other things. Perhaps this is the reason why foreigners call out about our rooms being so bare and comfortless. So they are to any one accustomed to move about in an apartment filled with a variety of things. The same simplicity of decoration is observed in every Japanese house, whether the owner be as rich as Crœsus or as poor as the proverbial church mouse.

As our houses are built of such light materials, we find it very difficult to keep out the cold during the months of November, December, January and February. Besides this we have no means of heating our rooms, and even if we had the wind would still penetrate through the paper "shoji." The only way we do keep warm is by wearing many thickly wadded "kimono" dresses and holding our hands over the "hibachi" brazier, containing pieces of burning charcoal. We are not, however, quite so destitute of all comforts as the foreigner thinks.

The "kotatsu" combines warmth and comfort. For this purpose a square of matting is taken out, and a good sized brazier, filled with charcoal and protected by a kind of wooden cage, is let in the hole. Over this is thrown one of the wadded quilts. Each member sits on a small cushion, places his feet against the brazier and covers himself with the quilt.

When the whole family is thus gathered round the "kotatsu," many are the tales of the great deeds of warriors of bygone ages, of fearful ghosts and monsters and such like subjects, which are told for the amusement of old and young. Here all meet together and rest from labor. The father has returned from business, the mother from her household work, and the children have finished their daily tasks, and all are free to enjoy a quiet hour.

From the sitting and reception rooms we go into the kitchen. Its floors are made of polished boards and are so constructed that they can be taken up at will. As the whole house is raised some 20 to 30 inches from the ground, the space between the floor and the ground is used to store away charcoal and other things. In the middle of the kitchen a square charcoal brazier is let into the floor, and much of the cooking is done over its fire, but the most important utensil is the "kama," or large iron boiler, in which the rice is boiled. It is placed in a stand made of clay. Wood is generally burned in the clay stand, or "hetsui," as it is inexpensive and gives an even heat. The art of boiling rice is brought to great perfection in Japan, and in most houses a servant is kept who attends exclusively to the preparing of that article of food.

Tables and chairs are conspicuous by their absence in our kitchen. In place of the former we use small boards, raised on two legs, called "mana-ita," upon which we cut up our vegetables, "okoko" (pickles) and other things, and the latter are not necessary, as every one sits on the floor.—Baltimore Sun.

FROZEN TO THE RIGGING.

THE TERRIBLE FATE OF THE CREW OF A BELATED SCHOONER.

Futile Efforts of a Life Crew—Fruit and Vegetables Destroyed by the Frost in Florida—High Tides.

Special to the Times.

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—At 2.30 o'clock this afternoon there were 17 crafts stalled in the ice in the vicinity of the Battery. Travel on the New York Central and Hudson Railway was completely blockaded today as a result of the storm. The superintendents at the Grand Central depot report that 20 trains were caught in the snow storm and stalled. Trains were caught between Hudson and Poughkeepsie and between Poughkeepsie and Peekskill. The Empire State express started for Buffalo but only got as far as Peekskill by one o'clock this afternoon. Local trains on the Hudson river division are running regularly and it is expected that tomorrow all trains on this line will be running as usual. Hellgate became impassable with ice this afternoon. There is open water in the vicinity of City Island, and as far as can be seen from there the solid mass of ice. The storm is the worst ever experienced. The marine observer at Fire Island reports that the schooner J. B. Manning is ashore 8 miles east of there. The crew has been saved by the life saving crew and brought ashore. Another schooner is ashore five miles east of Fire Island. A line has been thrown over but the crew is supposed to have been frozen in the rigging. Some anxiety was felt early in the day for the safety of the schooners Pilgrim and City of Brockton of the Fall River line, but this evening the former was reported at Newport and the latter at Fall River. Both experienced very heavy weather but made the trip without accident.

EXETER, Feb. 9.—A regular northwest blizzard has been raging here all day with unabated fury, with the temperature about three below zero. The roads will be badly blocked up by morning. The trains on the L. H. and B. Ry. were from one to four hours late. It is the worst storm known here for over twenty years.

HIGH TIDE.

PORTLAND, Me., Feb. 9.—Today's tide is the highest known here for many years. In some cases the water rose to the flooring of wharves.

LONDON, Feb. 9.—The steamer Gascogne is insured for £200,000, and she is valued at £300,000.

HAVOC IN FLORIDA.

JACKSONVILLE, Feb. 9.—Palm Beach, on Lake Worth, was the warmest place on the mainland of the whole United States this morning, the mercury falling to 55 above zero at sunrise. Key West reports 54, while every other point in Florida reports from 23 to 14. Orange trees are probably destroyed, also all vegetable crops and half a million quarts of strawberries just beginning to ripen. The loss will aggregate many millions of dollars. Tampa reports the mercury at 22 at daybreak, a showing which is unprecedented.

FELL FROM THE RIGGING.

LATER.—A later report says the unknown steamer is loaded with coal. Most of the crew have fallen from the rigging. There are three of them in the rigging now but it is impossible to get at them. The life crews are still at the wreck. The wind is from northwest and is blowing a strong gale.

BIG BLAZE AT MORDEN, MAN.

Seven Buildings Burned, the Loss Totalling $25,000.

Special to the Times.

WINNIPEG, Feb. 9.—A big fire took place t Morden, Man., this morning, destroying the Morden House Hotel, D. W. McLaren's drug store, Messrs. Sparling's bakery and dry goods store, a liquor store, proprietor's name unascertained, and the Commercial Hotel, all situated on the north side of North Railway street, between Seventh and Eighth streets.

The total loss is placed at $25,000, mostly covered by insured.

A FLYING TRIP.

An Electric Car Runs Down a Steep Grade at a Terrific Speed.

PITTSBURG, Feb. 9.—An electric car on the California avenue branch of the Pleasant Valley railroad became unmanageable today while descending the Woodsrun hill. The motorman and conductor jumped from the car, leaving the occupants to their fate. The car plunged down the steep grade, flying like the wind. At the bottom the car jumped the track and struck against the end of the bridge which spans Woodsrun 100 feet below. Three passengers were badly injured.

Tupper a Barrister.

TORONTO, Feb. 9.—In the Court of Common Pleas today before Chief Justice Meredith, Judges Rose and MacLennan, Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper, Q. C., Minister of Justice and Attorney General for the Dominion of Canada, was presented to the Court by Christopher Robinson, Q. C., benchers of the Law Society, and was sworn in and enrolled as a barrister-at-law.

HE IS ON TENTERHOOKS.

HIS FEEBLE MAJORITY CANNOT BE DEPENDED UPON.

Embarrassed by Secessions of Party Candidates and a Popular Reaction Towards Conservatism the Liberals Dread Dissolution.

Special to the Times.

LONDON, Feb. 9.—The precarious position in which the Government is placed was strikingly illustrated in the House of Commons on Thursday night, when the whips warned the leaders on each side that if a division were then taken the Government would certainly be defeated. The Conservatives could rely upon a majority of two against all the votes that could be mustered on the Ministerial side, but no vote was taken. The vacillation of the Unionist leaders has since been explained by themselves as having been based upon the unwillingness to seize an ungenerous advantage of their adversaries. This inaction enabled the Liberal whips to put the screws on so effectually as to present the feeble majority upon which the Government continues to exist, but the presence of even this majority cannot, of course, be relied upon.

The amendment to the address in reply to the Queen's speech, demanding an immediate dissolution of Parliament, which Mr. Redmond has announced that he will introduce on Monday, certainly cannot make the situation of the Liberals any worse than it is, nor can it very well increase the strain which falls largely upon the Liberal whips, who are obliged to keep constantly on the alert to prevent a surprise and defeat of the Government.

LIBERALS EMBARRASSED.

In making preparations for a dissolution and a consequent appeal to the country, the Liberals are very greatly embarrassed by the continued withdrawal of prospective candidates, especially including men of local distinction. The Liberals' election Exchequer is ample, but a number of good men, wealthy and of high repute, who recently agreed to stand for election, are now declining to make the race.

The growing belief that there is a popular reaction towards the Conservative party is the main cause of the defection. This state of affairs gives the scratch candidates selected by the Central Executive Committee, and whose election expenses must be paid out of the party purse, a better chance of coming to the front, though it is very bad for the prospects of the personnel of the Liberal party in the next Parliament.

CHAMBERLAIN'S BOMBSHELL.

The amendment which Mr. Chamberlain has announced his intention of submitting, setting forth that it is contrary to public interest that the time of Parliament should be occupied by the discussion of measures, which, according to the ministers' own statements, there is no prospect of passing, while proposals involving great constitutional changes have been announced, upon which the judgment of Parliament should be taken without delay, will also be very likely to prove a bombshell in the political camp.

Mr. Labouchere, too, has given notice that he will introduce a motion to deprive the House of Lords of power to vote upon a bill that has twice been passed by the House of Commons, but this motion will not be debated until it gets a place through a ballot for the consideration of motions of private members.

HEALY'S MULISHNESS.

The split between the McCarthyites and the Healyites has been widened by the refusal of Mr. Healy to assent to Mr. McCarthy's appeal to the people for pecuniary aid until the disposition of the Paris fund has been fully and publicly reported. Mr. Healy knows that this fund has been administered with absolute purity and he also knows that the party is sorely in need of financial aid to enable the full Irish contingent to attend the sittings of Parliament; yet he will not give way and there is trouble ahead in the already disturbed ranks of the national Parliamentary party.

Lord "Randy's" Successor.

LONDON, Feb. 9.—Mr. Fardel, Conservative, has been returned without opposition as member of Parliament for South Paddington, in succession to the late Lord Randolph Churchill.

Anchoria and Grecian Overdue.

GLASGOW, Feb. 9.—Anxiety is expressed here in shipping circles in view of the severe weather reported by arriving steamers, on account of the non-arrival of the Anchor Line steamship Anchoria, Captain Young, which left New York on January 26, for this port, and the Allan steamship Grecian, Captain Nanan, from New York, on January 24, for Glasgow. Both vessels were due here on Tuesday.

Strikers Indicted.

BROOKLYN, Feb. 9.—There were handed in a batch of indictments today against the men who cut trolley wires, obstructing tracks, threw bricks, and committed other acts to interfere with the running of cars. The charge against these is malicious interference with the running of cars. This is felony. Miss May McDonald was indicted. She is only 18 years old, and was the leader of a mob on 5th avenue.

Miss Beecher Honored.

LONDON, Feb. 9.—Ex-Empress Frederick has invited Anna Becker, the only woman saved from the Elbe, to visit Osborne next Monday to meet the queen and herself.

BRUSSEAU BREAKS DOWN.

He Confesses That He Killed Dr. Pope at Mrs. Pope's Bidding.

Special to the Times.

DETROIT, Feb. 9.—William Brusseau, who has since last Saturday told two stories of the murder of Dr. Pope in his home here, last night made a clean breast of the whole affair to the police. According to Brusseau's latest story the murder was a carefully planned affair in which Mrs. Pope, the doctor's wife, was the moving spirit and $14,000 the object. For two weeks before the fatal day the two planned the crime in every particular. Saturday night Mrs. Pope made her husband sleep in a chair at her bedside. Toward morning she quietly called Brusseau and the latter secured the hatchet and struck the doctor on the head. Then, in obedience to the woman's command, he rained a half dozen more blows on their victim's skull. Mrs. Pope's 8 year old daughter, who slept at her side, during the murder, was then awakened and the three carefully rehearsed the story they were to tell the police.

On Saturday afternoon last one of our leading physicians was called into the country to see a patient, but found his way blocked by scores of teams. In attempting to pass one of them the driver deliberately drove past a "turning out point" and held possession of the road, compelling the medical man to turn out into the deep snow, where his horse began to flounder and finally upset the cutter and ran away, the driver being left helpless for the moment in a huge drift. Luckily the occupant of another sleigh, only a short distance ahead, witnessed the mishap and caught the high-spirited animal, thus saving the doctor what would likely prove a large bill for repairs. The cranky individual who was the cause of the trouble should be taught the rules of the road in the Police Court—such cases are far too frequent.—Lindsay Post.

A Sharper Caught.

Mr. F. W. Coulson, 24 Macdonell avenue, Toronto, proprietor of the M. V. Lubon Co., was before Police Magistrate Denison a short time since on a charge of having violated the Ontario Medical Act. A number of witnesses were examined, among them two young men, who alleged that they had paid $50 each for treatment, and after being treated by Coulson, found they were getting no better, and refused to pay any more money. Coulson was fined $75 and costs. This fellow is known throughout the country as the M. V. Lubon Company, against whom several judgments have recently been entered for unpaid advertising bills. We ask our brethern of the press to pass him around.

A Serious Assault Case.

On Friday morning last Constable Short was notified that a serious affray had occurred the previous evening at the residence of a man named Andrew Faulkner, about four miles east of Omemee. Procuring the necessary warrant he started for the scene. It appears that a man named Foster, generally known as "Fighting Tom," of Cavan, was a guest at the Faulkner homestead Thursday evening, and a dispute arising, he claims that he was compelled to use a stout wooden poker in self-defense on the brothers Andrew and William. However that may be, he struck out stoutly, and inflicted an unmerciful pounding on both, and then decamped. Constable Short made a shrewd guess as to his hiding place and arrested him on Friday evening, lodging him in gaol in Lindsay. The trial took place Friday at Omemee before County Magistrate Deacon.

Lakefield Train Service.

Last week notice was given that a change would be made in the train service of the G.T.R. between Peterborough and Lakefield, and that in future we would only have one train a day, arriving in the morning and departing at 12.05 p.m. This naturally was resented by our citizens and the matter caused considerable excitement, as according to the contract with the village the G.T.R. were bound to run two trains a day in return for special privileges granted them. The notice was carried into effect and on Monday the train ran one service a day from Peterborough. On Saturday last the village council held a special meeting and petitioned the general manager at Montreal to have the service the same as before. Word was received early this week that the company had decided on giving Lakefield the same service as it had enjoyed before, and that the new order would take effect on Thursday, Feb. 14th.—Lakefield News.

BIG BLAZE AT PORT HOPE.

TRINITY COLLEGE SCHOOL BURNED TO THE GROUND.

Teachers and Scholars Escaped in Their Night Clothes—Absolutely Nothing Saved—An Insurance of $80,000 on the Building Which Will Likely be Rebuilt.

Special to the Times.

PORT HOPE, Feb. 10.—The fire alarm was sounded a few minutes to 12 o'clock last night and it was found that Trinity College School was burning. A terrific gale was blowing from the west and it was some time before help arrived.

The fire which originated in the tower in the west wing is supposed to have caught by the explosion of a lamp, and the flames fanned by the high wind swept completely through the building. The firemen were very much handicapped as one of the pipes of the waterworks had bursted during the severe frost of the last few days. Lines of men were formed and buckets of water handed along. Everything was done to save the building but without success.

In few minutes the fire had spread from the west wing to the centre, and the men were forced to retire, leaving the flames to continue the devastation towards the chapel, and soon nothing but the walls were left standing.

Very little of the contents of the buildings were saved. Teachers and pupils alike lost more than half of their belongings, some of them saving nothing but the garments they are now wearing. The gymnasium and the principal house are not injured in the least, although for some time it was thought Dr. Bethune's would take fire, as the flames were blowing directly towards it.

The pupils are quartered in private houses and at the hotels. School will not be disbanded as the Principal has made arrangements to use the St. Lawrence hotel for that purpose until the easter holidays at least, or until further arrangements are made. The Principal, Rev. Dr. Bethune sent the following telegram to the parents and guardians of the several pupils:

"Boys comfortably quartered with their friends. Arrangements are made to carry on school immediately."

As far as can be learned the loss is fully covered by an insurance of $80,000 in various companies, and it is understood the school is to be rebuilt at once. No lives were lost and nobody was seriously hurt.

TRAFFIC WAS PARALYZED

ALL TRAINS CANCELLED EARLY ON SATURDAY MORNING.

Peterborough Cut Off from Railway Communication with Outside Points—First Train in Two Days Arrived Last Night from Toronto—Traffic Will Resume Today.

Since Friday night Peterborough has been entirely cut off from railway communication with the outside world. Like people shipwrecked on an island in mid-ocean were the citizens. There were no trains leaving this station for outside points and none coming in from the west.

Meagre reports of the disaster on the Grand Trunk near Weston were received by THE TIMES on Friday night and published in Saturday's issue. Citizens eagerly awaited the Toronto papers for further particulars but there were no mails on Saturday. In the afternoon came news of another accident on the Grand Trunk near Agincourt in which many were injured, but again the reports were meagre. Until THE TIMES issued this morning, full particulars of these wrecks were not available, and appear in print for the first time in Peterborough this morning. The wires were kept hot on Saturday night and every news source was exhausted to make up a full and graphic account for TIMES' readers this morning. The public will appreciate the effort, inasmuch as it would have been nearly midday today before all particulars would arrive in the Toronto papers.

Railway traffic has been completely paralyzed, and all trains were cancelled from Friday night until yesterday afternoon. The blockade on the railways was the worst experienced in seven years. The immense snowplows, driven by the giant mogul engines, were powerless to remove the compact and solid drifts of snow that in some places were piled high on the track with a depth of four to five feet. In several instances the snowplows and engines became stalled in these drifts, and the trainmen, forced to remain out in the blinding storm, suffered intensely.

All of Friday night, Saturday and Saturday night a fierce wind blew the snow in clouds across the tracks. On Saturday night the main lines were more badly blockaded than ever. The through train on the C. P. R., from Montreal, which arrives in Peterborough at 4.48 p.m., steamed into the station between eight and nine o'clock on Saturday night, drawn by two engines. It was a fight through many inches of snow every foot of the way. As the line west of Peterborough was completely blocked, the train stopped here, and 28 of the passengers were driven to the various hotels in town where they were quartered at the expense of the C.P.R. until such time as the train could proceed to Toronto.

Shortly after 8 o'clock on Saturday morning the 4 o'clock express on the C.P.R. arrived, and immediately proceeded to Toronto, but became stalled west of Myrtle. The train was unable to proceed either way. Food and provisions were forwarded from Peterborough at once, and as there was a buffet car on the train the sixty passengers suffered no inconvenience except that of having to remain in the cars. In the afternoon this train got out of the snow drift and proceeded on its way again, but at Claremont, the next station, struck another drift and was stalled until yesterday morning when it managed to plough its way through to Toronto.

Some of the trainmen suffered intensely from the cold. Joseph Scriven, a brakeman on the C.P.R. local which passed through Peterborough early on Saturday morning, had his ears and fingers and one side of his face badly frozen.

A number of Norwood people who came in on the 4 o'clock express, were unable to get home and were forced to remain in town over Sunday.

Business in town on Saturday was paralyzed. Only a few farmers came into market, and even they were unable to dispose of their produce as there were no buyers. The wind howled and the pelting snow swept the streets in clouds all day, the latter being conspicuous by the absence of either foot or vehicle traffic. The street railway company did not send out a single car it being impossible to keep the tracks clear of the drifting snow.

THE STORM DONE.

THE MAIN LINES CLEAR AND TRAFFIC WILL RESUME TODAY.

The sun rose bright and clear yesterday morning, and it was apparent to early pedestrians that the storm king had spent his fury. The high and fierce wind had subsided and the temperature was considerably above the zero mark. The sun melted the top surface of the snow drifts, which froze and crusted hard in the afternoon rendering it impervious to the winds should they again rise, and minimizing the possibility of further drifting. The stalled passengers at the hotels were cheerful in the hope of soon arriving at their destinations and this hope was realized in the afternoon when the train which brought them to town left the station for Toronto, arriving there safely at 7 o'clock last night.

On the Grand Trunk yesterday morning two engines and a snowplow left Millbrook at 6 o'clock and arrived here at 2 in the afternoon. Shortly afterwards a train was made up for Toronto and left by way of Lindsay. It arrived in Toronto last night and the tracks are now clear.

The first train from Toronto since Friday night came in shortly before 12 o'clock last night. It was the regular 11.40 train and left Toronto at 9.15 drawn by two engines. The train arrived almost on time.

Traffic will be resumed today and trains will run on schedule time. Both roads will begin to move freight this morning. The C.P.R. has not run a freight for three days.

A REPORTED WRECK.

It was rumored yesterday afternoon that two engines had been wrecked on the G.T.R. near Belleville. The report could not be confirmed, and is doubtless unfounded.

Appeal to Mayor Kendry.

Jimmy, dear Jimmy, please come to our aid,
We're both in a terrible stew,
The people are raising a fearful old row
And there's no one to help us but you !\
Our friends are all gone, we'll be out of a job.
And Jimmy, the end is now nigh,
So give Auburn the shake, and come right away,
To rescue your Bertit and I.

Jimmy, dear Jimmy, you know the soft snap,
That so many years we have had,
To think that we'll both have to work for our pay,
It makes me feel awfully sad!
Oh, what will they do to your two little pets,
When the Council next meets, we don't know,
Get a move on, dear Jimmy—o, come right away,
Or next year we'll be shovelling snow!

A Metal Breadboard

THE WOMAN WHO HAS BEEN USED to kneading dough on the old fashioned wooden breadboard knows what a bother it is to get them clean and how cumbersome and heavy they are. When they begin to crack or check it is almost impossible to thoroughly cleanse them, and they may easily become dangerous conveyances of disease. It was left for a woman, of course, to remedy this state of affairs, and Mrs. M. M. Everhard, of St. Joseph, Mich., has patented a metal bread board, which is one of the greatest labor-savers imaginable. It is light, does not absorb grease, dough does not adhere to it, and while it possesses all the advantages of the marble bread-board it is much cheaper and, of course, far lighter and easier to handle. If readers want to confer a favor upon their wives that will be forever appreciated, let them send $1 to the manufacturers, 101 Bay street, Toronto, for one of these boards.

SAILORS' AWFUL AGONY.

THE HARROWING SIGHT WITNESSED BY A LIFE CREW.

They Perished One by One—Lashed to the Rigging in a Desperate Effort to Save Their Lives—Frost Bitten and Rendered Unconscious by Suffering.

FIRE ISLAND, Feb.—It is stated that nine of the crew of the unknown schooner ashore off Lone Hill life saving station have perished. Through a field glass some persons claimed to have seen eleven men in the rigging, shortly after she struck yesterday, but one by one fell into the sea from cold and exhaustion. Two remained. The vessel struck in the outer bay of Lone Hill life saving station. The life saving crew made preparations for a rescue. The life saving apparatus was brought to the beach and a life line shot over the wrecked vessel, but the unfortunate men composing her crew who had sought refuge in the rigging were unable to get to it. The life savers then attempted to launch their boat but the high sea and wind made it impossible for them to do so, and they were compelled to stand idly by and see the poor sailors perish, and for an hour later the crew commenced to drop from the rigging into the sea. This morning but two of their number remained.

FOR GOD'S SAKE SAVE US.

Later.—They are still alive but one of them is almost dead and the other too weak to assist him any. Cries of "For God's sake save us," are heard coming from the unfortunate men, but the surf is so high that it is impossible to launch a boat. At dusk tonight these men are still in the rigging. The scene is a most distressing one. At 7 o'clock a wrecking tug arrived. They will have to wait for high tide to reach the wreck.

TWO SAVED.

FIRE ISLAND, Feb 11.—The men when rescued could not speak neither could they walk. Their feet and hands were frost bitten. Wm. Stevens who kept the life in Stevenson, the other surviver, tells the story of the voyage as follows: We made the Long Island coast Tuesday morning. Then there were several feet of water in the hold and the steamer's pumps were working, but we were sinking rapidly. The captain decided to run for the shore. The vessel's head was pointed shoreward and we mounted the rigging and lashed ourselves to the ropes. The vessel struck the shore three quarters of an hour later. After being rescued the two sailors were carried to the station and worked over for four hours. When they had become thawed out, Stevens said that the swaying of the masts kept them from freezing. Every moment they expected to be their last. "I don't feel the effects now. If we had had a pan of beans and a smoke we could have stayed there two days longer. I kept pounding my companion to keep him alive. He wore leather boots, and they were filled with water freezing his feet. I kicked my feet together and kept them from freezing." Stevenson's feet are frozen stiff and both his hands are frost bitten.

PRINCESS MAUD.

She is Likely to Wed Some English Nobleman.

Special to the Times.

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—A cable to the Times says: Although no definite information is obtainable, it is not believed here that any intention exists of marrying Princess Maud of Wales to the Italian Count of Naples. He is of more than ordinary refinement and cultivation mentally, but physically he is a poor little weed of a fellow, and the ladies of the Guelph family do not go for that type of a husband. Princess Maud is spoken of as having a particularly independent turn of mind, as being bright, witty and self reliant and she is far more likely, it is said, to follow her sister's example and marry here in England. A year ago the air was full of rumors that Lord Rosebery would be the unfortunate man, but luck in all its aspects seems to have turned against him since then.

ANGERED THE SULTAN.

The Pope Advised Him to Appoint Christian Governors.

Special to the Times.

LONDON, Feb. 11.—A despatch to the Chronicle from Rome says that a cardinal confirms the report that the Sultan invited the Pope in to mediate in behalf of Turkey with the powers on the Armenian question. The Pope declined to do so but advised the Sultan to appoint Christian governors. This made the Sultan angry.

LONDON, Feb. 11.—A special despatch from Moosh says that it is rumored that the regular Armenian leader, Hadji Vai lost, has been condemned to death and will shortly be executed.

Found Dead on the Track.

LUCAN, Ont. Feb. 11.—Mr. John Mackenzie, a well-to-do farmer, living a few miles from Ailsa Craig, and a brother-in-law of Dr. Anderson, of the same place, left the London train at the Lucan crossing at 5.30 on Friday evening, and to walk to Ailsa Craig. He was found on Saturday morning lying dead near the railroad fence, 40 rods west of the crossing. An inquest has not yet been held and it is impossible to say whether he was killed by a freight train which passed the spot at 6 p.m. or perished in the storm. There were no visible marks on him such as would have been made had he been struck by the train.

The Cold in Florida.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Feb. 11.—Freezing weather continues. The best informed orange grower in Florida, Mr. James A. Harris, in Citra, says that 50 per cent. of the crop is killed outright, and that next year's crop will not reach 100,000 boxes, against 5,000,000 last year. The early vegetable crop, the entire strawberry crop and four-fifths of the pineapple plants are destroyed. The aggregate loss is conservatively estimated at $10,000,000.

Brakeman Proulx Killed.

SOUTH QUEBEC, Feb. 11.—While the Quebec Central Railway mixed train, No. 7, was on its way down from Chaudiere curve, a brakeman named Proulx, aged about 20 years, was struck by a spout crossing the track, about a quarter of a mile west of Hadlow, and was instantly killed. The body was brought to Levis for an inquest.

A Hearse Stuck in the Snow.

QUEBEC, Feb. 11.—At a funeral yesterday from the city the hearse got stuck in the snow and could not be moved. The horses were unhitched, and the hearse, with the body therein, left standing in the road until this morning.

G. T. R. COAL CONTRACTS.

A Large Detroit Firm Secures the Lion's Share.

Special to The Times.

MONTREAL, Feb. 11.—Most of the coal men who have been in the city for the past week in connection with the Grand Trunk Railway coal contract have returned home. The contract is one of the biggest available being for 750,000 tons, representing some two million dollars in money, and there is therefore great competition. The contract after considerable negotiation was practically awarded yesterday afternoon. The successful tenderers are the Shipmans, the big coal dealers of Detroit and the Erie Railway Company. The price, it is understood, is the lowest at which the contract has ever been awarded, and the Grand Trunk Railway has secured a bargain. The G. T. R. has frequently endeavored to have the duty removed, as it would mean a considerable saving, something like $300,000, but so far without success. The coal is to be delivered at the various points along the system during the year.

FOUL PLAY SUSPECTED.

A Family Said to Have Been Murdered and Cremated.

Special to the Times.

ARDMORE, I.T., Feb. 11.—Last Wednesday night, about 8 miles south of the city, a house occupied by a farmer named Tucker caught fire, and owing to the blizzard which prevailed it burned so quickly that the farmer, his wife and four children were cremated in the burning building.

Later it is learned that suspicion of foul play exists. It was thought the family was murdered and the house set on fire. The police are working on the case.

LONDON, Feb. 11.—Mr. G. R. Renton, secretary of the Grand Trunk Railway Company, died here on Friday, after a lingering illness, caused by an affection of the lungs. The deceased gentleman was well know to the officials in Canada, which he visited several times during his 20 years' incumbency of the office. It is not known who is successor will be.

FROM THE QUEEN CITY.

REMAINS OF THE LATE MR. JOSEPH LAID AT REST.

TORONTO, Feb. 11.—The obsequies of the late Frank Joseph, who lost his life in the collision at Weston Friday afternoon, took place this afternoon. The remains were removed from Undertaker Stone's mortuary, and taken to St. James' Cathedral. Canon Dumoulin and Canon Cayley conducted the funeral services at the church as also at the grave.

After the service the cortege then proceeded to St. James' cemetery, where the body was intered.

There was a large attendance of professional friends. Several representatives were present from the Ontario Government end of the civil service.

The following gentlemen acted as pallbearers:—Geo. W. Monck, ex.M. P. P., Geo. P. Reid, F. Wyld, Capt. Forsythe Grant, Duncan Coulson and Allan M. Diamond.

ABOUT THE UNFORTUNATES.

Engineer Charles Mainwaring and Conductor George Riley are at the General Hospital. The attending physicians stated this afternoon that they were progressing favorably.

Court Reporter John S. Monahan, who was so badly injured in the wreck at Weston, is lying at St. Michael's Hospital in a very critical condition. The authorities at that institution reported this afternoon that the injured man was resting easily, but was very low.

The condition of Charles Moore, the brakeman on the snow plow at Agincourt, who sustained such serious injuries in the smash, causes grave apprehension. He is at the General Hospital, and is suffering from serious internal injuries.

E. J. Davey, the section foreman, who was injured at Agincourt, is stopping at the residence of his brother, Harry Davey, at 134 Denison avenue. He is suffering greatly from the shock, and feels stiff and sore to day.

Mr. Justice Burton continues to progress favorably towards recovery, although still suffering from the effects of the injuries he sustained at the smash at Weston.

HE TOOK MAGGIE'S MUFF.

A young man named George A. Miller was arraigned before the Magistrate this morning accused of stealing a muff and collaret from Maggie Williams a few evenings ago. It appears that the pair were together drinking beer in an upstairs room of a King street hotel. The young woman went out leaving her muff. Miller left the hotel shortly afterwards and took Maggie's wearing apparel with him.

Just after he had gone Miss Williams returned and a waiter was sent out in search of Miller. He found him on Queen street in possession of the goods and had him arrested.

Maggie pleaded with the Magistrate to have her friend released, saying that he would not steal anything, and when his Worship dismissed the case the two walked out of court together smiling.

A GIST FROM COBOURG.

Emma Clarke, alias Coleman, the young woman arrested Saturday and accused of breaking into the house of E. J. Friend, at 201 Bolton avenue, came before Magistrate Kingsford this morning and was remanded until Friday.

This is the same young woman who came to Toronto from Cobourg with a friend named Elizabeth Keller last November. On the way here Miss Clarke got possession of the check for her friend's trunk and refused to give it up. Elizabeth Keller had her trunk put off at the Don station and instructed the agent there not to give it up to any person except herself.

Subsequently Miss Clarke came along with the check, and the baggageman, who was ignorant of the facts, delivered the trunk over to her. She then fell in with a young man about town and went to live with him. They travelled around from one boarding house to another and finally got so short of money that they could not pay their board, so Miss Keller's trunk was taken possession of by the landlady.

This morning Miss Clarke told Detective Duncan the whole story before going back to jail, and the police will now take charge of the long missing trunk.

RAGING STORMS AT SEA.

NOT A TRACE OF THE FRENCH LINER LA GASCOGNE.

Five Ships Stranded on the Coast La Touraine Looking for the Missing Ship—Coal Giving Out—Distress at Sea.

Special to the Times.

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—In the non-arrival of La Gascogne, and the fact that she has not been sighted in the regular track of steamers, both westward and outward bound, it seems conclusive that her progress is hampered by deranged machinery, and that she has drifted or has been blown far out of her course.

As the winds which have prevailed recently have been mostly from the north west, the probability is that her course would be towards the Azores, although there is a possibility that she may be heard from at Bermuda.

Agent Forget now hopes that one of the steamships from Gibraltar may bring news of the La Gascogne. These steamers are the Alsatia, Valentia, Stoswold, Bolivia and Letiniso. All are due today.

WILL LOOK FOR LA GASCOGNE.

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—By daylight came in the Umbria, eight days out from Liverpool, the Rhynland 15 days out from Antwerp, and the Manitoba 16 days out from London. They did not see La Gascogne.

Today La Gascogne's sister ship, La Normandie, arrived and reported no news of the overdue steamer. The Dania from Hamburg and Havre and Maasdam from Rotterdam, which came in this morning, report no news of La Gascogne.

La Touraine, on the contrary, which is now five days out for the Azores and the Mediterranean, will use every effort to get track of the missing ship. If her passage is an ordinarily quick one, she should reach the Azores today. Capt. Santelli will take a zigzag course.

SHIPS AGROUND.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Feb. 11.—The British steamship Stag and the fruit steamship Holguin were the only vessels that ventured to sail from here yesterday and both are stuck fast near the Larasetto.

No tidings have been received from the missing Pennsylvania pilot boats J. Henry Edmunds and E. C. Knight, which were last heard of on Thursday before the hurricane.

It is feared that they have been driven well off shore and may be disabled. The Heston steamer Parthian and the British steamship Guildhall from Carthagenia, and City of Newcastle from Calamata are all aground off Newcastle.

HIGHLANDER HAS NO NEWS.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Feb. 11.—A Republic special from Galveston, Tex., says the British steamer Highlander, Capt. Stoebel, 32 days out from Liverpool, has arrived. There was a faint hope that on her passage she might have fallen in with the French liner La Gascogne, but Capt. Steobel says that he did not sight her.

HAD TO ABANDON HER TOW.

LONDON, Feb. 11.—The British steamer Maryland, Capt. Horman, from Philadelphia, on January 23 for this port, arrived at Valentia, Ireland, yesterday evening, having damaged her bows in towing the Lock Maree, a disabled steamer, which she was obliged to abandon, owing to the fact that her supply of coal was exhausted.

THE SERVIA DELAYED.

QUEENSTOWN, Feb. 11.—The Cunard line steamship Servia, Captain Ferguson, which sailed for Liverpool on Saturday last, and which arrived here yesterday on her way to New York, is still waiting here for the mails which have been snowed up.

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—Steamer Wittekind, from Bremen, arrived. It brings no news of La Gascogne.

FOURTEEN WENT DOWN.

A VESSEL DASHED TO PIECES AT LIVERPOOL, N. S.

Loss of the Cienfuegos at Harbor Island—The Vessel Struck on a Coral Reef and Filled—Passengers all Safe.

Special to the Times.

HALIFAX, N. S., Feb. 11.—A despatch from Liverpool says the schooner Clara R. Friend, of and from Gloucester, while trying to make harbor here Saturday night, went ashore on Neil's Ledges, two miles from here, and became a total loss.

Her crew, consisting of 12 or 14 men, were every one drowned. It is impossible to find their names as the vessel is in a thousand pieces.

LOSS OF THE CIENFUEGOS.

The Vessel Struck on a Coral Reef and Filled—Passengers all Safe.

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—The Ward line steamer Santiago, from the south side of Cuba and Nassau, arrived this morning with 40 of the crew of the steamer Cienfuegos of the same line, which ran ashore at Harbor Island, Bahamas. The other of the officers and the remainder of the crew are standing by the vessel caring for the cargo. One of the members of the crew stated that on the morning of February 4th, about 4.30 o'clock, during a strong northwest gale with enormous seas, weather hazy, the steamer ran on a reef or small coral islet, about five miles north of Harbor Island, Nassau being about forty-five miles distant. The sharp reef pierced the bottom with such force that the vessel filled within five minutes, extinguishing the fires. There was no confusion among the men when Capt. Hoyt ordered the boats to be prepared for launching. This was quickly done, and the boats were swung from the vessel's side ready to drop into the water. At 7 a.m. the little fishing schooner Goodwill bore down to the steamer and launched her surf boat, the captain of the schooner boarding the stranded steamer, and, after some time, the passengers and baggage were landed, the water being too shoal for the steamer's boats. At 11 a. m. the Santiago hove in sight in-shore as close as safety would permit, and laid by for several hours, but could do nothing to aid the unfortunate vessel. All of the passengers were finally transferred by the Good will to Harbor Island, whence they proceeded to Nassau. The Cienfuegos will be a total loss.

The Cienfuegos is the vessel on which Messrs. W. McCabe and J. T. Matthews, of Toronto, were passengers.

The Times.

PETERBOROUGH, FEBRUARY 12, 1895.

Good morning !

The Chinese take great pains to use the English language with accuracy, but sometimes they are more fluent than correct. Some pretty little seaweed flowers that from seemingly dry sticks when dropped into a finger bowl with water are imported in gray paper envelopes, sometimes labelled thus :—"Water flowars for the amusement after dinner."

A tubular boiler 1,800 years old has been discovered at Pompeii. It is made of sheet metal, probably copper, in the shape of a large amphora or two-handled jar, with a hollow space running half way up to the centre of the jar. In this space was placed a cylindrical firebex resting on firebars, which are tubes three quarters of an inch in diameter, connecting with the water space. The fuel seems to have been charcoal.

Prof. R. T. MacDougal of the Minnesota University is going to make a study of the influence of electricity upon growing plants. Currents of electricity from the weakest (registered by a galvano meter) to the full strength of the city electric light current will be sent through the earth in which plants are growing, and the effects will be minutely observed. Prof. MacDougal is merely doing in a modern way what has been attempted from time to time for a century.

Ex-Queen Lil has formerly renounced her rights to the throne of Hawaii. She was in jail, in danger of being tried for her life on a charge of conspiring against Mr. Dole's republic, when she signed the abdication document, and it is not at all probable that the act was a voluntary one. However, if Mr. Dole lets her go, ex-Queen Lil has it in her power to wreak vengeance on persecutor's countrymen ; she may cross over to the States and take to the lecture platform.

Pipe smoking is one of the things with which many New York clubs have to contend. Some clubs forbid it altogether a few permit it without restriction, and many restrict it to a single room. In the case of the last the pipe smokers constantly tend to stretch their pivileges, and the house committee has recurrent struggles with the problem. Even the Calumet, whose name seems to promise absolute freedom in the matter of pipes, was forced at one time to banish them from the club house.

Mr. Cecil Rhodes, according to the Duke of Fife, will certainly be enrolled in the future list of England's great men, and foremost among the makers of the British Empire. A poor youth, he emigrated in weak health to South Africa, grew to be "Diamond King," and one of the richest men in the world, Premier of the Cape, and founder of an addition to the Colonial Empire so vast as to sway the Britísh Isle from a geographical point of view, being about six times their extent in territory.

A leaf of a Gothic Bible of the sixth or seventh century was recently discovered in the archives of the Haute Garonne by an abbe of Toulouse. It contains two chapters of Ecclesiasticus, and is valuable, for only a small portion of the Old Testament translated by Bishop Ulfilas has been preserved ; the New Testament has fared better. Fragments of the Gothic Bible have been found in many parts of Europe, the most important and most famous of all being the Codex Argenteus written in silver letters on crimson parchment, now in the library at Upsala, in Sweden.

PROGRESS OF THE WAR IN THE EAST.

The discovery that China's negotiations for peace were illusory, and that her alleged plenipotentiaries were simply authorized to transmit proposals to Pekin, will surprise nobody who recalls the conduct of the Chinese Government under similar circumstances thirty-six years ago. The French and English found it impossible, notwithstanding repeated demonstrations of their military superiority, to extort any binding agreement from the representatives of the Manchu dynasty, until they had occupied Pekin. That no other stroke will avail to coerce shifty and mendacious enemies, who will continue to describe defeats as victories until they are driven from their capital, must now be as patent to the Japanese as it was from the outset to onlookers.

The reason commonly assigned for the arrest of the Japanese advance toward Mukden, and for the postponement of a movement against Pekin, is the dificulty of conducting military operations at this season of the year. We observe, however that Mr. Charles Denby, Jr, Secretary of the American Legation at Pekin, who has lately returned after a sojourn of nine years in China, confirms the statement of the English soldier diplomatist, Capt. Younghusband, that in Manchuria and the adjoining part of the Middle Kingdom the winter presents the most favorable conditions for moving large bodies of troops by land. On the other hand, it is the worst season for transporting troops by water, the rivers and the harbors nearest Pekin being blocked with ice. The apparent change, therefore, in the Japanese programme, is doubtless due to an intention of moving an army in the spring by water to some point on the Pei-ho River within a relatively short distance of the Chinese capital. To that end the capture or disablement of the Chinese fleet and the absolute control of the Gulf Pe-chi-li would naturally seem indispensable ; and we may thus explain the concentration of the Mikado's military and naval forces for an attack upon Wei-hai-wei, where most of China's remaining ironclads had taken refuge. According to the latest accounts, the fortifications of Wei-hai-wei had fallen into the hands of the assailants and the Chinese fleet destroyed.

Meanwhile, the Chinese have secured, what they wanted, time, and we shall know presently whether they have turned it to account. If they have the good fortune to obtain the services of as able an officer as Was Ward or Gordon, and have had the good sense to give him dictatorial powers, the Japanese may learn the extreme danger of delay in dealing with a country of almost limitless resources. Thus far, however, there is no evidence that the Pekin Government has awakened to the necessity of delegating to European mercenaries the requisite measure of authority. Of the early intervention of any European power there is no indication nor is there any plausible pretext for such a step. Japan has as clear a right to occupy Pekin for the purpose of imposing a treaty on a Government, which cannot otherwise be brought to terms, as England and France had to do this in 1860, more than two years after they had taken, by way of menace, the Taku forts. The assertion that the capture of the Chinese capital would probably be followed by the outbreak of civil war in the Celestial Empire and the downfall of the Manchu reigning family, has no more force now than thirty years ago. The present dynasty would last long enough to make a treaty, and if it were soon superseded by honest native rulers, the change would be of incalculable benefit to the hard-working and peace-wishing population of the Middle Kingdom.

While the bulk of the Mikado's forces are engaged in Manchuria and China, a sufficient number of troops has been left in Corea to assure the maintenance of order, and we learn that energetic measures have been taken to promote the commercial and social regeneration of the Hermit Kingdom. At Seoul the reactionists have been excluded from any share in the administration, and have been succeeded by men of progressive ideas, willing to profit by the example and assistance of Japan. It appears that Japanese engineers have already made the surveys for two railroads, one of which is to connect Seoul with its seaport, Chemulpo. It is interesting to see Japan thus trying to discharge a filial duty to her mother country. We say filial, for the islands governed by the Mikado were undoubtedly colonized from the Corean peninsula ; and their civilization, although primarily evolved in the Middle Kingdom, was transmitted to them by their Corean neighbors.

QUININE GATHERERS.

HOW THE HARDY CASCARILLEROS OF PERU OBTAIN THE BARK.

A Calling That Is Full of Dangers—How the Cinchona Trees Are Located and Stripped—The Natural Home of This Wonderful Medicine.

It was while serving on the South American station, with the comfortable old craft snugly moored in Callao harbor, that the writer, in company with a party of friends, took a trip inland to witness the operations of the celebrated cascarilleros or cinchona bark searchers. The mountains of Peru are the natural home of this wonderful medicinal tree, which is easily distinguishable from surrounding foliage by its beautiful lanceolate leaves and magnificent proportions. They frequently reach a height of 80 feet, straight as a lance, and covered with foliage. The leaves are large and of a deep, glossy green, relieved by delicate pink lines, producing a beautiful effect in the brilliant sunshine of that favored land.

The life of a cascarillero is one of peril, constant toil and incessant hardship. But it is his livelihood, and, with hungry mouths to feed, the poor but fearless native cuts loose from his wretched mountain habitation of bark, bidding his dusky family circle farewell, not knowing whether he will ever meet them alive again or not. Little does the consumer of the drug, who purchases it within the portals of some luxurious establishment, realize the danger and suffering involved in procuring the powder soon to be taken so lightly or carelessly for some real or fancied trouble.

The hunter plunges resolutely into the dark and mighty forest, striking well known trails, which lead far beyond the pale of civilization or even tracts of country utilized by the half savage hunter of game. With scarcely a change of clothing, encumbered with nothing save the rude implements of his calling, the cascarillero pushes on through tangled depths of jungle over rough and wind swept mountains, braving furious torrents and improvising frail swinging bridges of trees and tough creepers. Ever on the alert, with muscles developed and sinews hardened like steel, facing beasts of prey and slipping from beyond the slimy, fatal coils of huge serpents lurking amid the oozy morasses and foothills, the poor fellow eludes perhaps death in a dozen frightful forms to meet his fate through torture—dying by inches.

Although the pay of the quinine hunter is ridiculously small, it suffices to meet the simple requirements of himself and family, and as a class they are happy and contented with their lot in life. It is a vocation that is handed down from father to son, the elder schooling his progeny in all secrets pertaining to forest life and the search for the highly prized bark, but despite long years of experience, coupled with an intimate knowledge of the intricate trails leading to the cinchona vocations, many Indian hunters yearly lose their lives amid the bewildering depths of the dark, untrodden jungles of the vast wilderness.

Occasionally a number of hunters will pool their interests, starting out in company as a greater protection against disaster. Upon reaching a desirable spot, where the signs of paying trees are considered good, preparations for camping are at once made, a detail looking after that duty, while particularly keen eyed and lithe hunters pick out the loftiest trees, from the tops of which they scan the forest, quickly locating clumps of the precious cinchonas.

Then it is the musical, deep toned voices of the cascarilleros ring out in careless chorus through the silent recesses of the far spreading forest. The ring of axes and echoes of sturdy blows dealt lofty monarchs of the Cordilleras mingle in unison with the weird Indian chant, while the blazing campfires throw out a cheery welcome to any wayfarer, who, regardless of race or color, always is accorded a welcome to the camp of the quinine hunters. At night, when all labor is necessarily suspended, the members of the expedition gather about the well kept fire, when many a wild and stirring tale of thrilling adventure is recounted by the dusky searchers as they loll at ease on the long, velvety grass of the plateau.

The task of gathering cinchona bark occupies all the working hours between sunrise and set. The camp is early astir, with no time lost in culinary preparations. The making of savory messes and aroma of strong, fresh coffee is confined to the two or three white men occasionally accompanying the party of hunters. This may comprise a botanist, sent on by some European concern to study the flora of the comparatively unknown region, an adventurous traveler or a hard pressed prospector in search of the precious metals. All find shelter and a hearty welcome within the frontier camp of cascarilleros.

Armed with knives and keen edged hatchets, the tree is quickly felled with all hands cutting, stripping and clearing the trunk from all foreign growth encumbering the trunk. This is a task of no small magnitude, frequently consuming days of constant and patient labor. The sharp edges of lancelike leaves, mingled with thorns and huge briers, lacerate and wound the hunters' flesh, who are not overburdened with clothing, their dark bodies exhibiting a network of scars and wounds, the result of their encounters with parasites and creepers as well as attacks from savage beasts prowling under cover of the jungle.

The bark is removed, cut into tiny curling strips and piled in some convenient spot, where one or more of the party are detailed to look after the drying process. This comparatively easy duty is generally awarded to one more or less disabled by wounds or accident in falling from some lookout tree or station. The thin portions curl up, drying rapidly, while the large, thick slices retain their shape and are easily packed for transportation. When all are pronounced ready by the "toriejo," or head hunter of the party, the bark is neatly lashed together with deftly plaited lashings of plaited grass and bound with broad, tough leaves as a protection to the cured bark. Then the Indians and peons shoulder their burdens, oftentimes striking the home trail with a weight of 150 to 200 pounds on their backs, secured by straps of broadly plaited plateau grass passed around their foreheads. With their jaws actively at work masticating the wonderful leaves of the strength giving cocoa, these small, slender natives will travel over a caballero, 100 leagues, of the roughest mountain trails, conveying their hard earned quinine treasures to market, their hardships and privations lightened along the perilous pathway by the sonorous cadence of their native songs, to which they time their sure and steady pace.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

OUR YOUNG GIRLS

Overstudy and Too Rapid Growth Often Promote Disease.

We See Sallow and Bloodless Faces and Attenuated and Lank Bodies

Mothers not Sufficiently on the Alert to Guide and Counsel Their Daughters.

Paine's Celery Compound The Great Brain Food and Flesh-builder for all Young Girls

Overstudy in school and in the home, confinement for hours each day in badly ventilated buildings, and a too rapid growth of body, very often promote disease and suffering. Thousands of young girls are suffering to-day. They may be seen going to and coming from school. Their sallow, bloodless face, their attenuated or lank forms indicate disease.

Mothers are to blame for the unhappy and dangerous condition of their girls. They strongly encourage their daughters in one direction—cramming the brain—but neglect to warn them of the rocks and quicksands on which many precious lives are wrecked. The results are often terrible. Headache, nervous prostration, debility, irregularities of the system, dyspepsia, liver troubles, and other forms of disease, bring quite an army of young girls to the grave every year.

Wise and prudent mothers, when any symptoms of danger assail their girls, invariably use that great brain food and flesh-builder, Paine's Celery Compound. This wonderful medicine enriches the blood and gives it a free and healthy circulation; it braces the nerves, gives physical strength promotes good digestion, and gives sweet natural sleep.

No other medicine in the world can give the satisfactory results that flow from the use of Paine's Celery Compound. It should be the chosen medicine for every young girl who is delicate, weak and sickly. Mrs. A. R. Stinchcombe, 10 William St., London, Ont., writes as follows:—

DEAR SIRS:—I think it a duty to write you the benefit of all who have delicate children, and to make known what Paine's Celery Compound has done for my girl. She has been delicate all her life. I have tried many medicines, and have had her under allopathic and homœopathic treatment, with but little benefit. Almost in despair, and as a last resort, I tried Paine's Celery Compound, and after using three bottles she is now perfectly well and strong. I have also used your medicine myself for complications arising from overwork and loss of rest, and am greatly benefitted thereby. I would strongly urge all who are in any way afflicted to do as I have done, "try Paine's Celery Compound," and be convinced of its wonderful curing power.

THE LAW ABOUT TIPPING.

What a Visit to an English House Will Cost a Guest.

Let me attempt to throw a ray of light into this cavern of darkness and try to suggest what are the sums generally given by knowing people in England under various circumstances. To begin with, let us take the simplest case—that of an unmarried man who stops from Sunday till Monday in the house of a friend who keeps only a parlor maid or single manservant. Here half a crown should be quite enough for the servant. In the case of a married couple, the lady, if without a maid, adds half a crown for the housemaid. The coachman, if there is one, must have his shilling after driving you to the station. If the visitor stops for a week, he should make his donation 4 shillings. He should allow, that is, about sixpence a night and sixpence over as a sort of ground tax.

We come next to the case of Saturday to Monday in a more elaborate establishment—i. e., where a butler and a footman are kept. Here the Saturday to Monday guest must distinguish. If the footman looks after him, the footman should have half a crown, and the butler also half a crown, in consideration of the fact that the butler will probably order your fly for you and look out for your trains. If, however, the footman is kept in the background altogether and the butler valets you, the butler takes the whole 5 shillings. If you stop for a longer time—say a week—these sums should be raised to 4 or 5 shillings in each case.

If the visitor brings a man of his own, the tip to the footman, of course, disappears, but that to the butler usually remains. When the really great establishments are reached, different rules prevail. The ordinary bachelor guest need perhaps only trouble himself about the special footman told off to wait on him. Unless the butler is an old friend or has to be asked to do something out of the way there is no cause to tip him.—National Review.

Motherly Love.

"Isn't it horrid," said the Circassian beauty, "to think of the fat lady wedding the ossified man so soon after her first husband's demise?"

"Yes, I know," replied the two headed girl, "but she says that the baby has taken a fancy to cutting his teeth on him."—Indianapolis Journal.

The alligator never leaves fresh water, while the crocodile frequently travels long distances by sea. It has been seen 1,000 miles from from land, and it is possible that these sea going crocodiles have given rise to sea serpent stories.

WHAT A PERSON WEIGHS.

It Is Difficult to Determine Exactly, Even With Seemingly Accurate Scales.

Many persons weigh themselves frequently and imagine that they know their weight. Sweet illusion! Nothing is more difficult than to know one's weight exactly, even with access to first class scales. We hear one say, "I am making flesh; I have increased two pounds," and another, "I am getting into form; I weigh three pounds less," but while I do not wish to make myself disagreeable, especially to people who keep account of their weight, I am convinced that in most of such cases there is really not an ounce of gain or loss, or if there is any variation it is not what the scales record.

A lady goes into a store, weighs herself and receives a card, Aug. 15, 120 pounds. She goes to the country, and returning after several months weighs herself again in the same store and receives a card, on which she finds inscribed, Nov. 22, 126 pounds. She has gained six pounds in three months and ascribes it to the change, the fresh air, etc. She feels happy—good weight, good health. But is this increase real? In nine cases out of ten it is only apparent, due mainly to wearing more or heavier clothes, thicker boots, etc.

The ordinary methods for determining variations in weight give absolutely fallacious results. The causes which influence weight are numerous and rarely taken into consideration. For example, was the weight taken immediately after breakfast or long after, or following active exercise attended with free perspiration? Again, many people, even educated people, have extraordinary ideas as to what affects the weight of the body. Have you not been asked more than once if it is true that one weighs less after meals than before? As if every additional weight in the pocket or the stomach were not necessarily revealed by the balance. The fact is that people are in the habit of weighing themselves, for good luck, one day after breakfast, another day before dinner, another day with heavy clothes on, another day when it rains, etc. Add to this the errors of the scales, and who can say that he knows exactly his own weight or range of variation?

One's weight is like a mobile expression—it changes every instant. The study of this matter is nevertheless of considerable physiological and hygienic importance, a fact of which I have become thoroughly convinced in the course of more than ten years' investigation of the subject.

The inaccuracies of ordinary balances, such as one finds in hotels, at railway stations, etc., determined me to make a portable balance to weigh 100 kilograms (220 pounds), and to be exact to within an ounce, and since then I have weighed myself regularly every day at the same hour in the morning and under identical conditions, and today I possess a record of five years of experiments conducted with the utmost precision.

Every day when weighing myself I record the barometric and hygrometric variations, the temperature and the dinner menu of the day. These experiments have convinced me more than ever that our weight is in a perpetual state of fluctuation. After eliminating the errors of the instrument our weight varies, subject to innumerable influences. At breakfast on a warm day one loses more than 150 grams an hour. How, then, are you to arrive at your true weight when it is subject to such incessant fluctuations? When we remember that 70 per cent of our body is water, there is little difficulty in understanding that our weight must vary continually with the transpiration of moisture; moreover, it varies with the pressure of the atmosphere.

The mere variations in atmospheric humidity suffice to account for a change of more than a pound, and other causes may suffice to account for another pound. The person who weighs only at intervals may infer from this that he is growing lighter or heavier, but the conclusion is unwarranted. There are some people, on the other hand, who will tell you their weight never changes. This, too, is a error; it is constantly fluctuating. The fault is generally that the scales used do not record variations of a pound or so. For ordinary purposes this is of no consequence, but for recording changes of weight in sickness it is of very serious moment.

The scales are not without their importance in medical practice, especially with infants. The weight of an infant increases in definite proportion during the first weeks of life, and there can be no departure from this regularity of increase without impairment of health. For adult persons, too, it is good to consult the scales, for they are the barometer of health. Any sudden increase of weight, amounting to a pound or so in a day, indicates a tendency to disease. It is evidence of health when the weight does not fluctuate more than three or four ounces from day to day. Great fluctuation implies functional derangement.—Dr. Parville in Correspondent.

The Blue Heron.

Wherever the blue heron was he always looked as if he might be going to do something presently. Even now perhaps the weather was on his mind, but at this moment—well, there are times when a heron's strength is to stand still. Certainly he seemed in no danger of overeating. A cracker told me that the major made an excellent dish if killed in the full of the moon. The bird, he said, feeds mostly at night and fares best with the moon to help him.

If the reader would dine off roast blue heron, therefore, as I hope I never shall, let him mind the lunar phases. But think of the gastronomic ups and downs of a bird that is fat and lean by turns 12 times a year! Possibly my informant overstated the case, but in any event I would trust the major to bear himself like a philosopher. If there is any one of God's creatures that can wait for what he wants, it must be the great blue heron.—"Florida Sketch Book."

The Difference.

The other night, when the streets were crowded, a dog running along the sidewalk stepped out on a crossing, and "pointing" his muzzle in the air began to howl. It was worth while noticing the way in which different people who heard the animal were effected. One woman stopped and began to wring her hands. "I know that my brother is dead. I'm just as sure of it as if I had seen him. I never knew a dog to howl that you did not hear of death."

The policeman on the beat had started for the dog when a young lady who was crossing the street stopped and patted the animal on the head. "Poor doggy," she said in a sympathetic voice, "you're lost, aren't you? Poor fellow!" and the dog stopped howling and trotted along after his new friend.—Boston Herald.

HIS FEEBLE MAJORITY CANNOT BE DEPENDED UPON.

Special to the Times.

LONDON, Feb. 9.—The precarious position in which the Government is placed was strikingly illustrated in the House of Commons on Thursday night, when the whips warned the leaders on each side that if a division were then taken the Government would certainly be defeated. The Conservatives could rely upon a majority of two against all the votes that could be mustered on the Ministerial side, but no vote was taken. The vacillation of the Unionist leaders has since been explained by themselves as having been based upon the unwillingness to seize an ungenerous advantage of their adversaries. This inaciton enabled the Liberal whips to put the screws on so effectually as to present the feeble majority upon which the Government continues to exist, but the presence of even this majority cannot, of course, be relied upon.

The amendment to the address in reply to the Queen's speech, demanding an immediate dissolution of Parliament, which Mr. Redmond has announced that he will introduce on Monday, certainly cannot make the situation of the Liberals any worse than it is, nor can it very well increase the strain which falls largely upon the Liberal whips, who are obliged to keep constantly on the alert to prevent a surprise and defeat of the Government.

LIBERALS EMBARRASSED.

In making preparations for a dissolution and a consequent appeal to the country, the Liberals are very greatly embarrassed by the continued withdrawal of prospective candidates, especially including men of local distinction. The Liberals' election Exchequer is ample, but a number of good men, wealthy and of high repute, who recently agreed to stand for election, are now declining to make the race.

The growing belief that there is a popular reaction towards the Conservative party is the main cause of the defection. This state of affairs gives the scratch candidates selected by the Central Executive Committee, and whose election expenses must be paid out of the party purse, a better chance of coming to the front, though it is very bad for the prospects of the personnel of the Liberal party in the next Parliament.

CHAMBERLAND'S BOMBSHELL.

The amendment which Mr. Chamberlain has announced his intention of submitting, setting forth that it is contrary to public interest that the time of Parliament should be occupied by the discussion of measures, which, according to the ministers' own statements, there is no prospect of passing, while proposals involving great constitutional charges have been announced, upon which the judgment of Parliament should be taken without delay, will also be very likely to prove a bombshell in the political camp.

Mr. Labouchere, too, has given notice that he will introduce a motion to deprive the House of Lords of power to vote upon a bill that has twice been passed by the House of Commons, but this motion will not be debated until it gets a place through a ballot for the consideration of motions of private members.

HEALY'S MULISHNESS.

The split between the McCarthyites and the Healyites has been widened by the refusal of Mr. Healy to assent to Mr. McCarthy's appeal to the people for pecuniary aid until the disposition of the Paris fund has been fully and publicly reported. Mr. Healy knows that this fund has been administered with absolute purity and he also knows that the party is sorely in need of financial aid to enable the full Irish contingent to attend the sittings of Parliament; yet he will not give way and there is trouble ahead in the already disturbed ranks of the national Parliamentary party.

A FLYING TRIP.

An Electric Car Runs Down a Steep Grade at a Terrific Speed.

PITTSBURG, Feb. 9.—An electric car on the California avenue branch of the Pleasant Valley railroad became unmanageable today while descending the Woodsrun hill. The motorman and conductor jumped from the car, leaving the occupants to their fate. The car plunged down the steep grade, flying like the wind. At the bottom the car jumped the track and struck against the end of the bridge which spans Woodsrun 150 feet below. Three passengers were badly injured.

Lord "Randy's" Successor.

LONDON, Feb. 9.—Mr. Fardel, Conservative, has been returned without opposition as member of Parliament for South Paddington, in succession to the late Lord Randolph Churchill.

Strikers Indicted.

BROOKLYN, Feb. 9.—There were handed in a batch of indictments today against the men who cut trolley wires, obstructing tracks, threw bricks, and committed other acts to interfere with the running of cars. The charge against them is malicious interference with the running of cars. This is felony. Miss May McDonald was indicted. She is only 18 years old, and was the leader of a mob on 5th avenue.

Miss Buecker Honored.

LONDON, Feb. 9.—Ex-Empress Frederick has invited Anna Buecker, the only woman saved from the Elbe, to visit Osborne next Monday to meet the queen and herself.

PUMAS IN DEADLY CONFLICT.

Great Cats That Make a Rattling Fight When Evenly Matched.

"On our return trip to the coast I saw a thrilling incident of life in the South American forest, a fight to the death between two big pumas. Those great beasts are fierce, hard fighters at all times against a common enemy, but it is only during the mating season that the males fight among themselves, and when they do the contest means death to one or both of them. For strength and courage they are the equals of the African lion or the tigers of the Indian jungles.

"We were making our way down a narrow wooded ravine in the foothills of the Andes and had stopped for our midday meal on the bank of a small mountain stream of clear water. After we had finished the meal I lay down for a short rest, but in less than five minutes I was aroused by the most terrific roaring, snapping and snarling of wild beasts I had ever heard.

"'Pumas, and there's going to be a fight,' said our guide in a whisper. It was not difficult to locate the animals. They were not more than 100 yards away, and by creeping through the brush as quietly as possible we were able to get near enough to see the fight without disturbing them. When we caught sight of the two animals, they were crouching close to the ground, facing each other, in a small space under some large trees. They were the finest specimens of the puma I ever saw.

"They were probably 30 feet apart, and as they crouched there, glaring at each other, they looked like giant cats about to spring on their prey. Pugilists never sparred with greater caution than did those big brutes. Their tails were switching back and forth, and their eyes were like balls of fire. Slowly they moved around in a circle, all the time cautiously getting closer and closer together. It was evident that each was waiting for the other to make the first lead. For more than ten minutes they watched and waited. The roaring and snarling we had heard when they first met had ceased. They made no sound now as they watched for a chance to spring.

"Our own nerves were trembling under the strain when at last the two great beasts rose in the air at the same instant, and, like catapults, came together with a thud that could have been heard 200 yards away. They dropped to the ground, and for almost ten minutes all we could make out was two great brown bodies rolling over and over in the death struggle. They made no outcry of any kind, but every few seconds we could hear their powerful jaws come together with a snap like the closing of a well oiled steel trap.

"Finally they began to weaken, and as their struggles grew less violent we could see that both of them were covered with blood, while their flesh was torn to shreds. In five minutes more the fight was over, and the two giants of the forest were stretched out at full length on the ground, clasped in each other's limbs, just as two playful kittens sometimes lie down together. They struggled feebly a little longer, and then both of them lay perfectly still. Both were dead when we got to them, and I never saw animals so torn to pieces. The entrails of both were torn out and scattered over the ground where they had fought, and in their necks were great ragged holes, from which the blood had flowed in streams while they were still fighting. They each had a score of wounds that would have killed any animal with less tenacity of life."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Napoleon's Thriftiness.

Economy and privation were always more supportable to him than borrowing. He detested irregularities in financial matters. "Your finances are deplorably conducted, apparently on metaphysical principles. Believe me, money is a very physical thing," he once said to Joseph when the latter, as king of Naples, could not make both ends meet. He put Jerome to sea largely to stop his reckless expenditures. At 15 that young man paid $3,200 for a shaving case "containing everything except the beard to enable its owner to use it." Some of the most furious scenes which occurred between Napoleon and Josephine were because she was continually in debt. After the divorce he frequently cautioned her to be watchful of her money. "Think what a bad opinion I would have of you if I knew you were in debt with an income of $600,000 a year," he wrote her in 1813.

The methodical habits of Marie Louise were a constant satisfaction to Napoleon. "She settles all her accounts once a week, deprives herself of new gowns if necessary and imposes privations upon herself in order to keep out of debt," he said proudly. A bill of 63 francs and 33 centimes was once sent to him for window blinds placed in the salon of the Princess Borghese. "As I did not order this expenditure, which ought not to be charged to my budget, the princess will pay it," he wrote on the margin. It was not parsimony. It was the man's sense of order. No one was more generous in gifts, pensions, salaries, but it irritated him to see money wasted or managed carelessly.—McClure's Magazine.

California's Wonderful Temple.

In southern California, in the county of San Luis Obispo, there is situated one of the most remarkable prehistoric monuments known to the archæologists. From a distance it looks like an immense rock rising from the plains of Carisso, but upon nearer approach it is seen to be a temple of extraordinary dimensions and of unknown antiquity. The inner court has a level floor 235 feet long and 125 feet wide, and the ceiling is from 60 to 100 feet high, according to situation. The building was evidently used by prehistoric man, but for what purpose and how long since no one knows. It has been suggested, however, that it was either a temple of worship or the capitol of some ancient government. The walls and portions of the ceiling are beautifully decorated with paintings in colors red, white and black, many of them supposed to have some symbolic meaning. Holcomb, who visited the site of this wonderful edifice in 1893, and who put in several days trying to find evidences of human sacrifice among the various scenes depicted on the walls, says that the colors are apparently as bright as when first laid on.

The Indians of that locality are said to have no traditions concerning the building of this temple, yet they all regard it with superstitious reverence.—St. Louis Republic.

Weird Story of a Chair.

In the museum at Cape Town is shown an old fashioned, high backed wooden chair, to which attaches a weird story. It is related that the chair is the one in which the Dutch governor was found sitting dead a few moments after the execution of a soldier whom he had sentenced to be hanged, and who on his doom being pronounced solemnly called upon his condemner to accompany him to the throne of the Supreme Judge.—Times of India.

THE WAR IN THE ORIENT

THE CHINESE FLEET AT WEI HAI WEI IS CAUGHT IN A TRAP.

The Peace Negotiations—The Chinese Ambassadors in Japan Have Been Accorded Full Powers to Negotiate for Peace.

Special to the Times.

LONDON, Feb. 11.—The Central News correspondent in Pekin telegraphs that the Chinese Government is consulting with the foreign diplomists concerning the new powers to be exercised by the peace envoys to Japan. The Central News correspondent in Tokio has these details of the recent fighting at Wei Hai Wei: On the night of January 30th the Japanese torpedo fleet entered the bay at Wei Hai Wei, but the Japanese on the western forts, supposing that the boats were from the Chinese squadron, opened a heavy fire and compelled them to withdraw. January 31st, was raw and blustering. Toward evening it snowed heavily. The warships, their guns and the torpedo boats were coated with ice five inches thick, and were at too great disadvantage to venture an attack. The second attempt upon the Chinese was deferred, therefore until the night of Feb. 2nd, when an advance for the torpedoes was ordered. The Chinese were on the watch, however, and discovered the Japanese in time to give general warning. The torpedo fleet was forced to withdraw without even approaching the Chinese squadron. Feb. 3rd was passed in preparations for another attack. On the night of Feb. 4th the Chinese were less vigilant than formerly. The Japanese torpedo boat Ming Ling stole in upon the Chinese fleet and while entirely unobserved launched two torpedoes at the Ling Yuen. The big ironclad began to go down almost immediately after struck. The Ming Ling lost eight men in getting away. Fifteen other torpedo boats took part in the attack and two of them broke their propellers on rocks or floating obstructions. On the night of the 5th one Japanese boat approached the Chinese fleet and launched seven torpedoes, sinking two warships and a gunboat.

The correspondent in Tokio says that the Chinese still hold forts on the island of Lien Kueng Tao.

On the 6th the Japanese made an unsuccessful attack upon the uncaptured forts. On the seventh the cruisers and gun boats aided the attacking Japanese troops with a hot cannonade, but the main forts remained in the enemy's hands. Of the forts captured by the Japanese at Wei Hai Wei, the western group is useless, but the eastern group is in fine condition and is armed throughout with excellent guns, which are of great use to the Japanese marines.

LONDON, Feb. 11.—The Times correspondent in Pekin telegraphs that the full powers to negotiate have been conferred upon the Chinese envoys to Japan with a view to renewing the attempts to

From Wei Hai Wei the Times has this despatch, dated February 4th: Sixteen Chinese warships and 12 torpedo boats are in the harbor and escape. Some have come close to shore to attempt to land their crews and let them escape, but the Japanese drove them off. Gen. Oterta and a Japanese war correspondent were killed. The Japanese troops are in good health and under strict discipline.

PARIS, Feb. 11.—The European edition of the Herald publishes a despatch, dated February 9, from its agent with the first Japanese army. He gives the strength and positions of the Chinese forces in Manchuria as follows:

Lenskankwan	99,000
Liasyang and Irabo	19,000
Moukden	13,000
Yin Haoten and Chwang Tai	34,000
Thaimacki	6,700
Kitongku and Sankepsa	7,000
Total	178,700

There are only 50,000 Japanese troops in the field.

Another boat, in returning after having exploded a torpedo against a Chinese ship, ran into some obstruction at the entrance to the harbor and was badly damaged and practically sunk under the enemy's fire. A Japanese lieutenant and two men were frozen to death."

Sent to Gaol.

James Elves, the clothes wringer fakir, appeared before His Honor Judge Benson yesterday in Cobourg, on a charge of stealing a gold ring, but the evidence was not strong enough to convict. There being several other charges against the prisoner, he was remanded until Friday of this week.

The Carnival Ball

The Charity Carnival Ball, the proceeds of which will be donated to the Ladies' Aid of St. Peter's and the Protestant Home will take place tonight in the Opera House. The affair promises to a brilliant one. Doors open at 8 o'clock, and at 9 dancing will begin, music to be furnished by the Battalion band and Butcher's orchestra.

Walsh brass works, Ottawa, has sold out to James F. O'Hara. Ida K. Dundas, milliner, Petrolea, has sold out.

Supreme Court for Ontario.

At a meeting of the Supreme Court of Judicature for Ontario held on Saturday last it was ordered as follows: Con. rule 133 is rescinded and the following substituted therefor: "133.—Where only one auditor is appointed his remuneration is hereby fixed at the sum of $300 per annum payable in monthly instalments, for which checks shall be issued, payable out of the general interest account upon the fiat of any Judge of the High Court." J. F. C. Haldane, of Windsor, barrister, was appointed a special examiner for the county of Essex.

Terrible Privation.

Word was received in town today of the terrible experience of a family living in Apsley, who were on their way to town and who were lost in the storm that raged on Friday and Saturday. They started for town on Thursday and were overcome by the intense cold. They wandered around till they came across a farm house where they were given food and clothing, and in time were able to give a statement of how they came to be lost. The father said they started for town at 6 o'clock on Thursday night and calculated that he would get into town in time for the sons of canada carnival on the twenty-second and get one of the prizes that are on exhibition in gough bros. window, george street. 1d11

TWO MORE ACCIDENTS.

One Near Belleville and One at Tilsonburg—Several Injured.

When two miles west of Sidney or eight miles from Belleville the plough struck a heavy drift and left the track, turning completely around, and the engine followed, turning over on its side.

Driver Ormond was scalded and had his scalp nearly torn off. His collar bone was broken and he had a finger badly lacerated.

The wreck was cleared away within a few hours. The engine and plow were badly wrecked.

THE C.P.R.'S BLOCK SYSTEM.

"To a great extent," said a C. P. R. official, in speaking of the late accidents, "we use the block system, and while it is not insisted upon on all occasions in storms such as we had last week the rule is observed religiously.

"You see, where two trains are running the same way the second is held at one station until the first passes the next. For instance, two trains coming in past the Junction, one would be held there until notice had been received that the other had passed Parkdale, and so on along the whole line.

"Of course where trains are late, stations far apart, and the weather fine it is not necessary to do this, but as a rule we find it better to be on the safe side if it does lose us a little time"

IN BETTER SHAPE.

The railroads are in better shape today than at any time since the beginning of the blizzard.

The main line of the C. P. R., between Montreal and Detroit, is all clear; the express from the east was only half an hour late, and that from the west a trifle over an hour.

The branches, however, are not in such good shape, both the Teeswater and Fergus lines being still snow-bound. They will likely be cleared some time today.

Very little freight of any kind is moving.

BLOCKED UP NORTH.

The Allandale train is blocked at Allandale and the snow plow is at work clearing out the cuts this side of that place. It is uncertain when the road will be all right again.

The Stouffville train on the Midland branch has been cancelled. She is at Toronto and the branch is blocked. The regular Midland trains are running as usual, however.

As on the C.P.R., no freight is yet being handled on the G.T.R.

STILL THEY SMASH.

TILSONBURG, Ont., Feb. 11.—On Saturday morning the B. and T. train, in charge of Conductor Miller and Engineer Pitt, got stuck in a snow drift while backing to the Junction. The engineer on the air line express unhooked and came down to assist. Thinking the snow was deeper than it really was, the engineer put on too much steam and ran into Pitt's train.

The collision telescoped the rear coach and damaged the engine, so that both trains were delayed until noon. The only person who was in any way injured was the road-master, who was thrown off by the shock, and sustained some slight injuries.

In the final with Lakefield, Peterborough won by 8 and will now go to Toronto for the trophy series.—Bobcaygeon Independent.

A Midnight Fire.

A one-storey rough cast cottage on College street, owned by Mrs. Ormond, and untenanted, was burned down at one o'clock this morning.

Remember the Charity Carnival Ball, Tuesday, February 12th.

Driver and Fireman Injured.

The east bound train Saturday night, on which was Sir Mackenzie Bowell and his colleagues, was side tracked for about 12 hours, owing to an accident east of Trenton. It appears the snow plow special sent eastward from Belleville in charge of Driver Ormond went off the track near Murray Hill, having encountered a very heavy snow bank. Ormond had his collarbone broken and was badly hurt internally, the engine was completely stripped and the line blocked. A wrecking train was sent out from Belleville as soon as the news of the accident was received, but the track was not cleared until 4 p.m. today. The train from Montreal due in Toronto Sunday morning was 13 hours late on account of the accident, and the extraordinary depth of snow in the cuttings.

OUT IN THE COLD

Was an Infant Left on a Doorstep in Cobourg.

About midnight on Wednesday, some heartless woman deposited a female child about four months old on the doorstep of a well known resident, of King street east. The little one was taken in and the Chief of Police notified, who at once took charge of the infant and placed it in care of a party who will give the child the best of attention.

The child is rather pretty, has bright blue eyes, and was neatly and comfortably clad in white woollen, and was wrapped in a white woollen shawl, and wore a white hood of the same material, but nothing by which the identity of the child's parents could be discovered. From indications it is thought the child was brought from out of town, but by whom is at present unknown.

The woman that committed the heartless act wore a No. 5 rubber, and was plainly traced from the house to the street, after which the footprints were lost. The night was bitter cold, and if the doorbell had not been promptly answered it is likely that the little waif would have been frozen to death.

The child is a fine, healthy one, quite cheerful and apparently does not miss its parents. The chief will use every effort to discover the party who was guilty of deserting the child, and if found it is likely severely punishment will be dealt out. Nothing is too harsh for the person who would commit such a cruel act.—Post.

A Metal Breadboard

THE WOMAN WHO HAS BEEN USED to kneading dough on the old fashioned wooden breadboard knows what a bother it is to get them clean and how cumbersome and heavy they are. When they begin to crack or check it is almost impossible to thoroughly cleanse them, and they may easily become dangerous conveyances of disease. It was left for a woman, of course, to remedy this state of affairs, and Mrs. M. M. Everhard, of St. Joseph, Mich., has patented a metal bread board, which is one of the greatest labor-savers imaginable. It is light, does not absorb grease, dough does not adhere to it, and while it possesses all the advantages of the marble bread-board it is much cheaper and, of course, far lighter and easier to handle. If readers want to confer a favor upon their wives that will be forever appreciated, let them send $1 to the manufacturers, 161 Bay street, Toronto, for one of these boards.

LA GASCOGNE ARRIVES.

The Machinery Fails Four Times—Heavy Weather Experienced and One Boat Damaged—Passengers all in the Good Health.

Special to the Times.

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—La Gascogne is safe. The big French liner eight days' overdue dropped anchor at the bar just before midnight, all well on board and a sigh of relief goes up from two continents. The delay was due to a broken piston rod and to the terrific gales which have swept the North Atlantic for the past week or more and brought disaster to many a staunch craft. Capt. Baudelin and the officers and crew of La Gascogne brought the ship and passengers through the gales, and made port without help. From the time they left Havre on Jan. 26th until today they spoke to no trans-Atlantic steamers and saw only a four-masted schooner the one which reported at St. Pierre, Miquelon, as having seen a large steamer off the banks, apparently in distress last Saturday. The United Press tug Dalzell with representatives of the Times, Tribune and Recorder on board was the first tug to reach La Gascogne. The disabled steamer had left Fire Island 25 miles astern and was eight miles to the eastward of Sandy Hook lightship. It was 9.45 p.m. The big liner was limping into port at half speed, with two big red lights as signals of distress at the foremast. The tug lay along side half an hour and the following story of the trip was obtained.

INCIDENTS OF THE VOYAGE.

The steamer left Havre on January 26. On the first day out 449 miles were logged; on the second day, 407 miles; on the third day, after travelling 380 miles, the piston rod broke, and eighteen hours were spent in making the repairs. When they were completed the ship steamed at 9 miles an hour, making in all 66 miles on the 29th. On the 30th, 31st and February 1st, respectively, 215, 255 and 290 miles a day were made. On February 2nd the piston rod broke down again. The break was more serious this time. Sea anchors were put out, and for forty-one hours the ship was hove to making repairs. On the 4th the first severe weather was experienced, and the ship was blown 150 miles out of her course. On the 5th, the repairs having been completed 103 miles were made. The ship was then clear to the northward of the track of trans Atlantic steamers, and was not therefore seen by the many steamers which passed over the regular track. On February 6th 169 miles were made. On the 7th the machinery broke down for the third time. The

HEAVY CYCLONE STRUCK HER

on that day, and the ship lay hove-to with sea anchors out all day. No headway was made, and owing to the action of the ship, repairs were difficult. On the next day the chief engineer, who had been at his post day and night, completed the repairs and the ship proceeded 131 miles. On the 8th, for the fourth time, the machinery broke down and only 74 miles were made. On the 10th 151 miles were made and today, to the great rejoicing of all on board, Fire Island was sighted, and the ship crept up to her anchorage off the bar. The United Press tug was received with loud cheers by the anxious passengers. They crowded to the rail, cheered and clapped their hands with all the enthusiasm of the French race. The officers refused to allow anyone on board and would not come to the rail to talk. The passengers were more obliging. Julius Matagrin, a representative of the glove firm of Perrin, Freres & Co., of Paris and New York, was interviewed over the side of the ship. He said: "We broke down on third day out. We didn't become alarmed, as we did not know very much about what was the matter. The captain said it was all right, and we had confidence in him. Our first experience with gales was on February 4. We had

"Was anything carried away?"

"No; the ship stood it well. We had plenty of provisions, and fared first-rate. We were blown away off our course, and spoke to no steamers until yesterday, when we saw an American liner bound for Philadelphia." A crowd of men passengers leaned over the bulwarks, and one of the women wrapped up in sea togs, joined them in their eager quest for news from shore. So eager were they, indeed, that it was difficult to secure an answer to the questions that were hurled at them from the tug. A copy of an American newspaper was thrown aboard and in acknowledgment Jules Matagrin threw his card weighted to a heavy substance. On the back of it was

A COPY OF THE LOG.

They said they had been given plenty to eat and except for the number of times the sun rose and set they would not have known that anything was wrong. All particulars of the accidents to the machinery were kept from the passengers, but the daily bulletins of the knots made told the story. Beyond the tediousness of the voyage the passengers positively suffered no inconvenience. Although the derangement of the machinery occurred on the third day it was not until the ninth day that the steamer ran into bad weather. From the time La Gascogne struck the cyclone she was a little worse off than if she had been in prime running order.

A MUCH DELAYED TRIP.

Two Nights and a Day Spent in Going from Toronto to Ottawa.

Special to the Times.

OTTAWA, Feb. 12.—Sir Mackenzie Bowell and Sir C. H. Tupper reached the city this morning after a very trying journey. The C.P.R. train leaving Toronto Saturday night being cancelled, they left via the G.T.R. and spent two nights and a day in their private car on the road. From about 1 a.m. Sunday until about 11 a.m. they lay over at Brighton, and long waits of several hours' duration occurred at Murray's Hill and Brookville.

This morning a deputation waited on Reeve O'Meara, of the outlying suburb of Hintonburg, and offered him one of the Conservative nominations in Ottawa city. It is said that Mr. Taylor McVeity and he are to run on one ticket, conducting a joint campaign. This would, the Conservatives think, effectively refute the charge that Mr. McVeity is a P.P.A. man, as O'Meara is a Catholic.

The Premier in Ottawa.

OTTAWA, Feb. 12.—Premier Bowell and Sir Hibbert Tupper returned to the city this morning from Toronto. They left Toronto on the nine o'clock Saturday night and were detained by the snow blockade.

BADLY SCORCHED.

A Seventeen Thousand Dollar Fire in Harrow an Essex County Village.

HARROW, Ont., Feb. 12.—About 12.30 last night fire broke out in the Rosebrugh block, the family barely escaping with their lives. The fire spread to Wright's barber shop, which was also destroyed, and from there to the general store of James A. Straith & Co. Mr. Manning, the manager, who lives above the store, saved practically nothing but what he had on his back.

The fire then spread to Jos. Wright's store, also burning a brick residence adjoining.

The estimated losses are: James A. Straith & Co., $10,000; B. Wright, $5,000; F. Rosebrugh, store and residence, $3,000; I. E. Webster, tailor, $200; J. S. Wright, store and residence, $2,500; F. C. Manning, $1,000.

Insurance—J. A. Straith & Co., $3,500; B. Wright, $300; F. Rosebrugh, $1,000; I. E. Webster, none; J. S. Wright, $1,800; F. C. Manning, $500.

Harrow is a town on the Detroit River and Lake Erie railroad, about ten miles from Windsor.

FROM THE QUEEN CITY.

THE NEWS OTTAWA CORRESPONDENT SPEAKS OF DISSOLUTION.

The Cabinet to Discuss It on Saturday—John Monahan Lying at Death's Door—Victims of the Wreck.

Special to the Times.

TORONTO, Feb. 12.—The News Ottawa correspondent telegraphs as follows: Your correspondent learns, upon authority which can be traced directly to the Premier himself, that the question of a dissolution and the date of an election will not be settled until Saturday, when a full Cabinet meeting will be held.

No meeting of the Council was held yesterday, nor has one been called for today.

AT DEATH'S DOOR.

John S. Monahan is lying at St. Michael's Hospital between life and death. He spent a quiet night, but little sleep came to him. This morning he is extremely weak, and while his physicians say that he is not suffering much pain, it is believed that his terrible internal injuries are gradually driving out his life.

He may possibly survive the day, but it is hardly probable that he will live more than a dozen hours.

For 16 years Mr. Monahan has been a member of the reporting staff of the High Court of Justice, having come to Canada from Ireland about twenty years ago. He is a nephew of the late Chief Justice Monahan of Ireland and has other distinguished relations in the Emerald Isle. The injured man is an Irish Roman Catholic and a member of St. Basil's parish. He is receiving every possible attention at St. Michael's, and nothing will be left undone to save his life. He has a wife and five children, his mother also being one of his family.

MAINWARING DOING NICELY.

Engine Driver Mainwaring, who was injured in the smashup at Weston, is doing nicely at the General Hospital. He may recover.

AN ABSCONDER'S FATE.

One of the Victims of the Elbe—His Identity Proven.

Special to the Times.

LOWESTOFT, Feb. 12.—A man who attended the inquest on the body of one of the passengers of the Elbe, supposed to be that of Edward Mushkowitz, declared himself to be the real Edward Mushkowitz, and said that the body was that of a man named Guttmann, his brother-in-law, who had absconded from Buda Pest, taking the witness' passport, cards, etc., and securing a second cabin passage to New York.

Guttman, who was accompanied by his brother Adolf and his sister, lost 300,000 gulden in Bourse speculations and made good his losses with the funds of a company of which he was a director. Guttman's sister had booked as "Estelle Golder," and she had 16,000 gulden sewn in her dress when drowned.

The coroner's jury expressed themselves as satisfied with Mushkowitz evidence.

ANOTHER VICTIM.

Mrs. Percy Dies From Smallpox—The Blockade Raised.

Special to the Times.

ST. THOMAS, Feb. 12.—Dr. Hodgins, assistant to Dr. Bryce, who has been in the district of Malahide, infected with smallpox, is in the city en route to Toronto. He states that the strictest quarantine has been established, and believes the disease is under control. The second death took place Saturday night. Mrs. H. Percy, whose husband died a couple of weeks ago from the disease, being the victim.

The railroads entering here have recovered from the snow blockade, and trains are running nearly on time. The C.P.R. noon train arrived an hour and a half late, the first train arriving on that road since saturday morning.

A TRIBE SLAUGHTERED

Gold Diggers Arrested for an Awful Crime.

SYDNEY, N. S. W., Feb. 12.—A despatch from Perth, West Australia, says: Seven men have been arrested in Coal Gardie for massacreing an entire native tribe, including women and children. The men had gone out gold seeking, and were encamped near the village of the tribe which they are accused of exterminating. They say that they acted in self-defence as the natives menaced their lives.

DRIVEN TO SUICIDE.

An Arkansas Cashier Prefers Death to Exposure.

Special to The Times.

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark., Feb. 12.—J. L. Dickson, formerly cashier of the McIlroy Banking Company of this city, committed suicide last night by taking poison. Dickson had recently been discharged from the bank, and an investigation of his accounts showed that he was a defaulter to the amount of $21,000. Fear of prosecution drove him to suicide.

Fatality at Prescott.

PRESCOTT, Ont., Feb. 12.—There was a fatal accident at J. P. Wiser's & Sons distillery today. Francis Pigeon, one of the oldest employees of the firm, accidentally met his death by falling into a water tub. The Coroner's jury returned a verdict of accidental death.

GRAND TRUNK RED TAPE.

COMMERCIAL TRAVELLERS AND PASSENGERS ARE INDIGNANT.

A Strong Letter From the Passengers in the Agincourt Disaster—How the G.T.R. Cares For the Public.

From The Evening Telegram.

SIR,—We, the undersigned commercial travellers and passengers, of Toronto, request you to publish the following brief facts regarding the disastrous pitch-in on the Midland division of the G.T.R. near Agincourt on the 8th inst.:—

We left Blackwater Junction, where we had lunch, shortly before one o'clock at noon and proceeded to Uxbridge, where we were detained for over two hours, pending the arrival of the snowplow from Lindsay, which then preceded the passenger train. All went well until after we had passed Unionville. Up to this time the passenger train had been held at one station until the snowplough had been reported as having passed the next station. We had left Unionville believing this plan of procedure to be still governing our movements, and consequently that the snowplough was safe on the other side of Agincourt, until at 5.45 p. m., about two miles north of Agincourt, travelling at the rate of 15 miles per hour, we overtook the plough and the terrible disaster occurred, and through the

of someone valuable lives were sacrificed and untold suffering brought to many an innocent one; and had it not been for the noble efforts and determined fight of some of the passengers many more of the train hands who were imprisoned under the debris must have perished and the cars, which had taken fire from the overturned stoves, been destroyed.

It is not necessary, however, to again go over the details of the heartrending scene. But that the public may know how the passengers were repaid for their magnificent services rendered to the burning cars, we desire to have published the following facts:

The disaster occurred about 2½ miles north of Agincourt. Conductor Boundy at once sent a man to the rear to protect our train, with all the signals at his command and himself started to walk to Agincourt to report the accident to headquarters and procure medical aid. In the meantime the wounded were carried into the mail car, where they were made as comfortable as circumstances would permit. In about two or three hours Dr. Sisley, of Agincourt, arrived, having walked the distance in the face of that terrible storm, and did all he could, but was not able to do much more than had already been done for the sufferers, but sent word back to Agincourt to telegraph the particulars to headquarters, advising that the wounded be sent to the hospital as quickly as possible. Between two and three o'clock in the morning two engines with equipment for removing the debris arrived, but with nothing to render assistance to the wounded or relieve the condition of the benighted passengers. Dr. Walters, of York, came on this train, which got within a few hundred yards of the wreck. Between twelve and one o'clock Saturday, Dr. Walters telegraphed to send a special to take in the wounded, and at 2.15 p.m. a special left York for that purpose. Arriving at Agincourt, the conductor announced to the passengers that he had instructions only to bring in the injured. The passengers, however, could not see why, after having been kept waiting for nearly 24 hours, they should be left to wait, it might be another five or ten hours, when there was plenty of room for all on the train and requested the agent to telegraph for instructions to allow all passengers to go, which he very

PROMPTLY REFUSED TO DO.

We then hunted up the conductor and demanded that he wire for further instructions, stating that we were determined to go on that train. The conductor then went to the agent and got him to wire for instructions, and word arrived to bring all passengers. The special then proceeded to the wreck and took on the injured and other passengers, and returned to the station picked up and left for Toronto, arriving between 25 and 30 minutes after leaving Agincourt.

Early in the afternoon some of the commercial travellers asked the agent to telegraph our condition to Mr. Webster at Allandale, superintendent of that division, but this he refused to do until he was handed 62 cents, the price of the telegram, and then not until we threatened to send the message via the C. P. R. Whether or not we cannot tell, but we did not receive any reply to said message. In the meantime we were anxious to get word of our welfare to our families in Toronto, and one or two travellers handing him messages of less than 10 words he demanded the sum of 50 cents each for forwarding same. We then walked a distance of about half a mile, and sent our messages to Toronto, for which we were charged twenty-five cents per message. Apparently no effort was made by the Grand Trunk officials to provide us with food, and had it not been for the kindness of Messrs. John Wood, W. Oliver, John Keat, W. A. Kennedy, L. Kennedy, Samuel Kennedy and J. L. Patterson, farmers in the vicinity, and Rev. Mr. Brown, Presbyterian clergyman at Agincourt, we would not have had anything to eat from the time we left Blackrock, about 1 o'clock Friday and 7 o'clock Saturday, when we reached Toronto, with the exception of some bread and butter which Conductor Boundy brought in about midnight on Friday.

A TELEGRAM REPORTER

drove out to the scene, leaving Toronto at 11 a.m. and arriving at 1.30 p.m. on Saturday, showing that the roads were not in the condition represented. Compare the treatment we received with that accorded to the passengers at Weston. On our train were no high officials of the road, nor judges, nor legal luminaries, but we were human beings, if we were only commercial travellers.

Too much praise cannot be given to the farmers above mentioned, and Rev. Mr. Brown for their great kindness to us. Conductor R. Boundy, too, made up in kindly attention what the agent at Agincourt and the officials lacked. We would like to know why we were left in this condition within 14 miles of Toronto, for 24 hours, when the road was not blocked?

The Times.

PETERBOROUGH, FEBRUARY 12, 1895.

Good morning!

The cold was so intense last week that the Chief of Police was compelled to take the street cars to and from his home.

Ex-queen Lil of Hawaii talks of going to the United States. It's getting entirely too warm for her in the little republic where she formerly was the reigning queen. What will Cleveland do when he gets queen Lil and congress both on his hands?

In consequence of the snow blocade last Saturday the Toronto papers did not reach Peterborough until Monday. THE TIMES, however, supplied all the news, and so completely filled the bill that the absence of the large city papers was scarcely felt. The fact is this journal is fast approaching the dignity of a leading provincial daily newspaper.

Typewriting by the piece cost at least 50 per cent. here more than in Great Britain. The best women typewriters in New York, those who have little offices of their own, work with remarkable care and accuracy. They are feeling the current hard times, however, and though schedule rates have not been reduced, there is much less work to be done, and some of the boss typewriters, so to speak, have reduced the number of their assistants.

The smallest conscript in France last year was Lucien Mathey, of Asnieres, who was exactly seventy-five centimetres, or about thirty inches high. This year the record has been beaten by a young man in the department of the Seine, who is a centimetre shorter. When his father called at the recruiting office with him to inscribe his name, the clerks thought it was a joke, but the proper documents were produced to show that the youth was over twenty years of age.

Councillor Mills proposes to place the police force outside the jurisdiction of the ratepayers. He evidently does not believe that the people who pay these men should have any authority over them. This is a mistake, and Mr. Mills may discover that the ratepayers in his ward will resent it next January, should they have an opportunity of doing so. We believe that special legislation will be required to place the force under the control of commissioners, and it is absurd to suppose the town will ask for a special act of Parliament even to oblige Mr. Roezel.

Edward Blake has incurred the wrath of the Healeyite faction of the Irish party for having indiscretely announced that the party had accepted $10,000 from a prominent member of the Liberal party. "That preposterous Canadian importation, Blake," is the uncomplimentary way Harold Frederic, the London correspondent and a close friend of Mr. Healey refers to our Edward. Why Mr. Healey and his friends are angry is not hard to discover. Last session the London Times charged that prominent Liberals were contributing to the funds of the Irish party, and thus purchasing its support. The accusation was strenuously denied by the Irishmen, and the house of commons passed a resolution censuring the Times for its supposed foundationless charge. And now the question will be re-introduced into the house as a matter of privilege; the truth of the Times' statement may have to be admitted and the censure of the Times withdrawn. The Nationalists don't object to receive money from their Liberal allies; what they object to is that it should be known that they accept it.

THE GENERAL ELECTIONS.

The Ottawa Citizen, which is more closely in touch with the government of the day than any other newspaper in Canada outside of the Mail, confirms the statement that nothing is yet settled regarding the next elections. Now that the Ministers are back in Ottawa, however, it is likely that some decision will be reached in the course of a few days. That a general election is likely to be held before another session seems probable. No preparations for another session have been made, and the members of the Cabinet have been spending their time going about the country telling everybody what a fine thing the N.P. is. If that does not mean an early election, what does it mean?

The fact of the matter is that the Ministry is all at sixes and sevens on this question. The Quebec members are clamoring for another session. They want the sessional indemnity and there is good reason for believing that they want a gerrymander in Quebec. The Ontario members, however, would prefer to have the elections come off first. The fear is expressed that the business depression may get worse instead of better, so that to postpone the elections will bring them on at a time when people will be blaming the Government because they are not all as rich as Croesus and as happy as clams at high tide, just as if governments could make everybody wealthy.

At all events these are the two sides of the penny and it is a matter for speculation as to which will be uppermost when the coin ceases spinning. Probably the elections be held first. In addition to the reasons for following this course noted above, is the fact that the Manitoba school question can be staved off for a time if immediate dissolution is decided on, whereas a session would force it to the front and make matters awkward for the politicians on both sides of the fence. As a rule politicians are not any too eager for embarrassing questions to deal with.

IT WAS MURDER.

It is folly to say that the storm was responsible for Friday's disaster. Stormy weather is a condition that has to be reckoned with in the operation of railways in this country. The Grand Trunk ought either to cancel all trains when the weather ceases to be fine or else run its trains under a system that will ensure the safety of pasengers.

Did the storm compel the Grand Trunk management to send the London train out From Brampton before the arrival of the Chicago train had been reported from Weston? The idea of allowing trains to run even in fair weather on a single track with only ten minutes between them is monstrous. But to send one train out from Brampton in a snowstorm and then send another after it before the track was clear to Weston was a crime.

Perhaps all might have been well if there had been no storm. The signals would have been seen and the disaster averted. Why trust to signals or subject precious lives to the chances of the wet weather? To send trains out one after the other, in the hope that if the front train is disabled or delayed, its crew will protect their train by signals is to gamble on probabilities wit human lives as the stakes. The simple expedient of keeping the second train at Brampton until the first train had reached Weston would have rendered the accident impossible. The Grand Trunk Railway Company has trifled with life when it embodies its happy-go-lucky methods in regulations that permit trains to follow on a single track under ten minutes, headway, and the authorities who make and maintain such regulations ought to be placed on their trial for manslaughter.

ENNISMORE ITEMS.

UNIQUE COUNCIL.—Ennismore can boast of having the most unique Council in the county. As a result of the municipal election, they had five councillors, and that is one more than there is in any of the adjoining townships. The Reeve called a meeting for Monday 4th, and there appeared on the scene five duly qualified councillors, consequently by order of the Reeve, the meeting was adjourned until the difficulty is settled. We understand the dispute is between John Moloney and James Scollard, Mr. Moloney has taken legal proceedings against Mr. Scollard, and it is likely it will be settled in court.

MISCHIEVOUS ACT.—One night last week Mr. F. Crough left a load of wood standing on his sleigh, ready for an early start for town the following morning. Some mischievous persons run the sleigh a distance down the road and upset the wood in the ditch. Mr. Crough lodged a complaint before Police Magistrate Edminson, against the parties, and they may be made to suffer for their pranks.

THE CHINESE FLEET AT WEI HAI WEI IS CAUGHT IN A TRAP.

The Peace Negotiations—The Chinese Ambassadors in Japan Have Been Accorded Full Powers to Negotiate for Peace.

Special to the Times.

LONDON, Feb. 11.—The Central News correspondent in Pekin telegraphs that the Chinese Government is consulting with the foreign diplomatists concerning the new powers to be exercised by the peace envoys to Japan. The Central News correspondent in Tokio has these details of the recent fighting at Wei Hai Wei: On the night of January 30th the Japanese torpedo fleet entered the bay at Wei Hai Wei, but the Japanese on the western forts, supposing that the boats were from the Chinese squadron, opened a heavy fire and compelled them to withdraw. January 31st, was raw and blustering. Toward evening it snowed heavily. The warships, their guns and the torpedo boats were coated with ice five inches thick, and were at too great disadvantage to venture an attack. The second attempt upon the Chinese was deferred, therefore until the night of Feb. 2nd, when an advance for the torpedoes was ordered. The Chinese were on the watch, however, and discovered the Japanese in time to give general warning. The torpedo fleet was forced to withdraw without approaching the Chinese squadron. Feb. 3rd was passed in preparations for another attack. On the night of Feb. 4th the Chinese were less vigilant than formerly. The Japanese torpedo boat Ming Ling stole in upon the Chinese fleet and while entirely unobserved launched two torpedoes at the Ling Yuen. The big ironclad began to go down almost immediately [illegible]. The Ming Ling lost eight [illegible] other torp[illegible] the attack and two [illegible] on rocks or [illegible]. On the night of the 5th one Japanese boat approached the Chinese fleet and launched seven torpedoes, sinking two warships and a gunboat.

The correspondent in Tokio says that the Chinese still hold forts on the island of Liu Kung Tau.

On the 6th the Japanese made an unsuccessful attack upon the [illegible] forts. On the approach the [illegible] and [illegible] Japanese [illegible] with [illegible], but the [illegible] Of the forts captured by the Japanese at Wei Hai Wei, the western group is [illegible] and the eastern group is in [illegible] and is armed throughout with excellent guns, which are of great use to the Japanese marines.

From Wei Hai Wei the Times has this despatch, dated February 4th: Sixteen Chinese warships and 12 torpedo boats are in the harbor and escape. Some have come close to shore to attempt to land their crews and let them escape, but the Japanese drove them off. Gen. Oderra and a Japanese war correspondent were killed. The Japanese troops are in good health and under strict discipline.

PARIS, Feb. 11.—The European edition of the Herald publishes a despatch, dated February 8, from its agent with the first Japanese army. He gives the strength and positions of the Chinese forces in Manchuria as follows:

Lenchankwan	80,000
Liaoyang and Iraho	19,000
Moukden	12,000
Yin Kootsu and Chwang Tai	54,000

There are only 80,000 Japanese troops in the field.

LONDON, Feb. 11.—A despatch to the Pall Mall Gazette from Hiroshima says:—"The official report made by Admiral Ito says the Japanese lost no boats or men during the night attack at Wei Hai Wei on Feb. 5, but on Feb. 4 the enemy struck and sunk a torpedo boat, killing all on board. Another boat, in returning after having exploded a torpedo against a Chinese ship, ran into some obstruction at the entrance to the harbor and was badly damaged and practically sunk under the enemy's fire. A Japanese lieutenant and two men were frozen to death."

A despatch to the Pall Mall Gazette from Che-Foo, under the date of February 9, says the Liu Kang Tau forts are still making some reply to the assaults of the Japanese.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—Secretary Herbert has received the following cable message from Admiral Carpenter, dated Chin-Kian, February 2:—"The Japanese have taken possession of Wei Hai Wei to-day. Three vessels of the Chinese fleet sunk in harbor by torpedoes. The Charleston has left to day for the purpose of going to the rescue of the distressed people beyond Hedg Chow."

LONDON, Feb. 11.—Despatches from various parts of the continent show that weather of unusual severity still prevails. The river Seine from beyond Paris to its source is entirely frozen over.

TALK UNITED STATES

THE AMERICAN LANGUAGE COMPARED WITH THE ENGLISH.

A London Publication Calls Attention to the Difference In the Names Applied to Ordinary Articles—With Some Exceptions We "Speak United States."

"I am free, white, 21, and I speak United States," is the modern declaration of independence of every native adult American citizen.

The traveled American—everything by turns and nothing long—who aims at cosmopolitanism and invariably misses the target altogether, and the naturalized creature of indefinite origin, may not proclaim for "United States," but they adopt it all the same, in deference to the subtle power politicians call the vis major.

The American language used to be English, of course—English pure and simple, if English ever was either pure or simple—but it has prospered on its own account, like other things American, and now the English language is being Americanized, like the English nobility, and its vivacity is considerably benefited by the process.

That English is still the basis of "United States" the most thoroughbred American will not deny—the thoroughgoing American never denies facts, the game not being worth the candle, and he never plays games in the dark. The language is the same, with a difference, and in that lies the root of the matter and this article, for though London and New York speak a common, very common, Anglo-Saxon, if we forget for the moment the veneer of French, Latin, Greek and other languages with which it has been polished, yet the meaning of many words, from which language derives its significance, is considerably [illegible] and altered in their passage across the Atlantic, and they become nearly if not quite as unintelligible as the cockney would find the dialect of a Northumberland village.

Thus, if a Londoner is fortunate enough to cross the Atlantic and be introduced to a city which has not been discolored by smoke, a sun which has not been dimmed by fog and an atmosphere which the powers have not forgotten to dry and is as stimulating as champagne, but is unfortunate enough to have to buy a frock coat—a most expensive article—or to order one—as a rule, quite a different matter—he must call it "a Prince Albert."

Prince Albert coat it is in republican America, whatever it may be in monarchical England, where "Albert the Good" is occasionally remembered when the anniversary of his death comes round.

If he wants a billycock hat, he will never get it if he asks for it by that name. He must request the shopman to bring him a derby.

Should the coverings of his feet be worn out and he orders a new pair of boots, he will be given Wellingtons, which are "boots" in the American language. If he wants English boots, he must ask for "shoes," while if he likes to show pretty socks and wears Oxford shoes he must call for "ties," or "low cuts," and "slippers" if he needs pumps.

He will find, too, that he does not buy articles in a shop, but at a "store," and he will be sent to the different departments by a "floorwalker," not a shopwalker.

If he would travel in the city, and he desires to use the most derided of New York's public conveyances, which luckily for those whose time is valuable ply only up and down aristocratic Fifth avenue, he must forget that such an abomination as an omnibus ever existed and hail a "stage," while if he wishes to go by or talk about what he would at home call a tram he must be careful to say "surface car" or "street car," for trams have no existence in the American vocabulary. If, further, he would, when in Rome, do what Rome does, let him forswear the use of railway until he returns home and train himself to say "railroad," and let him never forget that he walks on the "sidewalk," not on the pavement.

Should he unfortunately happen to get ill, let him boldly declare that he "feels sick," entirely heedless of what he would be understood to mean home, or it will be taken that he is nauseated, for the words sick and ill mean just the reverse of what they signify in London, and if his doctor gives him a prescription let him not ask to be directed to a chemist, or he will be sent off to a manufacturer of chemicals, if any one knows the address of such a firm, but let him seek for a "pharmacy" or "drug store."

Instead of a draper's shop he will find a "dry goods store," and if he desires to go to one of the upper floors he will take the "elevator," though, as is so frequently the case, the reverse is the truth, for he will certainly not discover a lift, while, if his wife has requested him to buy her some hairpins, hooks and eyes, cottons or other small articles, he will find them at the "notion counter."

As, being a stranger, he will not have his own carriage, he will, if he wants a drive, "ride" in a "wagon," which is not a cart for carrying packages, but a very comfortable, light, open vehicle, or else in a "buggy," an equally light conveyance with a hood, but open at the sides. If he prefers a single horse brougham, he will do well to call it a "coupe," and if he asks for a "carriage" he will get a Victoria with a pair of horses.

In the evening he will naturally go to the theater, but he must be careful to ask for "orchestra seats" if he wants stalls, while if his tastes are not for drama proper, and he prefers a music hall entertainment, he should invite his friend to go to a "variety show."

If a play is advertised as a "farce comedy," and he imagines he will see a farcical comedy, he will be doomed to disappointment, for a farce comedy is only an alleged play in which the characters are taken by variety show "artists" who introduce their "specialties"—song and dance—in season and out of season. In other words, it is cousin german to a music hall entertainment without the diversity in the programme.

In its pronunciation United States is a law unto itself, and if the aforesaid Londoner gets "busted" or wants employment as a clerk let him not call himself a "clark," for people will open their eyes at his peculiar occupation, and let him also remember that he wears a derby hat, not a darby.

Above all, let him avoid as he would a plague the nasal twang which passes current for the American accent on the London stage unless he hankers after being mistaken for a denizen of the "wild and woolly west," or as hailing from Oshkosh or Kalamazoo, both of which places, in spite of a popular belief to the contrary, will be found on the map of the country over which the stars and stripes float and the baldheaded eagle screams.—London Saturday Review.

FROM THE MILKMAN.

IT'S A GOOD THING, HE SAYS, THAT THE FLUID IS WATERED.

Otherwise It Would Have a Tendency to Make People Bilious—Why He Has No Scruples Whatever About Diluting It. Frank Admissions.

Of course we do and don't make any bones about telling it right out straight. People generally get it upright about our pure milk from Soho farm. It's the purest milk on earth—the milk that is in it—and Ridgewood water won't hurt anybody. I knew an old soaker once who persisted in swearing that water was unhealthy because it rotted shoes and everything, rusted iron and all that, and then he used to look you straight in the eye, screw up one side of his mouth until you thought that corner was going up to his eye without stopping, and clinch his argument by saying, "Just think what a powerful effect water must have on the coating of your stomach!" But that soaker had to drink water, bad as it was for his stomach, when he took a milk punch.

I agree with you that Soho was a queer name for me to choose for my farm in my mind. You see, the way it happened was this: My wife is a bright little woman, and when I told her that all the milkmen were selling milk right fresh from their own farms she hunted around for a fancy name that would take the eye and bring trade. But somehow we could not agree about those cooked up, and we agreed to leave it to a newspaper man I know, and when I told him about it he said, "So, but you're going to have a farm of your own, in your mind." And I caught on right off. I remembered seeing the name on tea caddies when I was in the grocery line, and I clinched it, and ever after that my purest of all milk sold in Brooklyn came from my Soho farm. That's how it was.

Not as long as 20 years ago the milk pump for us milkmen in a certain section of Brooklyn used to be on Kent avenue, near Park, and it was there we all met, after arriving from Jersey City, where in the freight depot were located Echo farm and Soho farm and all the other farms of Orange county, and from this pump, which we at first called our cow, we drew more than half our milk and three-fourths of our fortunes. It was wonderful milk we got there, for if we had been permitted to sell that entirely to our customers it would never have soured, and, being one cow's milk, there would never have been any trouble with the babies, and the mothers would have been delighted. But the milk we got from that pump in Kent avenue, near Park, did not have a milky color, and both fathers and mothers would have soured on it themselves if our fondest hopes could have been realized and we could have gone so far as to have offered the pure spring water at so much a quart. But that wouldn't go, although it was the purest spring water I ever drank and never made me bilious. Some milk will stand more watering than other milk because it is stronger. All milk ought to be diluted, because it is too thick and has a strong tendency to make everybody bilious. That is what I learned from a good Methodist woman named Low, who lived in Flushing when I was a boy and had a few cows whose milk she sold to the neighbors. I never forget what she told me when I came upon her suddenly one day in the cellar of the house to find out what I had to bring her so much water from the well for. She told me it would be un-Christianlike for her to sell such strong and unwholesome milk, which might make all her customers sick, and so she performed a Christian duty by making it half water, and they liked it all the better. And when I got in the milk business I found other good Christians who had the same doctrine, and, if you will believe me, this dilution applies to other things among good Christian brethren as well as heathen dealers in groceries and so on.

I can't say that I ever could countenance making milk out of chalk and spring water, no matter how pure and sparkling the water might be. You see, there is always a sediment from chalk milk, and it is a dead give away, but I have often thought that there might be an extract of milk made so that we might take it and add water to it and call it pure Soho farm milk. This would save a world of trouble and expense and make life easy for the milkman, instead of a burden, as it is now. We wouldn't have to start for Jersey at 11 o'clock at night and milk the pump at 3 in the morning, but we could do all the business in the rear of the store, where we sell our milk, just before we open up for custom in the morning. Another great advantage would be that our cow would never give out, and we could always hand over a good supply of fresh milk from Soho farm and be able to supply even the largest demands of hotels and others. It is not every milkman you come across who would be as honest and truthful as I am to you, but I do not and never did see any harm in softening up the milk a little with water and giving it a lovely baby blue color. I know from an experience of many years that people will not buy and use what is really pure milk, and I leave it to any man who ever sold a quart of milk to back me up in what I say. You can't sell pure milk. I don't suppose it is without any water when we get it at the freight depot in Jersey, and I'm mighty sure people do not get it entirely pure when it is sold at retail unless they ask for it particularly. I've produced it as pure as it came from the cows on the real farms, and people who wanted it or thought they did didn't want any more of it. You see, it is too rich for the stomachs of most people and too rich for the blood of everybody. If customers would do their own watering, that would be another thing, but they don't know how as well as us milkmen.—Milkman in Brooklyn Eagle.

Beets Grown From Buds.

Every grower of beets has noticed the small buds that appear near the top of the root. These are indeed miniature plants, and if cut out and planted, just as potato eyes are, each will next season produce a perfect beet plant with as large a root downward as one grown from seed. It may seem that there can be no practical object in growing beets thus, for it is always easy to grow beet seed, but it is found that when a high grade sugar beet has been secured by sowing strains of the sweetest beets there is a tendency to retrograde in quality. Hence some beet sugar growers in Europe are experimenting in growing from the bud. Having once obtained a root with high per cent of sugar, the quality can be maintained by growing stock from buds. It is possible that this process, if continued long, will tend to establish a growth of beet roots with many prongs and shoots. The form of growth would be objectionable as making the beet less compact.—American Cultivator.

OLD SCOTTISH CURES.

Remedies That Were Recommended in the Days of Auld Lang Syne.

A baldheaded man would hesitate before following Sir John Moncrieff's advice to "make a lee of the burnt ashes of dove's dung and wash the head well," although there is some consolation in learning that the same beneficial results would accrue from using "the ashes of little frogs." The hair, according to this authority, may be changed to a golden tint by using a simple lotion composed of the ashes of the ivy plant. Ladies who sigh for a fair complexion may secure it by such a pleasant method as washing the face with "the distilled water of snails," and the application of "liver of a sheep, fresh and hot," will make the whole face well colored.

Should the nose unfortunately bleed and the familiar remedy of thrusting a bunch of keys down the back of the neck fail of the desired result, then the assured styptic is to put into the nostrils a mixture of the hair of a hare and vinegar. Sir John bears testimony, "I myself know this to be the best of anything known." Blood flowing from a cut may be instantly stanched by simply holding a jasper in the hand or by putting cow's blood into the wound. The reader will be apt to remark that neither of these is a handy remedy for such an emergency. An ointment made of earthworms will cure paralysis if the affected parts be anointed with the compound.

Sleeplessness, so common an ailment in our own time, can be removed, according to Sir John, by applying "living creatures to the head to dissolve the humor," and Sir John narrates that for measles "many keep an ewe or wedder in their chamber or on the bed, because these creatures are easily infected and draw the venom to themselves, by which means some ease may happen to the sick person." In a similar manner, if the trouble be colic, a live duck or frog applied to the part "draws all the evil to itself and dies." Epilepsy may be prevented by wearing a girdle of wolf's skin. Should any one have been so negligent as to omit this necessary precaution, "powder of a man's bones burnt, chiefly of the skull that is found in the earth, cures the epilepsy. The bones of a man cure a man. The bones of a woman cure a woman."

Lethargic individuals should follow the sage Moncrieff's advice: "Burn the whole skin of a hare with the ears and nails. The powder thereof, being given hot, cures the lethargy perfectly." Deafness may be removed by pouring a mixture of onion juice and ants' eggs into the ear, and "the blood of a wild goat given to ten drops of carduus water doth powerfully dissolve the pleurisy."—Gentleman's Magazine.

PECULIAR CHINESE DISHES.

Some of Them Are Palatable, but More of Them Are Not.

Some of the dishes were extremely nice, notably the little shreds of roast mutton, excellently seasoned, such as I learned ever after to call for with confidence at Chinese inns. On the other hand, the chicken was made uneatable, and the eggs on this occasion, I am bound to say, were inexpressibly nasty. The taste for them as eaten in China had need to be acquired no doubt, for I had been told at Vierny of the wonderful pains and expense at which Chinese gourmands preserve their eggs till they are black and putrid, and of which they are as proud when many, many years old as an English squire of his crusted port. I have, moreover, a vague impression, which for the moment I cannot verify, that I somewhere tasted these ancient delicacies and found them good, but on the present occasion my notebook condemns them utterly.

The rissoles of pork sausage were tasty, and so were the French beans, peas and hearts of cabbage stalk cut in slices and the mandarin oranges preserved in sirup. We helped ourselves to these delicacies as we pleased, but our host every now and then with his chopsticks placed on the plate of one or other of his three guests a choice morsel, which, mercifully, it was not a matter of unbending etiquette that one should eat. It was polite, of course, occasionally to return the compliment and help him to tidbits with one's knife and fork.—Philadelphia Times.

Swamp Plants.

It should be well known by this time that swamp plants, as a rule, will do much better in comparatively dry land than in the swamps where we naturally find them. Even the rice plant, which usually grows in water, will grow well and produce a fair crop of seeds in common garden ground. The reason for this has been fully explained in scientific serials. It reads oddly in a report just issued by the United States department of agriculture, suggesting that the common swamp rose mallow, Hibiscus moscheutos, would possibly grow in dry land, as an experiment was made to test this fact on the Delaware river 35 years ago. The plant is growing in every well ordered herbaceous ground and is one of our most popular border plants. It is a weakness of the United States department of agriculture that it is so often behind the times in its publications. One of the best tasks for that department would be to make an index of what has been placed on record in the many serial publications of our country during the last half century. Dr. Franklin B. Hough did something of this work in forestry when he was in this department. It is much to be regretted that such useful work has not been given a broader scope.—Meehan's Monthly.

A Horse Has Little Brains.

The mental peculiarities of the horse are much less characteristic than its physical. It is indeed the common opinion among those who do not know the animal well that it is endowed with much sagacity, but no experienced and careful observer is likely to maintain this opinion. All such students find the intelligence of the horse to be very limited.

Although some part of this mental defect in the horse, causing its actions to be widely contrasted with those of the dog, may be due to a lack of deliberate training and to breeding with reference to intellectual accomplishment, we see, by comparing the creature with the elephant, which practically has never been bred in captivity, that the equine mind is, from the point of view of rationality, very feeble.—Professor N. S. Shaler in Scribner's Magazine.

How She Said Grace.

Little 4-year-old Ida was visiting her aunt. She was always restless at the table during the silent blessing, so her aunt explained to her why they bowed the head and kept quiet before eating. One day little Ida kept unusually quiet during grace. Finally she lifted her little head and looked up in her auntie's face and said: "Aunt Emily, do you know what I was saying? I was saying, 'Beddy, get your hair dyed, hair dyed green.'"—Philadelphia Record.

SEEING LONG DISTANCES.

How Far Away Has the Human Eye Detected Another Object on Earth?

The recent claim of the United States signal service to have transmitted heliograph signals over a distance of 183 miles, and of the United States coast survey and geodetic survey to have beaten that many years since between Mount Helena and Mount Shasta, over 192 miles, has started mountain climbers to make all sorts of guesses and assertions about the distances they ought to see and the distances they do see. It would appear that one of the enthusiastic climbers of Mount Hood, in Oregon, made the statement that from the summit he saw the peak of Mount Shasta, 276 miles to the southward. Of course he was doubted, but principally because the curvature of the earth would prevent the intervisibility of the peaks, and so an appeal was made to a young officer of the United States engineering corps, who computed the distance at which these peaks would be intervisible. Mount Hood is given as 11,758 feet above the sea level and Mount Shasta as 14,440, and the distance on the latest charts is 278½ miles. By his computation the "total visible distance" was 277 miles, which gave "one mile to spare" over his assumed distance of 276 miles, upon which The Oregonian and some of the New York papers have assumed the intervisibility of the peaks, and that the mountain climber was right in his declaration of seeing Mount Shasta.

That is all very pretty, Professor Davidson says, if the ocean intervened between the two peaks, when the line of intervisibility would be tangent to the surface of the sea at a point nearer to Mount Hood, but unfortunately the surface between these two peaks is the backbone of the Cascade range of mountains, and the intervisibility is an absolute physical impossibility. We must turn to Alaska if we expect to obtain the longest lines of intervisibility, because the great mountain peaks like Elias and Logan of the St. Elias range immediately dominate a curving coast line. The greatest authenticated distance at which these great master peaks have been visible from sea was by Captain H. E. Nichols of the United States navy when commanding the United States gunboat Pinta. He was close upon Middleton island, off the approaches to Prince William sound, in a well determined position, when he had a view of Mount Elias to the east northeast and Mount Wrangell to the northward. The former was distant 187 statute miles and the latter 218 miles. It may have been possible that Mount Elias was only part of the mass he saw, and Mount Logan, 20 miles to the north by east from Mount Elias and 19,519 feet elevation, was the summit of the visible mass. In this case the distance was 204 miles.

It may be mentioned that the consensus of opinion of men who have been through Alaska and have seen Mount Wrangell is that the highest mountain mass is just under 62 degrees latitude and between 147 and 148 degrees longitude, or 166 miles west northwest from Wrangell. This would put the unnamed Mount Wrangell, Mount Elias, Fairweather, Cook, Crillon, La Perouse, etc., of the Mount Elias range in one line extending through nearly 800 miles.—San Francisco Bulletin.

Japanese Maidservants.

Now the Chinese or Japanese maidservant is becoming fashionable on account of her picturesque possibilities. If she wears her native dress, she is about as attractive as a $1,500 vase or a rare piece of bric-a-brac. Visitors like to look at her, and consequently the prettier and more graceful the girl the higher wages she can command. Long, narrow eyes, thin, black brows and a clear complexion are the things desired. An oriental girl's hair is always shiny and well arranged, and everything about her is invariably neat. A part of her duties is attendance at the door. This is where the spectacular feature counts. After the ring of the electric bell has died away there is a pattering of slippered feet or the clack of little Japanese wooden stilts, and the door swings back, revealing a small, brilliant figure, with a card tray concealed in the depths of her sleeve or kimono. It is all very fetching.

Another function that the maiden from over the seas is expected to perform is serving 5 o'clock tea. This is peculiarly appropriate and lends an aroma to the beverage. It never seems the same afterward, when a Gretchen, with a face like a platter, or a Hibernian carries the tray. The fad started in New York and has naturally reached its height in San Francisco, where the missions are not able to supply the people who call upon them. The missions, in fact, require references before they will allow their girls to go out. There is too much trouble in rescuing them to have them slip back again, as they are quite likely to do if they are not carefully watched. It will not do to give them the liberties that other serving maids have, for they are like wax in the hands of designing people.—New York Correspondent.

Counterfeit Compliments.

Truth telling people are not so pleasant to spend a quarter of an hour with as flatterers, but they wear better to the end of the 24, writes Mrs. Hamilton Mott in The Ladies' Home Journal. I know a woman who has the art of accidentally saying in conversation the nicest things, things that make you want to put your arm about her or kiss her hand in thanks. You hear her say openly one day that she is fond enough of hearing pretty things not to care whether they are genuine or not, and your folly is not so superlative that you can take much comfort in her favor after that. You come to know the counterfeit, no matter how bright it is.

Tommy's Refreshed Memory.

A number of years ago in the superior court for New London county, Conn., a witness whose first name was Thomas, and who was the son of the plaintiff, testified to a certain important date, and on cross examination, having testified that he refreshed his memory as to the date by a memorandum made at the time, was asked to produce the paper, which he did. The paper was seized by the cross examiner and read aloud. It was as follows: "Tommy, do not forget. It was July 25." The value of Tommy's testimony was destroyed.—Green Bag.

Have the Tables Been Turned?

"I heard one of the waiters say that fossil shells of oysters 6 feet wide had been found in Kansas," remarked the first oyster.

"How we have degenerated!" sighed the other oyster. "By the way, I wonder if they ever served us stuffed with turkeys in those days!"—Cincinnati Tribune.

The lake dwellers of Switzerland, who are believed to be the contemporaries of the Greeks who fought at Troy, had a small grained wheat, apparently much harder than the kind now in use.

MORE CHINESE TORPEDO BOATS SUNK AT WEI HAI WEI.

Earthquake Shocks in Sicily—Panic-Stricken People Take Their Flight to the Fields—Chinese Peace Envoys Ordered Back to Pekin.

Special to the Times.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—The Times correspondent in Wei Hai Wei telegraphs, under date of February 8, that a severe engagement began at 7 o'clock this morning. Several Japanese warships entered the bay from the eastward and three Chinese torpedo boats attempted to escape by the western entrance. The Japanese boats sank them. The 12 remaining Chinese warships have taken up a position at the southeast island. The main Japanese squadron is still outside the harbor. Four Chinese forts on the southeast island maintain an incessant fire.

EARTHQUAKE SHOCK.

ROME, Feb. 12.—Several shocks of earthquake were felt in the Province of Reggio Di Calabria and Sicily today. The people of the town of Palmi fled to the fields, and several houses collapsed in the village of Santanna.

A serious riot occurred in the village of Asria today growing out of the resistance of people to the grain tax. The populace set fire to the tax offices, which were destroyed, and endeavored to throw from the track the Naples express as it passed through the town. The troops were called out and in their collision with the rioters a number were wounded on both sides. A bomb was exploded at a club hall in Massa last evening, shattering the windows but injuring no one.

TO SUE THE LLOYDS.

CLEVELAND, Feb. 12.—John Vevera, one of the survivors of the Elbe, arrived at his home here this morning over the Nickel Plate Railway. A large crowd assembled at the Broadway depot to meet him, and he was given a warm reception. Vevera's lawyer has advised him to sue the steamship company for damages.

REDMOND'S MOTION.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—John Redmond, leader of the Parnellites, brought forward in the Commons today his motion to amend the address by demanding that the government appeal at once to the country inasmuch as they had failed to carry out their Home Rule programme. MISS BOECKER AT OSBORNE.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—After an interview with the Empress Frederick, Miss Boecker was introduced to the Queen and the Duke and Duchess of Connaught. All listened with deep interest to her narrative of the wreck of the Elbe. At the Queen's request she wrote her name in Her Majesty's autograph book. After leaving Osborne she received a souvenir from the Empress Frederick.

SIR RICHARD IN A BOX.

The Knight of the Rueful Countenance Makes a Bad Break at Brantford.

Special to the Times.

BRANTFORD, Feb. 12.—A good deal of dissatisfaction has been expressed with some irresponsible party who, on Friday night last, at the opera house, at the amateur opera of the "Mountebank," put Sir Richard Cartwright in a box and got him to speak at the conclusion of the opera. Sir Richard who was snowbound in the city, made quite a political speech, which was met by mingled applause and hisses. The whole affair is looked upon as a most unfortunate one, but the officers of the musical society fortunately disclaim all knowledge of the doughty knight's visit.

CONDEMNED TO DIE.

A Long Island Colonel Who Sympathised With the Dusky Ex-Queen.

Special to the Times.

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—The Sun this morning publishes the following:—"Col. William T. Seward, condemned to death at Hawaii, formerly lived at Orient, Long Island. It first became known yesterday that the unfortunate Col. Seward at Hawaii is the same William T. Seward who for many years had charge of the extensive Long Beach fish works. He served in the Union Army. A letter was received yesterday by the secretary of the Green Point Masonic Lodge from Mrs. Seward asking that the lodge take some steps in behalf of her unfortunate husband. This interested many of his friends on eastern Long Island and a letter has been sent to James W. Covert and David B. Hill urging them to interest themselves in the matter."

The report of competition in group No. 4 for the Ontario Tankard, arrived last night, showing that North Bay is the winner. The primary competition has thus been completed in all of the 16 groups, and, from the fine feeling existing, we may expect the complete field of 16 winners to take part in the finals to come off next week.

The Times

PETERBOROUGH, FEBRUARY 12 1895.

CITY AND COUNTY NEWS

LOCAL AND DISTRICT HAPPENINGS OF THE DAY.

The Weather.

Probs.—Partly fair; light snow falls; not much change in temperature.

Dr Ryerson Coming.

Dr. G. S. Ryerson, the well known eye, ear and throat specialist, of Toronto, will be at the Grand Central hotel on Saturday, February 16, where he may be consulted by those suffering from any affliction of these organs. Remember the date, Saturday, February 16th.

Mr. Cox, President.

At a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Western Assurance Company held on Saturday last Mr. Geo. A. Cox, Vice-President of the company, was elected to the Presidency, to succeed the late Mr. A. M. Smith, and Mr. J. J. Kenny, Managing Director, was made Vice-President. The vacancy on the board was filled by the election of Mr. J. K. Osborne as director.

To Rebuild Trinity College.

At a largely attended citizens' meeting in Port Hope, the following resolution was passed: Moved by G. M. Furby, seconded by S. Paterson,—That this meeting having learned that Dr. Bethune proposes to at once go on with the school, if a suitable building can be secured, and feeling that some assistance should be given by the town toward paying the rent of such building, is in favor of the Council granting a sum of one thousand dollars for this purpose.

A Desirable Change.

At a recent meeting of the Ontario Fish and Game Commission it was decided to make the deer season the same as it was in [illegible]—from the 1st to the 15th of November—thus cutting out the last 10 days of October. It is proposed also to prohibit duck-shooting till half an hour after sunrise and after half an hour after sunset, so as not to molest the birds during roosting. It was decided to offer a bounty of 30 cents a head for foxes, owing to the damage they inflict on farmers' poultry.

Law With a Vengeance.

Last night a gentleman well known in town, and with a prominent clothing establishment on George street, attended the fancy carnival ball in the opera house in costume. During the evening he left the ball room for a few minutes and stepped out into the street, still wearing his mask. He was immediately collared by Constable Stewart, who marched him over to the Grand Central hotel and tore the mask off his face. Then the brave officer took the mask to headquarters where it was afterwards recovered by its indignant owner. This is another instance of the "efficiency" of Peterborough's police force.

THE BUSINESS WORLD.

Changes and Failures Throughout Ontario.

J. W. Vermilyea, grain, Belleville, has been succeeded by B. Way.

Clark & Vermilyea, grocers, Belleville, have dissolved, J. W. Clark continues.

Joseph Barker, shoes, Brechin, has sold out to R. D. Hill.

D. G. Gray, hats, Brockville, has assigned to Sheriff Smart.

The dry goods stock of L. Wartelsky, Carleton Place, has been sold at 41 1-2 cents on the dollar.

Thos. Hadwin, Kincardine, has assigned to R. M. Hadwin.

The creditors of J. C. Hardy & Co., dry goods, Kingston, will meet on the 19th.

P. A. Skinner, shoes, Niagara Falls, is offering 50 cents on the dollar.

Thomas Wilson, grocer, Oil Springs, is dead.

J. A. McLean & Co., general merchant, Pakenham, have dissolved.

E. P. Goety, hotel keeper, has sold out to Frank Cornell.

Agnes Schumacher, grocer, Paisley, has sold out to Mrs. Willets.

J. S. Macrault & Co., dry goods, Strathroy, has assigned.

R. G. Evans, general store, Woodville, has assigned to James W. Wood.

The creditors of P. A. Skinner, boot and shoe dealer, Niagara Falls, met at W. A. Campbell's office this morning. He made an offer of 60 cents on the dollar, which will probably be accepted.

THE CARNIVAL BALL.

Many Grotesque and Pretty Costumes—Splendid Music.

The opera house last night was coverted into a bower of gay colors by profuse decorations of flags and bunting, that in effect was very pretty. The occasion was the charity carnival ball, the proceeds of which will be used in the dispensation of charity to the deserving poor of Peterborough and the Protestant Home.

The attendance was fairly good, although the affair would have been more successful bad there been more present in costume. However, as those who merely went as onlookers contributed towards the receipts as well as those who participated, a considerable sum of money was raised, and as this was the laudable purpose of the ball, it was, financially speaking, an entire success.

Good music, furnished by the Battalion band and Butcher's orchestra, was a feature that added much to the pleasure and success of the affair. The selections by the former, and the dancing numbers by the latter were well rendered, and very much enjoyed.

The costumes were pretty and grotesque, and some of them were ingenious conceptions, carried into magnificent effect. The scene, as the maskers flitted through the figures of the various dances, was certainly pretty.

During the evening refreshments were served in an adjoining hall, under the supervision of Mr. William Bowman, who catered for the affair.

The maskers unmasked at 12 o'clock. The judging began shortly afterwards. The judges were Mrs. Dr. O'Sullivan, Mrs. George Rubidge and Messrs. R. G. Gough and C. LeBrun. The prize winners were:

Best Dressed Lady—Miss Hay. Costumed as a Hungarian Peasant Lady.

Best Dressed Gentleman—Mr. J. P. Hurley. Costumed as a Turk.

Best Comic Costume—Mr. Fred Logan. Costumed as a Tiger.

CANADIAN IMPOSTOR CAUGHT.

Had a Bad Eye and Presented Petitions Begging for Money

Residents of various villages in Western Ontario have during the past few weeks met a man calling himself William Davey, whose principal distinguishing feature was a cataract in his left eye, almost large enough to run a power house. But William didn't mind the defective eye—in fact, he made money out of it. William has probably visited every town in Ontario, and presented a petition begging for money to aid him in recovering his sight. The petition was in some cases typewritten, in others manuscript.

A search in his pockets brought to light several of his petitions. Two of them were signed "Michael Murphy, Forest, Ont.," and "William McCarroll, Owen Sound, Ont.." Each were started with $25 subscriptions, calculated to bring out the other $25 alleged to be necessary.

Some change has since been made in the route of the canal at this point.

A Metal Breadboard

THE WOMAN WHO HAS BEEN USED to kneading dough on the old fashioned wooden breadboard knows what a bother it is to get them clean and how cumbersome and heavy they are. When they begin to crack or check it is almost impossible to thoroughly cleanse them, and they may easily become dangerous conveyances of disease. It was left for a woman, of course, to remedy this state of affairs, and Mrs. M. M. Everhard, of St. Joseph, Mich., has patented a metal bread board, which is one of the greatest labor-savers imaginable. It is light, does not absorb grease, dough does not adhere to it, and while it possesses all the advantages of the marble breadboard it is much cheaper and, of course, far lighter and easier to handle. If readers want to confer a favor upon their wives that will be forever appreciated, let them send $1 to the manufacturers, 101 Bay street, Toronto, for one of these boards.

INCH BY INCH TO DEATH.

A MALTHOUSE EMPLOYEE DRAWN INTO A CHUTE.

The Wickes' Divorce Case—Miss Gould's Engagement—Canadian Copyright—A Mother's Rash Act—Smallpox Again Spreading.

Special to the Times.

BUFFALO, Feb. 12.—Henry Humphrey employed in the malt house, was drawn into a chute from which was passing malt from an upper to a lower bin. The 12-inch spout caught the man fairly, and he began a great battle for his life in the maelstrom of grain passing through the chute. The companions working with him were unable to afford him any assistance, and inch by inch Humphrey went to his death. In a few minutes the doomed man was in the malt up to his neck, and it seemed as though it would only be a moment before it would close over his head. "My God, I'm going, I'm going," screamed the man, and he gave a series of agonizing shrieks and the malt closed over his head. Down he went out of sight. In a few minutes the spout was closed. When he was dug out 20 minutes later it was found that he clutched the malt and had gripped it so tightly that he had squeezed the grain into his fingers and into the palms of his hands. He was four feet deep in grain and it was more than two above his hands, which were stretched straight over his head. When the chute had been stopped a dozen of his fellow-employees hurried to the upper bin to drag him out, but it is certain that he was dead before the chute was stopped.

MISS GOULD'S ENGAGEMENT.

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—Rumor has it that Miss Anna Gould yesterday signed a marriage agreement to settle two millions on her fiance, Count Jean de Castellane. The rumor was definite and circumstancial, but was not verified by any member of the family. Members of society interested in such things, however, gave it full credence.

Percy, of Copenhagen, has succumbed to the disease. Her husband died a fortnight since.

CANADIAN COPYRIGHT.

LONDON, Feb. 13.—In the House of Commons today Mr. William Birkmyre, M. P., (Ayr Dis., Liberal,) desires the government to promise to refuse to assent to the Canadian Copyright Act, and request Canada to insert a clause making the assent of an author a condition precedent to the appropriation of a copyright by a Canadian publisher. Mr. Sydney Buxton, Parliamentary Secretary replying, said the Secretary of State for the Colonies was now considering the correspondence. He could make no statement at present.

CALLED THE JUDGES VILLAINS.

Anarchist Bach Made a Scene in a Belgian Court When He Was Sentenced.

Special to The Times.

LIEGE, Belgium, Feb. 13.—The trial of the German Anarchist Mueller and thirteen others, which began Jan. 11, ended today. Mueller and Westcamp were sentenced to penal servitude for life; Broisch and Bach for ten years; Vossenti, four years; Wilke and Schlebach, three years; Mme. Schlebach, six months' imprisonment. Five were acquitted.

Bach flew into a large on hearing his sentence.

"Scum! Villains!" he shouted at the Judges. "You have committed judicial murder. There is no justice."

Then he leaped out of the dock and struck right and left at the gendarmes. After a severe struggle he was overpowered by five gendarmes, who removed him from the court-room as he continued screaming out insults at the Judges. The other prisoners watched the scene calmly.

The Anarchists were charged with blowing up the Burgomaster's house last April, and trying to blow up the Church of St. Jacques. The leader of the gang, Jagolkovsky, alias Baron Sternberg, disappeared, but was subsequently arrested by the Russian police. The Anarchists say he was an "agent provocateur."

A CHURCH BURNED.

The North End of the Wall Fell But the Firemen Miraculously Got out of the Way and Were Not Seriously Injured—Loss Estimated at $25,000.

Special to The Times.

LONDON, Ont., Feb. 13.—Once more the Methodist denomination of this city is subjected to a severe loss in the destruction by fire about two o'clock this morning of the Dundas street Methodist church.

In less than an hour after the alarm was given the church was nothing but a ruin, its destruction being as complete as that of its sister church on Queen's avenue, which was destroyed ten days ago. While the firemen were fighting the flames the north end gable wall fell and it is astonishing that a number of firemen were not buried in the ruins. As it was, Chief Roe and Firemen McDonald and Riddle were badly cut and shaken up.

Incendiarism is strongly suspected, although the fire started in the rear of the church near the furnace. The loss is $25,000; insurance $15,000.

103 CABLE CARS BURNED.

CHICAGO, Feb. 13.—Fire broke out in the car barns and power house of Lincoln avenue cable line late last night. It originated in some oiled rags and spread with such rapidity throughout the barn that it was almost impossible to save any of the cars which had all been run in for the night.

Of 120 passenger and grip cars stored in the barn but nine were saved. The firemen managed to confine the flames to the storage barn. During a portion of the time there was grave apprehension lest a tank containing 350,000 gallons of crude petroleum which the company used for fuel should become ignited, as it was but a few feet from the blazing barn. The total loss on building and cars is estimated at $300,000.

CARRIAGE FACTORY IN ASHES.

SOUTH MOUNTAIN, Dundas County, Ont., Feb. 13.—The carriage factory of Robert Blow and the tin shop of W. Bailey were burned this morning at 9 o'clock.

Damage to buildings and contents amounts to about $15,000. No insurance.

ED. BLAKE AND TIM HEALY.

These Two Irish Patriots Do Not Seem to Agree.

Special to the Times.

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—Harold Frederic, in his cable letter, says: The Nationalist feeling against the committee of the Irish party resulted last week in putting the new executive of the Irish federation into the hands of the Healyites. Instead of appreciating this warning, the committee this week, by the votes of its salaried dependents in the party, put T. D. Sullivan off its board and brought in the place of this accomplished scholar and poet a local butcher named Tom Condon, who, on the score of either intellect or manners, could hardly have obtained an appointment on Tammany's police force. This final debasement of the committee was the last straw, and Healy resigned from it. The explanation which he will publicly offer is characteristic of the state that Irish politics have reached already.

Blake has deliberately misrepresented him in New York, and others have done the same thing here. He will not serve on a committee where he will have no witness to protect him from the falsehoods of his colleagues. His section of the party, consisting almost wholly of men who do not draw salaries from the party fund, has made a protest at a meeting against the party's asking for more money from America or elsewhere until the mysteries enveloping the partition of the Paris Parliamentary fund and other financial transactions are cleared up.

The Sun's correspondent says: The crisis in the Irish party has reached even a more serious phase than the dilemma of the Liberals. Mr. Healy has this week practically withdrawn from the Nationalist party. There are grave reasons to believe he is now reckless enough to assume the responsibility of wrecking the Government by default if not by direct attack. Two of his followers absented themselves from Friday night's critical division, reducing the Government's majority to 12. This policy if applied to the vote on the principal opposition amendment to the address ten days hence will overthrow the Government. It is becoming plain that Mr. Healy's desire for immediate dissolution is due to his belief that he will gain a much greater following in Ireland if the election is held soon, because the Nationalists party is almost without funds for election purposes. Mr. Healy's open opposition this week to the Nationalist appeal for this class of funds makes his animus clear.

WEDDED HER DAUGHTER.

And the Clergyman's First Wife Had Been Dead Less Than a Year Too.

Special to the Times.

KINGSTON, N. Y., Feb. 13.—The members of the congregation of the Reformed church at New Hurley, Ulster County, and their pastor, the Rev. George W. Scarlet, are at odds over the recent marriage of that clergyman. Efforts are being made to force him to resign. Less than a year ago Mr. Scarlet's first wife fell down stairs and broke her neck, leaving a family of young children. Soon after his wife's death Mr. Scarlet engaged a housekeeper with a pretty daughter. The clergyman began to show attention to the young woman, and a few weeks ago he married her. The girl was Miss Laura De Nise, aged nineteen years. Mr. Scarlet is forty-one years old.

EX-GOV. ANTHONY ACCUSED.

Said to Have Accepted $6,000 for a Decision in a Railroad Case.

Special to the Times.

TOPEKA, Kan., Feb. 13.—The Senate Committee appointed to investigate the charges against ex-Gov. Geo. T. Anthony, whose name was sent to the Senate by Gov. Morrell for confirmation as State Superintendent of Insurance, has received an affidavit which apparently convicts him of corruption in office. The affidavit, which was made by S. S. West in 1888, avers that Anthony acted as agent for the Union Terminal Railway Company to negotiate with the State Board of Railroad Commissioners for a decision in a case pending before the board in which a valuable crossing in Kansas City, Kan., was involved; that the terminal company purchased a decision by the payment of $15,000, of which deponent received $1,250, George T. Anthony $6,000, Al Green $6,500 and William H. Mitchell $1,250. The Board of Commissioners at that time consisted of Anthony, Green, and Mitchell.

CHARGED WITH MURDER.

THE SENSATIONAL ARREST OF THE TWIN BROTHERS HYAMS.

Accused of Killing William C. Wells—A Mysterious and Gigantic Insurance Swindle—A Very Sensational Arrest in the Queen City.

Special to the Times.

TORONTO, Feb. 13.—The arrest Tuesday night of two young twin brothers named Harry Place Hyams and Dallas Theodore Hyams, on a charge of having, on the 16th of January, 1893, murdered William C. Wells, brings again before the public a case about which there has hovered a great amount of mystery, a case bristling with suspicious circumstances.

On Tuesday, Jan. 17th, two years ago the morning papers of this city gave the particulars of what was termed a heart-rending accident which had occurred on the previous day, whereby a young man named William C. Wells, 22 years of age, met instantaneous death in the basement of No. 23 Colborne street, a building then occupied by what was known as the Toronto Warehousing Company, which was really a firm consisting of the two men now under arrest. According to these accounts, the tragedy happened in the morning, when no one was present but Wells and Dallas T. Hyams. It was the latter who rushed out and reported the matter to others who were near. The explanation given by him was to the effect that Wells had been at the foot of the elevator shaft, trying to put into good repair some part of the apparatus, when a 500 pound weight, used as a counterbalance to the platform, became detached from the cable to which it belonged, and, falling to the bottom, crushed Wells' head and instantly killed him. Dr. Edmund E. King, of Queen street east, was called in, but the unfortunate man was beyond the reach of medical aid. The Hyams brother who claimed to have discovered the deceased was so affected by the incident that he was removed to his home in a cab. Coroner Aikins was notified of the affair, but, after an investigation of the circumstances, did not deem an inquest neccessary. The dead man was taken to his sorrowful home at 213 Mutual street, and in due course was laid away in his grave.

A few days later a very considerable sensation was created by the announcement of the fact that Wells' life had been insured for $36,000, all of which was made payable to Martha, one of his two sisters. More remarkable still, this insurance had been effected only eight weeks previous, and only one premium had been paid. Of this large amount, $31,000 had been placed in the New York Life Insurance Company, the remainder being in a Toronto company known as the Mutual Accident Association. The insurance companies, in view of all the peculiar circumstances of the case, made a more or less searching investigation of the affair, but in the end could find no satisfactory reason for withholding the money, and the beneficiary named received the full amount due from the New York Company and as much as the Toronto company could afford, its financial position at the time being far from impregnable.

It may be well to state here that for some time back the relations between H. P. Hyams and the Wells family had been of an intimate nature. He had been paying marked attention to the young lady, and it was deemed probable that it was due to his regard for her that a position as bookkeeper had been given her brother. After the tragedy this state of affairs continued, and in May, 1894, Hyams and Miss Wells were married. The business on Colborne street was abandoned, and the firm opened up a broking establishment at 11 King street west, but later still this, too, was given up, and the young couple left to reside in Montreal.

The public seem to have regarded the whole matter as very curious, but gradually it dropped out of notice, and possibly might have remained in that condition but for the rumor that within the last few weeks the husband had attempted to place upon the life of Mrs. Hyams the enormous insurance of three hundred thousand dollars. In the course of the negotiations relating to this proceeding, Mr. and Mrs. Hyams returned to this city, accompanied by Mr. O. Leger, of the Sun Life Insurance Company, Montreal. It does not appear that she was aware that such a large sum was being considered, but when the discovery was made she became greatly alarmed, and called at once for the cancelling of the application. In nearly every case, it is said, the companies acquiesced, but at all events these doings had the effect of resurrecting the whole matter of Wells' death, the detective department renewed its investigation, and for reasons which have not yet been divulged, resolved to arrest the two brothers. At five o'clock yesterday Detective Alfred Cuddy swore out an information before Mr. Hugh Miller, Justice of the Peace, in which Harry Place Hyams and Dallas Theodore Hyams were charged with having, on the 16th of January, 1893, feloniously, wilfully, and with malice aforethought, killed and murdered William C. Wells.

Detectives Cuddy and Davis started out to execute the warrant and at 8 o'clock last night they apprehended the two on Gould street, and took them to No. 2 Police station on Agnes street. The prisoners will be arraigned this morning before Deputy Police Magistrate Kingsford.

Considerable curiosity is entertained regarding the foundation for this move on the part of the authorities. It is considered probable that if there is really any truth in the charge that both or either of the accused had murderous designs against Wells for the sake of the enormous insurance upon his life, his sister, Mrs. Hyams, has by this time come into possession of the knowledge of some fact or suspicious circumstance or admission concerning the crime. She and her husband are living apart now, and it is alleged that she is seeking a legal separation. Friendly relations between them are at end undoubtedly, and if she knows anything about the death of her brother it is likely that she has told it, either to her sister or to the detectives.

The case gives promise of being one of great interest, and further developments will be looked forward to with keen anxiety by the public.

The two prisoners are natives of New Orleans, where their father practiced medicine. The two boys were sent to school in Germany for four years. They returned to New Orleans, but on their father's death, they came to Canada, and settled for a time in Kingston, where they had a kid glove factory. Seven years ago they came to Toronto, where they have lived until one brother left for Montreal.

Mrs. Hyams was one of a family of two boys and two girls. They came from Somerset, England, and are well known in the vicinity of Pickering, as well as in this city. The deceased, William Wells, was a great favorite with those who knew him

The Times.

PETERBOROUGH. FEBRUARY 14, 1895.

Good morning!

The Committee on appointments meet this evening. The duty of the Committee is clear: Expenses must be cut down, and the only way to do so is to reduce the staff of servants.

Last Saturday was the fifty-fifth anniversary of the marriage of Queen Victoria. Her majesty was less than twenty-two years a wife, and has been more than thirty-three years a widow.

It is estimated that about $10,000,000 has been invested in coffee houses as an antidote of the saloon in England. It is said there are about 7,000 of them, employing 56,000, and they are paying investments.

The old delusion to the effect that dogs go mad only in the hot months of summer has been dispelled. An examination of the body of a dog which bit several people at Mt. Vernon O., a few days since, it is said, demonstrates the fact that the animal was afflicted with the rabies.

A bread and butter tree from the French settlement on the Gaboon was recently sent to a professor at Nancy to analyze. The tree yields a fatty substance called cay cay, resembling butter, and a grain containing 80 per cent of fatty matter, from which very nouishing bread is made. The tree is an Irvingia.

Elsewhere we published a short poem dealing with the treatment too often accorded to dumb brutes. Sleighing parties are all very enjoyable, but in most cases the rigs are overlooked, and as a result the poor horses suffer. Be merciful to the horses. When THE TIMES goes to a sleighing party it goes in a cutter just large enough for two. If the girl knows how to drive, so much the better

Pocket knife blades are very unevenly tempered. Even in so-called standard cutlery some blades are hard and some are soft. For the latter there is no remedy, but the temper of hard blades can easily be drawn slightly. Take a kitchen poker and heat it red hot, have the blade that is to be drawn bright and hold it on the poker for a moment. When the color runs down to violet blue stick the blade into a piece of tallow or beef suit until cold.

The town has no more use for his henchman that it has for the chief of police himself. The indignity which one of our citizens was subjected to by having a mask torn from his face by officer Stewart, while the former was on his way home from the carnival ball, on Tuesday night, indicates the character of the police force as it now is. The police Supervision Committee should investigate this disgraceful assault, and punish the officer by instant dismissal.

Councillor Dawson, who, when he thinks he is right entertains the idea that everyone else must necessarily be wrong, is anxious that things should go on in the same old rut. He is especially desirous that the police force should not be meddled with. If course the fact that Mr. Dawson has a relative on the force has nothing to do with his conduct in this matter. He is actuated solely in the interest of the people. While Cobourg, Port Hope, St. Catherines and scores of other places are cutting down their police force in order to save something to the hardworking taxpayer, Mr. Dawson is under a conscientious conviction that things should remain as they are in Peterborough.

THE CANALS OF MARS.

Mr. Percival Lowell, who has a well-equipped observatory in Arizona, which has recently been devoted to the study of the planet Mars, delivered a lecture in the Lowell Institute course, Boston, Wednesday evening, upon the so-called canals. Mr. Lowell said that the canals form a network of lines following universally the arcs of great circles. The average width of the lines is fifteen miles, and their length from 1,400 to 1,600 miles. These lines or canals appear to run from points on one sea-coast inland to other coasts. The lecturer suggested that the lines were visible because of the increase of vegetation along irrigating canals. The solution of the problem presented by these lines is most difficult, but it would appear that they are really water channels connecting the polar oceans. The poles of the earth are connected by oceans, but such vast bodies of water are lacking on Mars. Again, canals on such curves as Mr. Lowell describes would be impossible if the surface of Mars were not a dead level. The uniformity of the canals would indicate that they resulted from the operation of natural causes. Unless Mars has been densely populated for hundreds of thousands of years, such canals could not have been constructed. The labor required to dig them is incalculable.

PRUDENCE ALWAYS PAYS.

What young men starting in life need is advise of the right sort, either from men who have been ruined by their own folly or enriched by their own wisdom.

A failure to appreciate the blessings of independence is one prevailing weakness. The young man who is doing well and saving money must needs plunge into speculation. Speculation may be all right, so long as a man stands to lose nothing but his own speculation of that variety is too small for the young man. He exhausts his money and strains his credit in order to get into a big thing that may enrich him.

Too often the young man finds himself in a hole instead of a gold mine. The lender sensibly enough saves himself at his expense, and the man who might have been well-to-do if he had kept out of speculation, or independent if he had speculated only with his own money, is financially a wreck, or a borrower who is servant to the lender.

Merchants and manufacturers who do well in in a small way extend their operations beyond the strength of their means. The banks are obliging, and Canada has an unequalled service of banks. But a condition of dependence even upon the large justice of Canadian banks is not an ideal state of independence. The one thing that the young man should aim at, whatever his condition is independence. Independence is to many impossible, but men in speculation or industry or commerce ought to go just as far as their own strength will carry them, and stop before getting into any enterprise where they are wholly at the mercy of banks and loan companies.

NOT MUCH CHRISTIANITY IN IT.

Respectfully dedicated to the many members of sleighing parties who have left the city on pleasure intent within the last few weeks, some of them being church organizations.

He prayeth best who loveth best,
All things both great and small

They calls us Christians. Within church each week
We bend the knee, we grace and blessing seek,
We look with horror with averted glance—
Upon the sinner who we see, perchance
Beating a wretched horse; we see
With loathing eyes man's acts of cruelty.
A beaten dog calls forth our pity; we
From piteous sights and sound would swiftly flee
To call for help to stay the cruel goad
That fain would hasten onward heavy load
By willing horse let stop for want of strength
To drag the burden such a weary length
Of way. We'd speak with bated breath
Of him who heedless worked a horse to death,
Yet we would go far on pleasure bent
With many a song and shout of merriment,
For many miles packed thirty in a sleigh,
With two poor "nags" to drag us all the way.
With panting breath to stagger on the road,
Hasten by blows from cruel whip and goad
Yet we are Christians (?) please remember, we
Cannot be charged with inhumanity.
Church choirs go, a load within the van,
And Sunday schools and Christian maids and men.
What matter if the two poor wretched nags
Stumble and fall; 'tis fun for silly wags.
Sing on the louder, suff'ring goes before
And mirth behind; there is no stringent law
To teach these Christians charity divine:
It's real, true meaning sure they can't define.
Tho' many a tough bad road, tho' drifted snow,
Panting and tired two poor horses go.
Heed not their suffering on enjoyment bent,
Think but of self, these poor dumb beasts are meant
But for thy services; drive them mile on mile,
Thirty people in the big sleigh pile.
'Twill cost less money, suff'ring's naught to those
Forgotten is thy Christianity

LA GASCOGNE ARRIVES.

BLOWN OUT OF HER COURSE WITH A BROKEN PISTON ROD.

The Machinery Fails Four Times—Heavy Weather Experienced and One Boat Damaged—Passengers all in the Good Health.

Special to the Times.

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—La Gascogne is safe. The big French liner eight days' overdue dropped anchor at the bar just before midnight, all well on board and a sigh of relief goes up from two continents. The delay was due to a broken piston rod and to the terrific gales which have swept the North Atlantic for the past week or more and brought disaster to many a staunch craft. Capt. Baudelin and the officers and crew of La Gascogne brought the ship and passengers through the gales, and made port without help. From the time they left Havre on Jan. 26th until today they spoke to no trans-Atlantic steamers and saw only a four-masted schooner the one which reported at St. Pierre, Miquelon, as having seen a large steamer off the banks, apparently in distress last Saturday. The United Press tug Dalzell with representatives of the Times, Tribune and Recorder on board was the first tug to reach La Gascogne. The disabled steamer had left Fire Island 25 miles astern and was eight miles to the eastward of Sandy Hook lightship. It was 9.45 p.m. The big liner was limping into port at half speed, with two big red lights as signals of distress at the foremast. The tug lay along side half an hour and the following story of the trip was obtained.

INCIDENTS OF THE VOYAGE.

The steamer left Havre on January 26. On the first day out 449 miles were logged; on the second day, 407 miles; on the third day, after travelling 380 miles, the piston rod broke, and eighteen hours were spent in making the repairs. When they were completed the ship steamed at 9 miles an hour, making in all 66 miles on the 29th. On the 30th, 31st and February 1st, respectively, 215, 235 and 250 miles a day were made. On February 2nd the piston rod broke down again. The break was more serious this time. Sea anchors were put out, and for forty-one hours the ship was hove to making repairs. On the 4th the first severe weather was experienced, and the ship was blown 180 miles out of her course. On the 5th, the repairs having been completed 165 miles were made. The ship was then clear to the northward of the track of trans-Atlantic steamers, and was not therefore seen by the many steamers which passed over the regular track. On February 6th 180 miles were made. On the 7th the machinery broke down for the third time. The

HEAVY CYCLONE STRUCK HER

on that day, and the ship lay hove-to with sea anchors out all day. No headway was made, and owing to the action of the ship, repairs were difficult. On the next day the chief engineer, who had been at his post day and night, completed the repairs and the ship proceeded 121 miles. On the 8th, for the fourth time, the machinery broke down and only 74 miles were made. On the 10th 150 miles were made and today, to the great rejoicing of all on board, Fire Island was sighted, and the ship crept up to her anchorage off the bar. The United Press tug was received with loud cheers by the anxious passengers. They crowded to the rail, cheered and clapped their hands with all the enthusiasm of the French race. The officers refused to allow anyone on board and would not come to the rail to talk. The passengers were more obliging. Julius Matagrin, a representative of the glove firm of Perrin, Freres & Co., of Paris and New York, was interviewed over the side of the ship. He said: "We broke down on third day out. We didn't become alarmed, as we did not know very much about what was the matter. The captain said it was all right, and we had confidence in him. Our first experience with gales was on February 4. We had

"Was anything carried away?"

"No; the ship stood it well. We had plenty of provisions, and fared first-rate. We were blown away off our course, and spoke to no steamers until yesterday, when we saw an American liner bound for Philadelphia." A crowd of men passengers leaned over the bulwarks, and one of the women wrapped up in sea togs, joined them in their eager quest for news from shore. So eager were they, indeed, that it was difficult to secure an answer to the questions that were hurled at them from the tug. A copy of an American newspaper was thrown aboard and in acknowledgment Jules Matagrin threw his card weighted to a heavy substance. On the back of it was

A COPY OF THE LOG.

They said they had been given plenty to eat and except for the number of times the sun rose and set they would not have known that anything was wrong. All particulars of the accidents to the machinery were kept from the passengers, but the daily bulletins of the knots made told the story. Beyond the tediousness of the voyage the passengers positively suffered no inconvenience. Although the derangement of the machinery occurred on the third day it was not until the ninth day that the steamer ran into bad weather. From the time La Gascogne struck the cyclone she was a little worse off than if she had been in prime running order.

The Premier in Ottawa.

OTTAWA, Feb. 12.—Premier Bowell and Sir Hibbert Tupper returned to the city this morning from Toronto. They left Toronto on the nine o'clock Saturday night and were detained by the snow blockade.

Did Not Know His Name.

The men of the Light division in the Crimea always spoke of Sir George Brown as "the general," as was then and is still, though in a lesser degree, the habit of soldiers, possibly from not knowing the name of the immediate leader. This ignorance cost Sir George £1 during the worst of the winter. He had seized an opportunity of meeting Lord Raglan to urge the desirability of his showing himself more frequently in the camps.

"What good will it do?"

"Oh, 'twill cheer the men up! Why, sir, numbers of my men don't know your name."

"But they don't know your name, George."

"Every man in the Light division knows my name."

"I'll bet you £1 the first man we ask does not."

"Done," said Sir George, and they rode to the Light division camp.

"Come here, my man. Who am I?"

"You're the general sir."

"But my name?"

"You're the general, sir," and nothing more could be elicited from him. Sir George Brown paid up on the spot.

No one who saw him ride straight toward the foe, without an indication that he was in any danger, is likely to forget the animating effect of his bearing on the soldiers.—Sir Evelyn Wood in Fortnightly Review.

The Lady of the Plains.

A young woman from the treeless plains of the west had gone to Boston to a music school on her first trip east, and among the first persons she met at her boarding house was a youth from Bangor. As their acquaintance ripened she told him of what had interested her on the journey.

"Why," she said, with an exultant spirit, "I saw at one place in Pennsylvania a hundred saw logs in one pile."

"A hundred?" he asked, with a tinge of a smile.

"That's what they told me. You know, we don't have saw logs where I came from."

"Is that so? You ought to come to Maine once."

"Do you have them there?"

"Do we?" he replied magnificently. "Do we? Why, my dear young lady, saw logs grow on trees in Maine."

"Really?" she asked in open eyed astonishment.

"It's a literal fact," he asserted positively.

"Well, I don't believe it," she contended, and, do what he could, he could not convince her that he was telling plain, unadorned truth.—Detroit Free Press.

Twenty Years Hence.

Mrs. Newera (entering kitchen hurriedly about 3 p. m. registration day)—Alfred, dear, I am sorry to disturb you, but if we don't register every vote we've got in the ward they are going to lick us sure! Take off your apron and come along. There's a carriage at the door.

Mr. Newera—Ethelberta, I've tried to be a good husband to you. I've never refused to do anything reasonable you have required of me. I have taken care of the house and kept the children out of mischief while you've been at the club or hobnobbing with the candidates down town, and I've never complained, but I'm right in the middle of the fruit canning season, and if you think I'm going to leave this porcelain kettle full of peaches all ready to put in the jars and let the six gallons of apple butter in this washboiler burn and go to waste just for the sake of going out to register you don't know me, madam, that's all. Now, you get out of my way and go on about your business, or I'll throw a dipper of hot water on you!" —Chicago Tribune.

Comparative Strength of Materials.

Cast iron weighs 444 pounds to the cubic foot, and an inch square bar will sustain a weight of 16,500 pounds; bronze, weight 535 pounds; tenacity 3,600; wrought iron, weight 480, tenacity 50,000; hard "struck" steel, weight 490, tenacity 78,000; aluminium, weight 168, tenacity 26,000. We are accustomed to think of metals as being stronger than wood, and so they are, generally speaking, if only pieces of the same size be tested, but when equal weights of the two materials are compared it is then found that several varieties of wood are stronger than ordinary steel. A bar of pine just as heavy as a bar of steel an inch square will hold up 125,000 pounds, the best ash 175,000 pounds and some hemlock 200,000 pounds. Wood is bulky. It occupies 10 or 12 times the space of steel. The best steel castings made for the United States navy have a tenacity of 65,000 to 75,000 pounds to the square inch. By solidifying such castings under great pressure a tensile strength of 80,000 to 150,000 pounds may be obtained.—Railway Review.

The Old Time Husking Bee.

A story is told of husking bee deviltry in the pioneer days of Dexter. Captain Small, one of the first comers, after he had grown to the dignity of having a big barn, gave a husking, to which a large and merry party gathered. While the supper was progressing and the coast was clear some of the "boys" drove one of the captain's steers into the barn floor, and attaching a rope to him lifted him up over the high beams to the top of the haymow. They were so spry about it that the joke was not discovered. The steer was missed, of course, and a search of all the surrounding country was made without success. The animal was given up for lost when one day, a week after the husking, the captain was in his barn and heard a long "moo!" up in the ridge pole. Looking up, there was the missing steer gazing calmly down at him over the high beam. Such was the sport the daddies had in their young days. Modern huskings are more prosaic.—Lewiston Journal.

Sufficient Excuse.

An exchange remarks of John Quincy Adams, recently deceased, that he was very fond of fishing and not especially fond of his legal profession.

One day a case in which he was counsel was down for trial in a Boston court. Mr. Adams did not make his appearance, but sent a letter to the judge. That worthy gentleman read it and then postponed the case with the announcement:

"Mr. Adams is detained on important business."

The note read as follows:

"Dear judge, for the sake of old Isaak Walton, please continue my case until Friday. The smelts are biting, and I can't leave."

Not Hasty.

A very small boy was trying to lead a big St. Bernard up the avenue.

"What are you going to do with that dog?" asked a kindly gentleman.

"I can't make up my mind," was the answer, "not till I find out what the dog thinks o' doin weth me."—Washington Star.

WHO RULES THE WORLD?

Who rules the world? "I," saith the king
"My despotism is the thing
To govern man. Invincible,
My edicts nothing can annul."

Who rules the world? "I," saith the pope
"I am its only guide and hope.
Unlike all other monarchs, I
Am clothed with power from on high."

Who rules the world? "I," saith the storm
"I am the prelude to reform.
Seas, rivers, forests, creatures, all
Bow down and tremble at my call."

Who rules the world? "I," saith the son
Of toil. "I am the potent one,
The subtle force that underlies
All progress wrought beneath the skies."

Who rules the world? "I," said a voice
From out the stars. "Rejoice, rejoice!
I am a jealous God, and, lo,
Return with interest blow for blow."

Then throughout space arose the cry,
"God reigns, and justice cannot die!"
And those who sought to thwart his power
Fell down and perished in an hour.

—Commodore Rollingpin in St. Louis Republic.

NAOMI.

The ramshackle coach, whose only claim to dignity lay in the fact that it carried the United States mails, pulled up with a jerk in front of the "hotel." The place was welcome as the first habitation we had passed for miles; otherwise it didn't amount to much. So far as I could see in the gray gloom of scarce broken dawn, it consisted of a log cabin, with an inverted hogshead set in the doorway as an al fresco bar, round which some half dozen miners were clustered for a morning dram.

While I was wondering whether a cup of decent coffee was within the capabilities of the hostelry the guard came to the door and addressed me. "If you're bound for Golden Falls, judge," he said, "there's two ways open to you. Some of the boys have come in from there with a load of dust for us to take to the bank at Parsons City. You can either go back with them in the mule cart—a matter of 15 mile—or you can go on in the coach, and we'll drop you at Blackman's Corner. From there it's a roughish tramp of ten mile to Golden Falls."

Without a moment's hesitation I decided to go on in the coach and walk the ten miles. I merely changed my position from the inside, where I had spent the night as sole passenger, to the box seat next the driver. This would be preferable, I thought, to a 15 mile drive in a jolting mule cart in the company of roughish strangers, who were showing an inclination to celebrate the dispatch of their precious earnings by frequent rounds of rye whisky.

The boxes of gold dust were soon hoisted into the coach, and amid cheers from the assembled miners we started on our lonely road again. The route lay for a few miles through rugged bowlder strewn country, thickly interspersed with pine trees. At a spot called Blackman's Corner it debouched into an open plain, and it was at this junction of the rocky ground with the prairie that I was to be set down. The one eyed guard, with whom I was by this time pretty friendly, had just announced our approach to the Corner, and I was rummaging for my valise, with a view to departure, when two masked men stepped quietly out of the rocks, one on either side of the road, and with rifles leveled shouted the dreaded cry of "Hands up!"

"Road agents, by thunder!" said the guard, holding his arms high above his head. "It's no go, Mike," he called to the driver. "They've got the fair drop on us. Better pull up and save our skins."

The horses were pulled almost on to their haunches. One of the men kept his rifle leveled at the driver's head, while the other advanced to the side of the coach and shouted: "Now, then, guard, look alive and hand out the dust—16 packages. You see, I've got the office straight, so it's no good your trying to come the bluff."

"If I hadn't laid down my gun to help the passenger with his baggage, you'd never have got the drop on us, I guess," said the guard ruefully. But he did as he was bid, and one by one the 16 little oilskin packages were thrown on the ground in front of the robber. He gathered them into a sack, while the other robber kept his rifle ready. There was no chance for any of us to get to our pistols, though I saw the guard's fingers twitching and the whites of his eyes glisten as his glance turned downward to his belt. It was all over in no time, and the sack was removed to the roadside. I was beginning to congratulate myself that I was not personally to be a victim when the man who had filled the sack returned to the coach and dispelled my illusion by saying: "Now, mister, your dollars, please. Don't put me to the trouble of coming up there to go through you."

There was nothing else for it but to submit. I took out a roll of notes and handed them down.

There was no use in trying to conceal any of them with that pair of sharp eyes watching me from the slits in the mask. But the proceeding had the effect of leaving me practically penniless in a strange land, 2,000 miles from a friend. With the exception of a $10 bill, which I remembered was in my waistcoat pocket, I had no resources nearer than New York.

"Better help ourselves to a nag apiece, Bill," said the more active of the two to the one at the horses' heads. "See here. Keep your shooting iron handy while I do the trick."

In a moment the two leaders—one a dappled gray and the other a bald faced chestnut—were detached from the team. The sack was flung on the back of one of them, and the two horses were led away behind a bluff. They were no sooner out of sight than the other man, who had watched us the while, began to retreat backward in the direction his companion had taken. He, too, disappeared, and then for the first time for ten minutes we knew what it was to exist without the sensation of a loaded winchester threatening us at point blank range.

The driver and the guard set about adapting the cut harness to the two remaining horses, which done the lumbering vehicle started at a crawl to return to the hotel to replace the stolen steeds, leaving me alone to make the best of my way to Golden Falls. The guard's directions were very simple, "Point your nose to the west and keep right on till you git thar."

And while I am taking my lonely tramp it may be well to explain how it was that I, Arthur Saltmarshe, a young English barrister, came to find myself in the wilds of the Black Hills, where "road agents" and "shooting irons" were quite commonplace affairs. Just before the commencement of that long vacation I had seen an advertisement in one of the newspapers which informed the next of kin of the late Leonard Saltmarshe of New York that he would "hear of something to his advantage" by applying to Wilkins & Crowdy, attorneys-at-law in that city. To the best of my belief, I was that individual, Leonard Saltmarshe having been my father's only brother. We had never heard of his marriage, and to the day of his death my father had asserted that his brother Leonard would have a pile to leave behind him some day. All I knew of my uncle was that he was an eccentric young man, who had gone to America years before I was born. My father and he seldom communicated.

I wrote at once to Wilkins & Crowdy, and by return mail received a civil reply to the effect that my uncle had died suddenly without a will, leaving property to the amount of $2,000,000 behind him.

They were quite prepared to entertain my claim in the absence of any other applicant. All they wanted was to be furnished with the necessary proofs, and they hinted that, considering the amount at stake, it would be worth my while to run across to New York in person. The idea of spending the vacation in this way pleased me. My father had left me well off, so whether the inheritance proved to be mine or no I could well afford the holiday jaunt. I took the next Cunard boat, and on landing went straight to the offices of the attorneys.

But here a surprise was in store for me. The very morning of my arrival in New York Messrs. Wilkins & Crowdy had received a letter putting in a claim to the property from another applicant. The letter was dated from Golden Falls, which the lawyers believed was a mushroom mining camp in the Black Hills district, and it purported to come from one Luke Saltmarshe, who said he was a son of Leonard Saltmarshe as the result of a marriage contracted by the latter when "out west" 28 years before.

I chose my own course at once. I explained to the attorneys that I was well off and only desired that justice should be done. If this young man were really my Uncle Leonard's son, by all means let him have the property. But I had no relations living, and, quite apart from the matter in hand, it would please me much to make my cousin's acquaintance. My time being my own, I therefore proposed myself to go to Golden Falls and see him, quite in a friendly way and thoroughly prepared to recognize his claim. My legal training, I said, might even be of some use to him in helping him to procure the proofs which were necessary.

Messrs. Wilkins & Crowdy confessed that they did not like my project. A trip to the Black Hills was no joke, they said, and if by any chance Luke Saltmarshe was an impostor my life even might not be safe in that wild region. Better, at any rate, wait for his reply. These objections I overruled and started for the west that same evening.

Thus it was that on the day the Parson's City mail coach was robbed I was approaching Golden Falls with nothing but a change of clothes and a solitary $10 note. At the end of ten miles the path suddenly dipped over the brink of a ravine, down the center of which a mountain torrent was brawling. Perched among the rocks below on the brink of the stream were some twoscore log cabins, with a few tents here and there to denote that Golden Falls was a thing of today, but not of yesterday. All down the course of the brook were the "cradles" for washing out the gold, and I could see the various claims, with their heaps of dirt on either bank, but they seemed to be all deserted. Spades and picks were lying here and there as if cast aside in a hurry.

It struck me as strange, this abandonment of work in the middle of the day, the more so as I could hear the hum of men's voices raised, I thought, in angry discussion. Looking again, I saw that there was a crowd round the largest of the cabins, about the center of the row, above which a flag floated bearing the device, "Ben Baldwin's Saloon." It flashed upon me in a moment. The miners had heard of the robbery of their gold dust.

When I reached the saloon, I found that I was right. Three of the miners whom I had seen at the wayside "hotel" had just arrived with the news of the coach's forlorn return. Round the doorway of the saloon an excited throng of slouch hatted, red shirted miners were lamenting and vowing vengeance. I elbowed my way into the saloon, and having been posted in the customs of the west pulled out my $10 bill to "treat the crowd" inside. This method of self introduction left me with only a dollar or two in my pocket.

The excitement was increased when it became known that I had been the solitary passenger in the mail coach. Many were the questions I had to answer as to the appearance of the masked robbers, but I could throw but little light on that. Almost any of the men before me would have resembled them, given the addition of a crape mask.

It was not for full half an hour that I was able to think of my own affairs. Then I asked the landlord if he knew where Luke Saltmarshe was to be found.

"I guess he's totin around somewheres jawin about the road agents," he replied. "Any of you boys seen Luke this mornin?" he added, turning to the throng before the bar.

"Luke started for Parson's City at sunrise," said one of the miners. "Expect he'll be back by supper time."

I explained to the landlord that I had come from New York to see Saltmarshe on a matter of business.

"Well," said Mr. Baldwin, "I reckon you'd best get along to his shanty. It's fourth from here as you go down stream. Maybe his sister will fix you up somethin to eat while you wait."

Here was a revelation! Luke Saltmarshe with a sister! I distinctly remembered that he had described himself in the letter to the lawyers as an only child. Was there something wrong about my unknown cousin, after all?

I thanked the landlord and turned my steps toward the cabin he had indicated. It was larger than most of its neighbors, and there was an air of neatness about it which would have suggested woman's presence, even if I had not heard of it. A dusky half breed Indian boy of about 15 was just entering the cabin with a bucket of water as I approached, and at the same moment a white arm, appearing in the doorway, relieved the boy of his load.

I cannot describe Naomi as I saw her then for the first time. I only know that I looked upon the most beautiful woman my eyes have ever seen. Tall and fair and with a stately dignity of her own, the picturesque simplicity of her frontier dress in no way clashed amid those surroundings with her natural grace. There was an air of refinement about Naomi which the roughest setting could not negative. She invited me in, and without going into the object of my visit I told her that I had reason to believe I was a relative.

To my wonder, a look of harassed fear came into her eyes. "Tell me," she said, "is my father, Leonard Saltmarshe, living?"

"Is it possible," I exclaimed, "that you do not know? Your brother Luke knows. It is in consequence of a letter from him

EXPENSES OF A DINING CAR.

Costly Service Maintained For the Convenience of Travelers.

A modern dining car of the most approved pattern costs $15,000 to build. Next come the kitchen utensils, the table furniture, the silverware and linen, averaging about $3,000 worth to a car. Each car must have a steward, who usually gets $100 a month, and a head cook, who values himself at $75 a month. There must also be one or two assistant cooks and three or four waiters. Three hundred dollars a month is the very smallest outlay for wages, while the cost of raw food material, breaking of dishes and the board of employees is about $2,000 per month additional. An average five days' run costs very nearly $600 for food and service, so that it would take 40 persons at every meal on the run to pay the daily expenses without allowing anything for interest on the investment or for wear and tear on the furnishings. The kitchen of a dining car contains every convenience except room. There is a range capable of doing all the boiling, broiling, baking and stewing for hundreds of people, yet occupying comparatively no space at all. There is a board for the carver, a bin and table for the baker and a sink for the dishwasher, with shelves and imperishable supplies, all in an area of 5 by 12 feet at most. Every inch of space is carefully utilized. Under the car is the cellar or refrigerator, where ice, beef, mutton, poultry, milk, butter and other perishable supplies are kept.

The steward, who is in charge of all this, must be a good guesser. To be sure, the dining car is run on the principle that no money will be made anyway; that one road must run it because a competing road does; that the traveler must therefore have the best in the market for a fair price, and that it is better to throw away unused and spoiled material at the end of a trip than to run out of some necessary on the way. Yet I imagine that the steward who has the lowest average of wasted food stands highest in his employer's regard. The first thing he has to do is to make out the bills of fare for the trip. These must be approved by the head of the commissary department. The chef buys the necessary supplies, but the steward has to turn in an inventory of them at the starting point, and also a statement of what has been used en route and what is left at the end of the run. There is no method of estimating the exact number of meals that will need to be served during the run, particularly if it be a short one. Suppose it is to be made from Washington to New York. Individual methods of economy are very different. While some prefer to pay $1.25 for the extra comfort of a seat in a parlor car, there are others who think the common coach good enough and prefer to spend their dollar in the dining car. Again, there are some who frequent both parlor and diner, and others who care for neither. For a longer journey every berth in the sleeper may be occupied, and yet the dining car may be practically tenantless, or the sleeper may be nearly empty and the diner full of people from the day coach, or it may be crowded with the occupants of both. As the steward goes through the train on a tour of inspection or in giving his first call for a meal he must note the number of lunchboxes and guess from the faces and dress of the passengers how many orders he will have. But even his best judgment will be far out of the way, for the lunchbox may be for the next day's light repast, or some of the best dressed passengers may not have decided whether to patronize the dining car or not.—Kate Field's Washington.

How a Fish Breathes.

The gills of a fish are situated at the back part of the sides of the head and consist of a number of vascular membranes, which are generally arranged in double, fringelike rows, attached to the parts by the base only. In some cases these membranes are feather shaped, in others mere folds attached to the sides of the gill cavities. The fish is a cold blooded animal—that is to say, its temperature is seldom more than a degree or two higher than the water in which it lives. This being true, the creature needs but a very small amount of oxygen to keep the blood at a temperature sufficiently high to sustain life. This oxygen is supplied to the blood of the fish by respiring large quantities of water, or rather drinking large quantities of water, and respiring the air separated from it by the gills. This explains why a fish cannot live in a tank of water which has been sifted through the gills time and time again any better than a human being or other animal can in air that has been deprived of all its oxygen by being taken into lungs and expelled without being aerated. Fish that die in the stale water of aquariums may be properly said to drown, because they perish for want of air, the same thing which occasions death by drowning in man and other lung breathing animals.—St. Louis Republic.

The Order of the Garter.

An evening journal, in a dissertation on the Order of the Garter, states that it consists of 25 ordinary knights and 25 extra knights, which is quite wrong. There is no fixed number of extra knights, who are all royal personages, and there were only six of them when the queen's reign commenced, whereas there are now 22. During the last two financial years £1,390 has been paid by the public to the dean and chapter of Windsor and to the Garter officers in respect of fees and expenses in connection with the creation of three extra knights. In all other countries such payments are made by the new knights themselves, but here the taxpayers find the money, and last year the lord chamberlain received £2,800 to provide and repair insignia of the various orders of knighthood.—London Truth.

Last Letter of Emin Pasha.

Sir William Flower has communicated to the Zoological society some posthumous tidings of Emin Pasha. This was a letter concerning some zoological specimens which never arrived in England at all, having been lost at the time of Emin's murder. The letter and the journal—principally relating to observations upon birds—which accompanied it were written in a fine and minute hand, like copper plate engraving. The letter had the additional and melancholy interest of being perhaps the last that Emin Pasha wrote. He was in constant correspondence with the president of the Zoological society about matters of zoological interest and always wrote in English, of which apparently he knew nothing until he went to Africa.—New York Times.

PETERBOROUGH, FEBRUARY 14, 1895

ST. VALENTINE'S DAY.

Will You Be My Valentine?—Some Valentine Customs.

'Tis St. Valentine's Day, and, oh! do not say nay
To the question I mean to propose;
For I love you, my dear, and to you I'm sincere,
So I send you a beautiful rose.

St. Valentine is one of the oldest saints in the calender and during his rather checkered career he little dreamed that his name would ever go down to posterity associated with such a jolly day.

The saint himself, who was a priest of Rome and suffered martyrdom in the third century, seems to have little to do with the day beyond the accident of his death day being used for the purpose.

The old Scotch and English custom was to take a number of slips of paper, with the names of an equal number of men and women; these were shuffled and drawn, so that each young man drew a valentine in the person of a young maiden, and each maiden drew a young man, whom she called hers. By this quaint method each was supplied with two valentines. But the man clung faster to the girl whom he had drawn than the one to whom he had fallen.

All this has changed with the years, and now the day is celebrated by the exchange of beautiful gifts between men and maidens; the gifts are sent without any name, and the old time lottery is only recognizable by the chances we take in discovering the sender of the valentine.

Peterborough girls are practical, and they have given their best beaux clearly to understand that silk and satin and pasteboard, elaborately trimmed with bleeding hearts, cupids, darts and other signs peculiar to St. Valentine, are well enough for romantic schoolgirls and boys, but they are useless for the grown up girl of these days and too much given to perishing even with cut using.

When the swell young man goes into a fashionable goldsmith's it is suggested to him that he is likely to receive a tiny diamond heart set as a scarfpin, or an arrow tipped with a pearl, or a silver or gold match-box, with a tiny cupid in enamel, from his very best and dearest; so he must needs take a glance at the beautiful new pins for the chiffon frilled collars the pretty up to date girls are wearing nowadays.

These are in lovers' knots and two diamond hearts joined by a pearly dart; there are exquisite little side combs for the damsel who wears her hair drawn back from her pretty face. These combs have veritable cupid wings of pearls which stand out from the hair in an indescribably pretty fashion. There are point lace fans, beautiful with cupids and flowers, and a little bejewelled as to the dainty monogram, without which nothing seems to be complete these days.

The nice young man remembers that after St. Valentine's Day comes Lent and the sewing classes for charity. All of the rich young maids meet to sew, and all of the young society men come for a cup of tea and to watch the dimpled fingers as they ruffle and hem and frill the pretty little garments for the babies in the great hospitals.

Every fellow owns, deep down in his heart, that the girls in their homely, housewifely work are ten times as sweet to look upon as in the most gorgeous ball gown, and more love matches have begun at the sewing classes than all of the rest of the social functions put together.

Accordingly a certain set of young men with more sentiment and romance than one would believe possible in these matter-of-fact days, have ordered thimbles, which they will send for valentines. Not the regulation thimble, but wonders fit for fairy queens, if the airy sprites needed such things.

Each thimble is set round with a wreath of flashing diamonds, and there is a tiny little diamond studded monogram on one side. They range in price from fifty dollars to just as high as one wishes to go, depending of course upon the size of the diamonds. One which was very beautiful cost $100 the other day.

The fashionable confectioners have been busy since the Christmas time preparing for the 14th of February. Dresden china is the favored receptacle for bonbons this year, and there are mammoth rose jars, quaintly shaped bowls, and big, fat vases, all decorated with Cupids and blue ribbons and pink roses and forget-me-nots. These are filled with all sorts of delicious confections, with a generous sprinkling of candied violets and rose leaves.

A dainty little bit which will serve as a powder box for my lady's dressing table, filled with goodies, can be bought for the modest sum of $5, while the larger pieces go up close to $50.

"To my dear lady beautiful
I send a valentine and kiss,
The valentine because she has
The loveliest hair and gentlest eyes,
The kiss because I love her more
Than any one beneath the skies,
Because she is the kindest, best,
The sweetest lady even known.
And every year I'll say the same,
The very same, to her alone!"

BUDGET FROM OTTAWA.

TENDERS FOR A SECTION OF THE TRENT VALLEY CANAL.

Plans to Utilize the Otonabee River—Sale of Ward's Timber Limits to Mr. E. J. Swan, of New York—A Burglar Caught—Ottawa Notes.

Special to the Times.

OTTAWA, Feb. 13.—The Government has decided to call for tenders for the construction of the Peterborough and Lakefield division of the Trent Valley canal. The original plans and specifications for this division have been remodelled as the result of a resurvey. The river route has been decided upon, thus doing away with a cutting some three and a half miles in length and lengthening the navigation some six and a half miles. This change is amply warranted by the greater facility of construction and the very considerable diminution in cost which will result from thus making use of a stretch of the River Otonabee. The tenders will have to be in the Department of Railways and Canals by March 23. Mr. R. B. Rogers, the engineer in charge of the canal, is here.

SALE OF A TIMBER LIMIT.

A sale has been consummated by which the property known at Ward's limits, on the Rouge river, some eighty miles northeast of Ottawa, is transferred to Mr. E. J. Swan, of New York, the sum of $100,000 being involved in the transaction. The area is about 550 square miles, the Rouge river running through them for about 68 miles. Mr. Swan purposes erecting mills on the property near the junction of the Rouge and Ottawa rivers, and using the timber on the limits for the manufacture of matches, tooth picks, clothes pins, pulp, furniture of various kinds and lumber generally. There is splendid water-power on the property, and the object of the purchaser is to make use of every piece of timber to be found on the limits. Several city gentlemen are interested in the project, and the main office will be located in this city.

CARNIVAL COMMITTEE.

The Executive Committee of the carnival met last night for the last time. A letter was received from his Excellency the Governor General, stating that the expenses of Mr. Sims for keeping the rink and slide at Rideau hall in condition would be defrayed by Lord Aberdeen. After much figuring, it was shown that there would be a surplus on hand of $431, without the percentage from the railways. If these are as high as expected, there may be about $1,000 left on hand after everything is cleared up.

THE WATTERS CASE.

It is understood that when the Watters case comes up again before the Police Magistrate, on Thursday next, the Crown will consent to a further adjournment until Tuesday, 19th inst., on account of the inability of Mr. B. B. Osler, Q. C., who has been retained by Mr. Watters to attend.

LACK OF ELECTRIC POWER.

The electrical power-houses at the Chaudiere have had difficulty yesterday and today with low water. A number of streets were left in darkness last night, and the Street Railway Company had their hands full keeping cars running. The water in the river fell four feet yesterday. There are many theories as to the cause, but no positive explanation. By some it is stated that ice formed above the Chaudiere falls during the cold weather of last week, and made a sort of dam, which backed up the water and kept it high. The thaw broke this dam, and the water then went down with a rush. Others attribute the fall to anchor ice. They say that the cold weather formed anchor ice in the vicinity of the rapids and the falls. This ice sank to the bottom during the cold weather, but was brought up again by Sunday's sunshine. It then floated into the channels leading to the power-houses at the Chaudiere, stayed there, and blocked them. The street railway power-house had to be closed down twice this forenoon. If the river does not begin to rise soon, the Ottawa Electric Company will have to fall back on the steam plant.

A BURGLAR CAPTURED.

The villagers of Gatineau Point have a sensation. Two burglars attempted to break into the general store of Wm. Smith at 2 o'clock this morning, but were discovered in time. One of them, who gives his name as Charles Morton, and place of residence Montreal, was shot in the hip and captured. The prisoner does not conceal the identity of his accomplice, who, he says, was a Toronto man named Thos. Onslow. Onslow is still at large, having escaped in the direction of West Templeton.

UNIVERSITY GRADUATES MEET.

A large meeting of university graduates resident in Ottawa was held this evening, the Universities of McGill, Toronto, and Queen's being well represented. At a former meeting it has been decided to have the dinner under the joint auspices of Toronto and McGill, at the same time inviting the co-operation of other graduates in the city. The opinion that was expressed, however, at this meeting was that the dinner should be given co-jointly by all university men here. A resolution to this effect was consequently passed, and an adjournment of one week was made, in order to give the secretary, Mr. D. H. McLean, an opportunity to communicate with the graduates in the city and its vicinity. Mr. John F. MacCracken was the chairman of this evening's meeting.

AN UNAUTHORIZED SIGNATURE.

Editor of the Times.

SIR,—I notice in the issue of THE TIMES of Feb. 13 an article purporting to be a "statement" of the passengers detained in the snow-up on the Midland Railway near Agincourt on Friday and Saturday last. I saw this statement, or one similar, in the columns of the Globe for the first time, and did not sign it nor authorize the use of my name in such a connection. I heard something incidentally of such a statement being contemplated but I paid little attention to the matter, for I was entirely ingrossed with my own distressing condition, a member of my family being seriously ill upon the train. I had and have not the slightest personal knowledge of the attitude of the Grand Trunk authorities to the snow-bound passengers, but I have a personal knowledge of the extreme kindness, solicitude and courtesy of the train officials who did everything in their power to contribute to the comfort and to mitigate the inconvenience the detained passengers necessarily suffered.

In regard to the description appended my name as printed at the end of the statement in question, those who know me know that I could be trusted not to show the execrable taste of affixing expression of my business relation to the Examiner to my signature (even if I had made it) as a private individual. I had no authority to speak for the Examiner—I was travelling as a private individual in the interests of my personal affairs.

Yours very truly,
F. R. YOKOME.

Another Toronto Rally.

TORONTO, Feb. 13.—The Evening Star says: "There will be a monster Conservative convention in Toronto in about two weeks. The meeting will be called by the Toronto Young Conservatives and will be conducted under the auspices of the club, but it will not be a meeting of the Young Conservatives of the province, but of all Conservatives. Every county organization, and in fact every Conservative organization, will send delegates. At the same time Sir Mackenzie Bowell and some of the Cabinet Ministers will address a mass meeting in Massey Hall."

THAT AGINCOURT DISASTER.

The Conductor and Station Agent Give Contradictory Evidence.

The inquest to enquire into the cause of the collision, by which Engineer Rigg lost his life, was continued at Agincourt yesterday.

The principal witnesses were Conductor Richard Boundy and Station Agent Weighill, of Unionville. The general impression is that one of these officials is to blame and the testimony of each seemed to display a desire to relieve himself from responsibility and put it upon the other.

County Constable Hobbs testified to the finding of the body of Rigg under the van 21 hours after the accident.

Conductor Boundy of the express train described the journey from Port Hope to Unionville, showing that at every station he had enquired whether the line was clear for him before starting. He said: "When I met the agent at Unionville I asked him if the plow was at Agincourt and he said 'yes,' and that it was all right to go on." Boundy then went on collecting fares and was in the post office car when the accident occurred.

Albert Weighill, the station agent at Unionville, testified that Conductor Boundy did not come to him and inquire about the plow. He swore positively that he gave no orders for Boundy to proceed, and when he found the train moving off he tried to stop it but could not do so, and he looked for an accident after that.

At a meeting of the lay and clerical delegates from the dioceses of Toronto, Huron, Niagara Falls, and Algoma, held in Toronto yesterday, a resolution in favor of an increase of the Episcopate was carried, and resolutions dealing with a rearrangement of the dioceses were referred to a sub committee to report upon.

SUBSCRIBER TALKS PLAINLY.

Editor of The Times.

DEAR SIR,—The Committee on Appointments will meet tonight, and among other things, I sincerely hope the members will enquire into the strange proceedings of Officer Stewart, who grossly outraged a respectable young man and citizen on Tuesday night. The gentleman in question left the carnival hall and stepped out into the street with his mask, when he was met by this most officious member of the force, and subjected to the indignity of having the mask torn from his face. This is not the first act of meanness of this ear-to-the-key-hole officer, and it is time he was put under the same discipline he is so anxious to exercise upon others.

If it is against the law to wear a mask on the street, the officer could have requested the gentleman in question to remove it, and he would have done so. After the last Sons of Canada carnival, a number wore their masks home and not a word was interposed by the police. On the same occasion "Susy's band" paraded the streets in masks and other disguises.

An organizer wanted for every county.

A Metal Breadboard

THE WOMAN WHO HAS BEEN USED to kneading dough on the old fashioned wooden breadboard knows what a bother it is to get them clean and how cumbersome and heavy they are. When they begin to crack or check it is almost impossible to thoroughly cleanse them, and they may easily become dangerous conveyances of disease. It was left for a woman, of course, to remedy this state of affairs, and Mrs. M. M. Everhard, of St. Joseph, Mich., has patented a metal bread board, which is one of the greatest labor-savers imaginable. It is light, does not absorb grease, dough does not adhere to it, and while it possesses all the advantages of the marble bread-board it is much cheaper and, of course, far lighter and easier to handle. If readers want to confer a favor upon their wives that will be forever appreciated, let them send $1 to the manufacturers, 101 Bay street, Toronto, for one of these boards.

DYNAMITE EXPLOSIONS.

ONE MAN KILLED AND THREE INJURED AT HAMILTON AND DUNDAS.

The Fatality Occurred on the Line of the Toronto, Hamilton, and Buffalo Railway—Davis' Body Blown into Many Pieces.

Special to the Times.

HAMILTON, Feb. 14.—Pieces only are all that is left of the body of a workman named Davis, on the Toronto, Hamilton and Buffalo railway. He was blown to atoms by a sudden and unexpected explosion of dynamite this morning.

The explosive is used to open up the road and clear the trees near the Hollow a few miles west of Hamilton, and it is supposed Davis was engaged in thawing the dynamite when it exploded.

The noise of the explosion was heard in all parts of the city, and portions of the remains of the diseased were found lying in all directions in the vicinity of the accident.

ANOTHER T., H. & B. BLOW UP.

DUNDAS, Feb. 14.—About 6.30 last evening an accident occurred in section 20 of the T., H. & B. Ry., by which three men were injured.

On this section there is a night gang at work, and Mr. Mack, who has charge of the blasting, usually sets off about 15 holes after the day men leave, to enable the night gang to work.

Last evening he had about 30 pounds of powder, besides the usual quantity of dynamite in the blast. The battery he was using had sufficient power to set off only seven of the charges but the concussion discharged the other eight.

Mr. Mack, Mr. Yorston, of Jerseyville, and another man were injured, Mr. Mack the most seriously of the three, his leg being badly hurt.

FELLED AND ROBBED ON A BRIDGE.

Two Thugs Get $2,000, Escape in a Sleigh and then Take to the Woods.

Special to the Times.

DERBY, Conn., Feb. 13.—A daring robbery was committed at 10 a.m. today on the iron bridge between this city and Shelton. M. H. Spaulding, thirty years old, a clerk in the office of R. & H. Adams, cotton goods manufacturers, of this city and Paterson, N.J., was robbed of $2,000, the week's pay-roll, which he had just drawn from the Birmingham National Bank and was carrying to the office of the concern.

Spaulding had reached the west end of the bridge when he was knocked down by a severe blow on the head. Then a man jumped from a passing sleigh, grabbed the bag containing the $2,000, and sprang into the sleigh, followed by the man who had struck Spaulding. They drove off at a rapid rate in the direction of Stratford, but after going a mile and a half abandoned the sleigh and took to the woods. The team had been hired at I. E. Alling's livery stable, in this city at 9 a.m.

A sheriff's posse is in pursuit of the thieves.

READY TO SQUEAL.

A Toronto Boodler Will Reveal the Whole Conspiracy.

Special to the Times.

TORONTO, Feb. 13.—Negotiations are said to be pending between one of the ex aldermen implicated in the recent boodle enquiry and the Crown authorities, by which a full statement of certain transactions will be made public. The ex-aldermen in question will not consent to tell what he knows unless he is assured of immunity from prosecution, and it is on this point that the matter hinges. It is learned also that H. A. Everett is feeling very sore over the way all the odium of improper conduct has been cast upon him. He is said to be determined to make the other directors of the company bear their share of the blame, and he is now considering the best means of attaining that end. The coming session of the investigation promises to be the most startling of all.

PUNISHMENT IN SCHOOL.

A Principal and Teacher Fined for Flogging a Boy.

Special to the Times.

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 14.—In the Police Court, this morning, Principal McJanet and Teacher Brown, of the Central Public school were both fined $1 and costs for flogging a boy.

The Watters' case was enlarged until Tuesday.

Just half the Dominion voters' lists have been received by the Clerk of the Crown, all of which have been revised and ready for distribution to their respective electoral districts. Lists will be received until the 28th, and it will only be a few weeks later when the entire work will have been ready.

Under the circumstances it is almost safe to say the Government will decide on an election at the caucus to be held on Saturday.

IN THE NEW DIOCESE.

The Low Church Party at Ottawa Take Offence at the Archbishop's Action.

Special to the Times.

OTTAWA, Feb. 14.—The Low Church party among the Anglican bodies here have made the first definite move in the history of this diocese.

Offence has been taken at the refusal of Archbishop Lewis to ordain a graduate of Wycliffe college and this is the basis of a movement calculated to secure the election of a Low Church bishop for the new diocese of Ottawa.

NO FIGHT IN HIM.

His Dukeship of Parma Declines to be Perforated.

Special to the Times.

PARIS, Feb. 14.—In consequence of a quarrel which occurred on the occasion of the recent funeral of the ex King of Naples, the Comte De Bari sent a challenge for a duel to the Duke of Parma. The latter has written the Comte a letter in reply to the challenge, in which he says that on the occasion of the dispute he said more than he meant to, and in view of the time which has elapsed since the difference, he declines to appoint seconds.

Wolves in Italy.

ROME, Feb. 14.—Hundreds of hungry wolves from the Alps have invaded the plains in the province of Piedmont, northern Italy, and several villagers have been killed by them. The authorities have sent troops to shoot the wolves.

THREE KILLED.

Through the Collapse of a Burning Building in Lynn, Mass.—Three Fireman Killed—Volunteers to the Rescue.

Special to the Times.

LYNN, Mass., Feb. 14.—At 8 p.m. tonight fire was discovered in the basement of the hardware store of W. H. Hutchinson, on Monroe street, two alarms were sounded. The firemen found a brisk fire burning and clouds of smoke pouring out of all the lower windows. The building was of wood and was four storeys high. After three-quarters of an hour the flames suddenly appeared through the roof and almost simultaneously the building collapsed like an eggshell. The front on Monroe street fell into the street, and the side fell into an alley way toward the adjoining building, which is of brick. A dozen firemen were buried in the debris in the alley way. Willing volunteers sprang to the rescue. The firemen were dangerously near the spot where they lay buried, and all the available streams of water were brought to bear on this point. The work of rescue went on rapidly, and in half an hour 11 firemen had been taken out. Three of them were dead or died in a few minutes after being out. They were Capt. Henry L. Skinner, of chemical No. 1; Thomas Murray, of engine No. 3; John Donlan, of steamer No. 3. The injured, as far as known, are: A. C. Moody, of hose 3, shoulder dislocated and internally injured; Leo Billor, of hose 4, shoulder dislocated and otherwise injured; George Middleton, of steamer 5, back injured and severely burned; William Minton, of chemical 1, badly crushed; Nicholas Weber, jr., of steamer 3, sprained ankle and internal injuries; William R. Hunt, of hose 4, back injured; Charles Corson, of engine 4, back injured and badly crushed.

THE MONTREAL END.

A Warrant Against H. P. Hyams Granted in Montreal.

Special to the Times.

MONTREAL, Feb. 14.—H. P. and D. T. Hyams, now under arrest in Toronto, are well enough known in Montreal, where they for some time had an office in the Temple building, and conducted a financial agency business. One of their transactions came before Judge Dugas yesterday, in connection with the application by Wm. Morrison for a warrant against H. P. Hyams, on a charge of altering a note after the maker had signed it. The note was produced before the Judge, the complainant alleging that after he had signed it there was added to it the words "this note to bear interest at ten per cent. per month until paid in full." The note was made to pay off another in a third party's hands, which bore also a very high rate of interest.

Judge Dugas granted the warrant, and a request was telegraphed to Toronto to hold H. P. Hyams for forgery, in case he should be released.

The brothers advertised that they gave loans on salaries, pianos, organs, warehouse receipts, etc. They represented that their office was in Toronto, but that loans could be negotiated in Montreal. For a time they did a rushing business. Last December H. P. Hyams had to pawn a considerable quantity of jewellery, over a $1,000 worth. At first the pawnbroker declined to receive it, but when Hyams went off and brought a bank officials to say that it was all right, he gave the money asked for. This was on Dec. 3rd last. Later, Messrs. Ellis & Co., Toronto, sent word to Chief Detective Callen that Hyams had disposed of jewelry that he owed them for. That officer at once made a round of the pawn shops and found where the goods had been pawned, but also that they had been taken out some days after, as Hyams had sold the ticket to a party who released the goods. Messrs. Ellis were communicated with and their agent in Montreal, Mr. Stevenson, did his best to recover the goods, but so far without success.

LONDON, Feb. 14.—Sir Thomas Roe, member of Parliament for Derby, has given notice in the House of Commons that tomorrow he will ask the Government what information has reached them in reference to the imposition of the death sentence upon W. H. Rickard, a British subject, for alleged participation in a revolt in Hawaii.

TO SURRENDER ALL.

China Ready to Surrender Arms, Ships and Forts.

Special to The Times.

LONDON, Feb. 14.—A report has been received from Wei Hai-Wei, that the Chinese gun boats in the harbor under the protection of a flag of truce, conveyed to the Japanese fleet a proposal by Admiral Ting to surrender all of the Chinese ships, arms and forts, provided the lives of the crews, soldiers and foreigners were guaranteed. Under these conditions the terms of a formal surrender are being arranged.

In the fighting since Jan. 29 the Japanese have lost 83 killed, 219 wounded, and the Chinese 700 in killed alone.

Famishing Farmers Break into Railway Cars to Obtain Food to Eat.

Special to the Times.

OMAHA, Neb., Feb. 14.—A special from Kearney, Neb., says: Considerable excitement has been caused here by about 30 farmers with half as many teams coming in from Kearney county for relief supplies. They broke into a car on the Union Pacific track and commenced helping themselves.

The County Commissioners tried to stop them but could not, and after they started to drive away they were brought back by the police. It is reported that 60 teams are on the way here from Custer county for relief supplies.

FERDINAND EXPELLED.

A Report that Bulgaria People Have Tired of Their Ruler.

Special to the Times.

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—A cable from Berlin to an American paper says: "A report is current here this evening that Prince Ferdinand, ruler of Bulgaria, has been expelled from that country and has fled to Roumania. Enquiries made in various political quarters in this city have thus far failed to confirm the rumor."

Ferdinand was elected Prince of Bulgaria by the unanimous vote of the National Assembly on July 7th, 1887, in succession to Prince Alexander, who abdicated on Sept. 7th, 1886.

WELLS' BODY EXHUMED.

FURTHER DEVELOPMENTS IN THE HYAMS' MURDER CASE.

The Hyams Furniture Sold—Record of the Brothers in New York—They Estreated Bail to the Amount of $5,000.

Special to the Times.

OSHAWA, Feb. 14.—This morning shortly after nine o'clock Crown Attorney Curry of Toronto, Dr. John Caven, Detective Alf. Cuddy, E. W. A. Aylesworth left Toronto for the grave of young William C. Wells, who is alleged to have been murdered by Harry P. Hyams on Jan. 16, 1893.

The party reached Oshawa about eleven o'clock, and Mr. Curry, who was armed with authority from the Attorney-General's department, saw the caretaker of the cemetery, which is three miles from the town, and arranged to have the body of the alleged victim exhumed. Three feet of snow is on the roads about this place, and the cemetery was only reached after plowing through it.

Two grave diggers were put to work removing the deep snow and the solidly frozen earth, and at three o'clock they reached the coffin.

The arrival of the Toronto party in town created a sensation, and many people drove out to the cemetery.

THEIR RECORDS IN NEW YORK.

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—Harry Place and Dallas Hyams have an unenviable reputation in New York. They started a bogus real estate office on Broadway in 1881. They swindled Emmanuel Martinez out of $1,400 and were arrested by Detective Sergeant Heidelberg.

The case was subsequently withdrawn but the pair were arrested again in Jersey City one month later for another real estate swindle, but they jumped their bail of $5,000, and so far as can be ascertained have since remained in Canada.

THE FURNITURE SOLD.

TORONTO, Feb. 14.—A big crowd attended the sale of Dallas T. Hyams' furniture at 57 Gould street today, the house being filled to suffocation. Auctioneer Wm. Dickson was engaged all day selling about $4,000 worth of goods.

The Hyams had evidently spent more money in bric-a-brac than in costly furniture. The latter was of the ordinary kind and not as expensive as had been stated. The house, however, was overstocked with fancy things which went cheap.

The Times.

PETERBOROUGH, FEBRUARY 15, 1895.

Good morning!

Sir Richard's himself again. He had begun to fear that the representative for South Oxford was some other fellow.

A French count who is to marry Miss Gould will receive $2,000,000 from the American heiress as part of the marriage contract. There are lots of men who would have married the girl for less than half that sum.

High angle fire gun mountings and turrets tried on the Centurion, Admiral Fremantle's flagship in China, and with electric motors on the Barfleur, have proved satisfactory, and will be applied to the new Renown. The system finds favor because it is independent of steam and hydraulic power, and can be worked by hand.

Opposition to the use of the anti-toxine treatment for diphtheria has already taken an organized form in England. A deputation headed by Lord Coleridge has protested to the authorities against its use in the hospitals on the ground that "public money ought not to be devoted to experiments in psychology."

It is proposed to make the port of Bristol, England, accessible to trans-Atlantic vessels at all times by damming the River Avon at its mouth and using locks. According to the plans of the engineers, a constant depth of thirty-two feet can be obtained, and the necessary docks and breakwaters constructed for $11,000,000.

Scotland is rapidly building up a school of music of its own. A successful Scottish opera, "Jeanie Deans," was brought out this fall, and recently at one concert in Edinburg two new cantatas by Scottish composers were given—Mr. Drysdale's "The Kelpie," based on Charles Mackay's well-known ballad, and Mr. Barratt's Sir Patrick Spens."

They are so alarmed in Germany for fear that the next child soon to be born to the Emperor and Empress will be a boy that prayers have been offered in some of the churches by the superstitious, not to say unscientific, subjects of the empire to avert the calamity. According to an old prophecy, the Hohenzollern dynasty will surely fall when an emperor has seven son and William is already the father of six.

This season's crazes in Europe have been collected by an Italian editor. In England it is clay modelling, the chief victims being Mr. Gladstone and Sir William Harcourt; in Paris it is riddles, in Italy and Southern France it is jumping beans, painted to represent prominent persons; they jump best on hot plates. In Belgium they have slow smoking races; the pipes are filled with half an ounce of tobacco each, and the winner is he who can hold out longest without relighting. The record so far is sixty-seven minutes.

There are a dozen vacancies in the Senate and names are constantly being suggested for filling up the gaps, but the Government seems disinclined to make any move in the matter. It is not in evidence that any one would shed more than four or five bitter tears if no attempt should be made to keep the Senate going, allowing it to quietly fade away and die like the blossoms that bloom in the spring tra la. You can count the senators who amount to more than a pinch of snuff on the fingers of one hand, but even if the brainless men in the country were in the Senate it would never be of any real value to the country.

THE FEES COMMISSION.

The commission appointed at the last session of the Legislature in deference to the agitation regarding the manner of appointing and paying certain public officials, will meet in the course of a week or so to wind up its business and prepare its report. It is highly improbable that the commission will recommend a change from the appointive to the elective system, which will be a sore disappointment to the Patrons, but the manner of paying officials will likely come in for a good deal of criticism and a revision will be suggested. The plan will be to fix maximum salaries for each fee paid official, the fees received from the public to go into the public treasury.

This is a common sense way of arranging matters that will commend itself to everybody outside of the ranks of the Patrons, but as the Patrons are not now a particularly important factor in provincial politics no one need lose any sleep on this account. The great majority of people are convinced that the elective method of filling public offices is bad in system and worse in practice. The appointive system may have its faults, but it is certainly preferable to the other. And when you come to think it out, its serious faults are not very serious faults. Occasionally a mistake is made, the wrong man is appointed and trouble results. But on the whole it works smoothly and satisfactorily.

In arranging the basis of payment the great thing is to get away from the excessive remuneration that now prevails in some quarters. Sheriff Mowat of Toronto, a son of Sir Oliver, now receives about eight thousand dollars a year. We do not think it will be pretended for a moment that he earns anything like that sum. Three or four thousand dollars would be a generous reward for his none two arduous services. Many a competent man would be glad the work for less. The province can afford to treat its employes justly, but it is a little too much to expect it to pay Sheriff Mowat more for being sheriff than it pays his father for being Attorney General.

THE "ADVANCED WOMAN."

We agree with the New York Sun, that the "advanced woman" will have to tackle Canon du Moulin of Toronto. He has preached a sermon against her in which he told her that she must totter to her fall, for she is unscriptural, has forsaken her household duties, and has become a keen rival of man. "The time is not far distant," cried the Toronto canon, "when women will be deposed from the throne she has usurped, and be driven back to her own domestic domain." We shall look on quietly while this canon of the Episcopal faith drives her back. As yet, we must doubt whether he or anybody else can do it, whether she can be driven out of politics, the halls of learning, the reform business, the professions, the field of science and philosophy, the ordinary industries, and all the other temptations which beset her. She is entitled to liberty and has a right to pursue happiness in her own way, even outside the domestic domain. It will be a job for a cannon to turn her mind.

It seems to us that the canon is too severe upon the advanced woman. We do not believe he knows her. We hardly think there is any ground for his fear that she is destitute of womanhood or wants to acquire manhood. We are rather disposed to entertain the opinion that after all has been said against her, she is a good deal of a woman, and has in her prime qualities of the original woman. She is often handsome, too

Frank's Leslie's Popular Monthly

FOR MARCH.

In the March number of FRANK LESLIE'S POPULAR MONTHLY the wonderful story of the life and inventions of Thomas Alva Edison is set forth, in an article by Henry Tyrrell, with the apparent purpose of contrasting an actual living hero, a modern conqueror of science, with the dark and sinister shadow of Napoleon as projected anew by the curious contemporary revival of his sanguinary legend. The paper is accompanied with some interesting illustrations, including new portraits of Edison, of his parents, wife, children, and scientific collaborators. Other important contributions to this unusually full and interesting number of FRANK LESLIE'S POPULAR MONTHLY are: M. V. Moore's striking account of "The Great Salt Lake and Mormondom"; Captain H. D. Smith's stirring and patriotic account of "The United States Revenue Cutter Flag"; a delightful art paper upon "Camoes and Cut Gems," by Theo. Tracy; "How bronze Statues are Cast," with the latest works of American sculptors, by S. Millington Miller: "Bulgarian Village Life," picturesquely illustrated by Celia R. Ladd; Personal Reminiscences of Charles Reade, by Howard Paul, and of Anton Rubinstein, by Mrs. W. K. L. Dickson; and a practical article, with many distinguished canine portraits, on Dogs and their Keeping," by S. H. Ferris. There are good short stories and pomes by Charles Edwardes, Louise Morgan Sill, Gertrude F. Lynch, Jessie M. Andrews, H. E. Armstrong, Julia D. Young, Annie L. Muzzey, Ernest Delancey Pierson, Norman Gale, and others.

NAOMI

that I am here. Leonard Saltmarshe died two months ago."

"Ah," she said as if to herself, shuddering the while, I thought, "that explains it, then—that explains it. It is as I feared." Then she went on: "Mr. Saltmarshe—or may I call you cousin?—there is a story which I must tell you before—before Luke returns. I am Leonard Saltmarshe's only child. Luke is neither his son nor my brother. He is my dead mother's nephew. But I was brought up to believe myself his sister, and it is only the other day that I learned the truth. He has known it all along."

"But how is it," I asked, "that you are out here in the wilds? Did not your father and mother live together?"

"Only for two years after their marriage, which took place in Chicago. My mother always said that his temper was so violent that she could not stay with him. So she ran away, taking me with her, and supported herself as best she could by her needle. Luke was her sister's child, and mother took him when my aunt died. Then my mother died when I was 12 years old. But first she gave me a little box, which I was not to open till I was 20. I was 20 last May, and when I opened the packet I found a letter from my mother telling me that Luke was not my brother. I had no one to protect me, and she wanted me to think myself his sister. That was the reason she gave, and she added that when I was 20 it would be right for me to know the truth."

"So Luke has always known that you were not his sister, but you have only lately discovered it?" I said.

"Yes," she answered. "I have not told him yet that I know."

"Am I right in supposing that you are afraid of Luke?" I asked.

She hesitated and turned the question aside. Seeing the absolute necessity of gaining her confidence, I told her exactly how matters lay and asked her what I had best do under the altered circumstances. We both agreed that the only safe course would be to treat Luke as if he were a genuine claimant for the present, and as if I and Naomi were still in ignorance of the truth. I was powerless to aid Naomi or move myself till I had obtained a remittance from my bankers in New York.

"Even without his knowing that we are aware of his designs, you will have to be careful," said Naomi. "Luke is dangerous if thwarted, and this is a lawless place."

There was a firm step outside, and a young man strode into the cabin. He was of medium height, with sandy hair and complexion. He had a furtive look and paused a moment on the threshold to eye me askance.

"Luke, here is a cousin from England," Naomi said. "Won't you bid him welcome?"

For a moment he hesitated, as if making up his mind. Then he came forward and gave me his hand. "Glad to see you!" he said. "Guess you've come over after the old man's dollars—that so?"

"Yes," I said, "but as I find another claim with more right than mine I shall go home again quite contented."

"That's all right, then," said Luke. "Stay as long as you like and make yourself comfortable. Naomi will fix you up."

After this he became more and more hospitable. He listened with an air of interest to my story of the coach robbery and offered to lend me a few dollars till I heard from New York, but I said not a word to enlighten him as to my knowledge of his having claimed Leonard Saltmarshe's money for himself alone without mentioning Naomi. I wished to try to fathom him without raising his suspicions. In the course of that evening's friendly conversation Luke informed us that he had been to Parson's City that morning to buy a horse.

The next few days passed quickly enough. Naomi and I became fast friends, and whenever she had the chance she told me much of her early life. But Luke took care that we were seldom alone. He haunted the cabin under the pretense of entertaining me and pressed attentions which were almost servile. He avoided talking of his claim or the solicitors, but when obliged to speak of it always inferred that Naomi was to share his good fortune. It was understood that I was to remain at any rate till the remittance for which I had written to New York arrived.

When I had been at Golden Falls three weeks, an incident occurred which had its effect on after events. I came out of the cabin one morning and found Luke brutally thrashing Indian Joe, the half breed boy who fetched and carried for Naomi. In my horror at the cruel treatment I called Luke a blackguard. To my surprise, he left the lad alone and apologized to me humbly, making some excuse about his temper. When I told Naomi of this, she was much agitated Luke's civility she felt sure was dangerous.

The next day I was sitting alone in the cabin reading a week old newspaper. Naomi had gone up the ravine to hunt for some herbs among the rocks, and Luke had started off after breakfast to his "cradle" to wash for gold. Suddenly the door of the cabin burst open and Luke dashed in. "For God's sake, cousin"—he always called me cousin—"get on my nag and ride for Dr. Bell at Parson's City. Naomi has fallen over a crag up yonder. I'm afraid her back is broken. She can't be moved, and I must get back to her right away."

Horrified as I was and anxious to go to her, there was no need for Luke to press me into the service. In two minutes I was mounted and listening to Luke's final instructions. "Take the path you came by till you strike the coach road," he said, "then along the road till you come to the city. Any one will tell you where the doc lives. Bring him back at all risks and ride like thunder!"

The sure footed horse—a large, rawboned chestnut—carried me safely up the rocky sides of the ravine. Once on the top I dug my heels into his sides and made him gallop his best. The ground, though level, had a broken surface, but with Naomi lying there injured, perhaps fatally, what cared I for the risk of a broken neck! We flew along regardless of stones and the frequent burrows of prairie dogs. I had reached a spot three miles from the coach road when I thought I heard a shout. Looking around, I saw some 20 or 30 mounted men following in my tracks. They were galloping their hardest, and some of the best mounted were overhauling me. For a moment I wondered what it meant. Had Naomi's peril started off the whole of Golden Falls in search of a doctor? That had nothing to do with me. I had promised to go to Parson's City, and whether I arrived there first or last thither I would go. I sent my horse along with a will.

But there were fleeter footed than the chestnut behind me. As we entered the coach road three of my pursuers dashed alongside, and before I could realize what they were doing pointed their pistols at my head. "Halt, you durned horse thief, or we'll down you!" cried one of the miners.

I pulled up to explain. Before I had opened my mouth they had me off the horse. Two of them held me fast while the remainder of the party came straggling up.

"For heaven's sake," I said, "whatever blunder you are making over me, let one of you ride on for the doctor! It may be too late else."

"It's uncommon little good a doctor will do you in this job, my lad," said one of my captors. "Here, Luke," he added, as Naomi's soi disant brother rode up on a borrowed steed, "we've took him, you see."

Luke came up to where I stood. "What does this mean?" I asked. "You told me Naomi was hurt and asked me to ride for the doctor."

"That be hanged for a yarn. You had better tell that to the court. You stole the horse, you dirty tenderfoot!" replied Luke, loosing his pent up hatred at last. I saw that I was trapped, but I rejoiced that Naomi's supposed fall was but part of Luke's device.

"Come, boys, form the court," said one of the older men. "There's a handy tree on yonder bluff ready for the Britisher."

Thus it was that I found myself on trial for my life, for horse stealing is a hanging business in Dakota, before the dreaded Judge Lynch. Luke's perjured evidence was fatal. He swore that my story of having been sent for the doctor was false; that I had arrived at Golden Falls a mere penniless loafer, and that I had requited his charity by robbing him of his horse. I looked round on the rugged faces of my captors and saw there was no hope for mercy. I was absolutely without proof of my innocence.

It was all over in five minutes. The court pronounced me "guilty," and I was told to say my prayers. But just as the sentence was uttered there was the clatter and rattle of wheels, and round Blackman's Corner came the Parson's City mail coach, the self same vehicle in which I had been victimized by the "road agents."

The driver pulled up as he came abreast the crowd. I saw that my old acquaintance, the one eyed guard, was in charge. He got down and strolled over to where the miner who had overtaken me was still holding the chestnut horse. "Going to hang him, boys?" he asked after a moment's scrutiny.

"That's so," was the reply.

"Where is the cuss?" asked the guard.

"That's him," said one of the men, pointing to where I stood with my hands bound behind me.

The guard recognized me, with a start. "Pah!" he said, "you're foolin. That Britisher was along with us, a passenger, when the agents stuck us up. He couldn't have stole the hoss, or the dust either, for the matter of that."

"What do you mean?" asked the miner who had acted as judge. "No one's talkin about dust."

"I am, though," said the guard shortly. "I tell you that is the horse the road agents lifted, and it stands to reason that the man as lifted the horse lifted your dust, don't it?"

There was a murmur of wrath among the miners. All eyes were turned on Luke. He began to move toward the edge of the crowd, but rough hands restrained him, and the leader said very quietly, "You will have to show where you got that hoss, Luke, before you make tracks."

"It ain't a matter of showin where he got the hoss, I reckon," said the guard. "Leastways not altogether. See! He's a button short in the center of his shirt. Guess I can find the missing shiner to match," and he pulled out of his pocket a bright metal fancy button, engraved with a phenix, the exact counterpart of the showy fastenings Luke wore in his hunting shirt.

"Go on. What of that?" shouted the crowd.

"I picked up that button on the ground where we were robbed," said the guard, "right here by the corner. It got hitched off as the galoot cut the traces of that bald faced chestnut. I saw it drop. I guess that ought to be enough for you."

It was. "What say you, boys? Shall we hang him?" asked the judge. And amid a storm of "ayes" Luke was dragged, pale and trembling, to the tree. As the fatal spot was reached he braced himself up with an effort and pointed to me. I was still bound between two of the men. "Boys," he said, "if I tell you where the dust is hid, will you hang that cursed Englishman alongside me?"

"No, by gum, we wouldn't hang a dog on your evidence, you traitor, that sold your pals!" said the judge. "Up with him, lads!"

It was not till a year later that, safe in the security of our English home, Naomi told me quite all there was to tell about Luke. She had reason to believe that in the interval between hearing of her father's death and my arrival he had twice attempted her life—once by means of a reputed "accident" with his revolver and again by persuading her to cross the mountain torrent at a dangerous spot. In all probability my rash trip out west was the means of preserving the life as well as the fortune of the heiress of Golden Falls. But I am more than repaid.

My character was fully re established among the miners on our return to camp. The boy, Indian Joe, had overheard Luke pressing me to take the horse to ride for the doctor. Needless to say, Naomi's fall from the crag was a fiction designed to send me to a merciless death.—Chambers' Journal.

The Doctor, Architect, the Public.

A physician's prescription is an empirical formula intended to alleviate abnormal physical conditions indicated by a scientific diagnosis. The prescription being written in characters incomprehensible to the layman, he is content in his avowed ignorance to abstain from an attempt to inquire into the rationale of the diagnosis.

An architectural design is a scientific, logical deduction from certain fundamental facts unfortunately presented in more or less artistic form. This form conveys an idea to the intelligent mind of varying artistic merit. The more obtuse the observer the better he will like it. To critically place it at its true value requires analytical acumen of the highest order. Hence it is that men select their physicians, lawyers, engineers, etc., by consulting the opinion of experts as to professional merit, or, what is equivalent to this, by their reputation, but they can judge of the merits of an architect by their likes and dislikes of his drawings.—L. Eidlitz in Architectural Record.

Holmes on Poetry.

When I feel inclined to read poetry, I take down my dictionary. The poetry of words is quite as beautiful as that of sentences. The author may arrange the gems effectively, but their shape and luster have been given by the attrition of ages. Bring me the finest simile from the whole range of imaginative writing, and I will show you a single word which conveys a more profound, a more accurate and a more eloquent analogy.—"Autocrat of the Breakfast Table."

A SUPERIOR MULE.

RUNT HAS TRAITS THAT WIN PRIVILIGES FOR HIM.

His Ability as a Kicker Is Remarkable Even For an Army Mule—A Gunshot Puts Him at His Best—His Terrible Battle With the White Wolf.

Runt is a mule. His career has been checkered, and his life has been full of ups and downs. He is 18 years old. He has long since passed the time in life when even a mule has a fighting show to be beautiful.

Yet Runt is famous, and money cannot buy him. He was born in Mississippi and when 8 years old joined the regular army, going to Fort Bliss, Tex. He served five years there and then was transferred to Fort Stanton, N. M. When the Thirteenth regiment moved to Fort Sill, Runt went with them. He served faithfully until three years ago, when he was retired as a veteran. The first hard service in the field that Runt met was in 1884. In the first skirmish he was wounded by his friends. It was in August. Runt was one of eight mules hauling a wagon of a government train from Carthage, N. M., to Fort Stanton. Two companies of the Thirteenth guarded the wagons. Twenty miles out of Carthage the Apaches attacked the train. As the Apaches circled about, yelling and firing, Runt got nervous. Finally with a kick and a squeal he broke away from his harness and galloped straight toward the Apaches. The Indians at once bore down on Runt to capture him. The soldiers made ready to fire.

"Blaze away!" said Sergeant Ray. "He's got no business there."

The soldiers fired. The Indians scattered, leaving Runt alone. Runt hesitated, and a second volley poured forth. One of the bullets struck his tail. With a snort he lowered his head, planted his fore feet firmly and began to kick. He kicked until he fell over exhausted. The teamsters then caught him and tied him to one of the wagons. But his first campaign ruined Runt as a soldier. No matter where he was after that, whether in harness, at the feed trough or in pasture, if a gun was fired Runt would lower his head and kick until he fell exhausted.

Runt lost his ear 11 months ago. The companies at Fort Sill live far better than any others in the army. Beef is cheap and game is abundant. Each company has a party of hunters continually in the field. These parties hunt in the Wichita mountains. White wolves are more plentiful in those hills than perhaps in any other part of America. In fact, elsewhere white wolves are seldom seen. The white wolf, so called, is of a gray color, much larger than the common wolf and far fiercer. Hunters dread him equally with the mountain panther.

Runt, of his own accord, joined one of the hunting parties going up into the mountains. Steve Shipper, the most noted bear hunter in the Oklahoma country, was one of the hunters. The men set their camp about 22 miles from Fort Sill, on the Signal range. Panthers and wolves were so plentiful at night that the men took turns keeping watch. The horses and mules were picketed within the circle. Runt alone refused to submit to the halter. He would back away and threaten to snap the picket line until he was freed. At night he would roam about in the fire's light, occasionally wandering out into the darkness, but returning very shortly.

The fourth day before Christmas two wagons loaded with game were sent to Fort Sill. In the evening, after they had gone, Shipper brought in a big buck. It was decided to have a buck roast. A monster spit was rigged up, a big fire was kindled, and soon the odor of juicy meat, properly cooked, filled the woods. The panthers, the wolves and the coyotes hurried toward it. As the time passed a circle of wild beasts crouched on their haunches or stole softly about on the edge of light, howling, yelping and barking. Old Runt was in great spirits. He cavorted about, threatening several times to kick the buck into the fire. As the rich odor floated forth the beasts prowling about became bolder, and occasionally a coyote would sneak into the open space, only to retreat before a brand of burning wood. A big white wolf, bolder than his fellows, twice sprang into the circle and snapped once at one of the horses and once at the skin of the buck. Runt was walking slowly to and fro in the shadow far from the fire. Suddenly there was a howl, a snort, and the white wolf sprang through the air and lit on Runt's shoulders. The mule trembled and squealed. He backed and shivered and shook, but he did not kick. The white wolf sunk his teeth deep into Runt's neck and used his claws, tearing the mule's flesh. As the wolf clawed Runt seemed to become powerless, probably through fear.

The hunters crowded around trying to get a shot at the wolf. Finally Shipper seized a big burning stick and thrust it over Runt's neck into the wolf's face. With a snarl the wolf opened his jaws. He clung fast with his claws, however. As Shipper thrust forward the burning wood a second time the wolf shifted his position until he crouched on Runt's back. This gave Tom McGrath an opportunity to shoot him.

"Bang!" went McGrath's rifle. The bullet missed. The wolf was untouched.

But with the report a great change took place in Runt. From a frightened, helpless animal he was transformed into a fighting, kicking mule. He bucked and kicked and rolled. The hunters were forced to beat a retreat to the wagons. From there they watched the fight. The wolf held fast, and as Runt rolled, the wolf would creep quickly round or loosen his grasp until the mule rose again.

At length Runt in rolling worked the wolf back to his hind quarters. Quick as a flash the old mule sprang to his feet, lowered his head and let fly his heels. He caught the wolf full in the side. The impact of the blow was like the crack of a black snake whip. The clutch of the wolf gave way, and he sailed through the air, landing in the heart of the fire. He sprang away, but Shipper shot him before he reached the outer darkness. The distance he was kicked was measured by the men and found to be 21 feet. Runt continued to kick until he was lassoed and hobbled and tied to one of the wagons. The singed skin of the white wolf is in Shipper's possession and is one of the treasures of the old hunter. He shows it to prove that old Runt bested the white wolf. Runt's left ear, or rather what remains of it, and his worthless eye bear out Shipper in his story.—Fort Sill (O. T.) Cor. New York Sun.

A CHURCH BURNED.

The North End of the Wall Fell But the Firemen Miraculously Got out of the Way and Were Not Seriously Injured—Loss Estimated at $25,000.

Special to The Times.

LONDON, Ont., Feb. 13.—Once more the Methodist denomination of this city is subjected to a severe loss in the destruction by fire about two o'clock this morning of the Dundas street Methodist church.

In less than an hour after the alarm was given the church was nothing but a ruin, its destruction being as complete as that of its sister church on Queen's avenue, which was destroyed ten days ago. While the firemen were fighting the flames the north end gable wall fell and it is astonishing that a number of firemen were not buried in the ruins. As it was, Chief Roe and Firemen McDonald and Riddle were badly cut and shaken up.

Incendiarism is strongly suspected, although the fire started in the rear of the church near the furnace. The loss is $25,000; insurance $15,000.

108 CABLE CARS BURNED.

CHICAGO, Feb. 13.—Fire broke out in the car barns and power house of Lincoln avenue cable line late last night. It originated in some oiled rags and spread with such rapidity throughout the barn that it was almost impossible to save any of the cars which had all been run in for the night.

Of 120 passenger and grip cars stored in the barn but nine were saved. The firemen managed to confine the flames to the storage barn. During a portion of the time there was grave apprehension lest a tank containing 320,000 gallons of crude petroleum which the company used for fuel should become ignited, as it was but a few feet from the blazing barn. The total loss on building and cars is estimated at $300,000.

CARRIAGE FACTORY IN ASHES.

SOUTH MOUNTAIN, Dundas County, Ont., Feb. 13.—The carriage factory of Robert Blow and the shop of W. Bailey were burned this morning at 9 o'clock.

Damage to buildings and contents amounts to about $15,000. No insurance.

ED. BLAKE AND TIM HEALY.

These Two Irish Patriots Do Not Seem to Agree.

Special to the Times.

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—Harold Frederic, in his cable letter, says: The Nationalist feeling against the committee of the Irish party resulted last week in putting the new executive of the Irish federation into the hands of the Healyites. Instead of appreciating this warning, the committee this week, by the votes of its salaried dependents in the party, put T. D. Sullivan off its board and brought in the place of this accomplished scholar and poet a local butcher named Tom Condon, who, on the score of either intellect or manners, could hardly have obtained an appointment on Tammany's police force. This final debasement of the committee was the last straw, and Healy resigned from it. The explanation which he will publicly offer is characteristic of the state that Irish politics have reached already.

Blake has deliberately misrepresented him in New York, and others have done the same thing here. He will not serve on a committee where he will have no witness to protect him from the falsehoods of his colleagues. His section of the party, consisting almost wholly of men who do not draw salaries from the party fund, has made a protest at a meeting against the party's asking for more money from America or elsewhere until the mysteries enveloping the partition of the Paris Parliamentary fund and other financial transactions are cleared up.

The Sun's correspondent says: The crisis in the Irish party has reached even a more serious phase than the dilemma of the Liberals. Mr. Healy has this week practically withdrawn from the Nationalist party. There are grave reasons to believe he is now reckless enough to assume the responsibility of wrecking the Government by default if not by direct attack. Two of his followers absented themselves from Friday night's critical division, reducing the Government's majority to 12. This policy if applied to the vote on the principal opposition amendment to the address ten days hence will overthrow the Government. It is becoming plain that Mr. Healy's desire for immediate dissolution is due to his belief that he will gain a much greater following in Ireland if the election is held soon, because the Nationalists party is almost without funds for election purposes. Mr. Healy's open opposition this week to the Nationalist appeal for this class of funds makes his animus clear.

EX-GOV. ANTHONY ACCUSED.

Said to Have Accepted $6,000 for a Decision in a Railroad Case.

Special to the Times.

TOPEKA, Kan., Feb. 13.—The Senate Committee appointed to investigate the charges against ex-Gov. Geo. T. Anthony, whose name was sent to the Senate by Gov. Morrell for confirmation as State Superintendent of Insurance, has received an affidavit which apparently convicts him of corruption in office. The affidavit, which was made by S. S. West in 1893, avers that Anthony acted as agent for the Union Terminal Railway Company to negotiate with the State Board of Railroad Commissioners for a decision in a case pending before the board in which a valuable crossing in Kansas City, Kan., was involved; that the terminal company purchased a decision by the payment of $15,000, of which deponent received $1,250, George T. Anthony $6,000, Al Green $6,500 and William B. Mitchell $[illegible]. The Board of Commissioners at that time consisted of Anthony, Green, and Mitchell.

DREAMLAND.

It is a land not far from us where souls
  May sometimes walk in sleep—a dim, vast land,
 Older than Egypt, full of rivers spanned
With mist. Broad meads it hath and moonlit knolls,
Whereon the purple asphodel unrolls
  And many a pale death flower. Wide open stand
Its gates all night, whence dreams in riotous band
  Press, thronging, to the couch of sleep till tolls
The matin bell. Then, nimble as a thought,
 All vanish, save some luckless elf in nets
O strange, mad sprites, whom fantasy begets
 Ye bring the dead back, ye do strong hearts break
 For some lost treasure, some sweet memory's sake.

FUN FOR THE PLAIN GIRLS.

But Honors Were Easy Between the Two Pretty Ones, the Rivals.

They had certainly been rivals, and when she came to call the two plain girls who had dropped in to offer their congratulations decided not to go yet. The hostess greeted her warmly and gave her a chair facing the light, and then the two plain girls rejoiced that they had not departed the first time they rose to go. It was sure to be interesting.

"How well you are looking, dear!" said the hostess. "Your hair is really much more becoming than when it was its natural color."

"How kind of you to say it, dear, especially when your own blondining turned out so badly! By the way, you were not at Genevieve's luncheon. What a pity that she forgot you! I'm sure she didn't leave you out intentionally."

"Oh, I couldn't have gone anyway. I—I had another engagement." The two plain girls giggled audibly.

"Oh, well, then, it wasn't so bad, after all! Still I told all the girls who were there how mean I thought it was of Genevieve to leave you out when you have so little pleasure."

"Thanks, but my pleasure is never dependent on dissipation. How pretty those magenta flowers on your hat are! What a pity the color is so trying!"

"Yes, of course you won't dare to wear it. Were you at Ida's tea yesterday?"

"No; I haven't been anywhere of late."

"Really it is too bad to be left out in that way. I shall ask Jessie to be sure to send you a card for her reception. It will be quite a crush. She is simply asking everybody."

"Don't trouble yourself, dear. You know I don't care to visit Jessie. Besides my time is really not my own now. I"—

"Oh, well, then"—

"Yes, Horace is so foolishly devoted to me. You know that we are to be married in January?"

She didn't know it, and she couldn't help changing color, but she rallied nobly.

"Why, no, indeed!" she cried. "I'm so glad to hear it! The poor fellow was so distressed when I told him in August that he really must give up hope. I've felt quite guilty ever since, and now I'm so glad that you have consented to console him."

And the two plain girls got up and said they really must go now, they had such a lot of calls to make.—Chicago Tribune.

A Story of John Bright.

John Bright went into an agricultural district one day and had to walk from the station a long way into the village. A clergyman who was driving in a dogcart overtook him, and learning his destination offered to drive him there. "Have you seen the papers today?" the parson asked when Mr. Bright had accepted a seat. "Yes. What is in them?" "Why, that rascal John Bright has been making another speech." "And what was it about?" asked Mr. Bright. The clergyman explained. "Well," said the stranger, "perhaps Mr. Bright was only expressing his honest convictions. Perhaps even he may be right." "Oh, no," said the irate clergyman. "If I had him here, I would feel like shooting him."

Before they separated Mr. Bright had promised to go to his new acquaintance's church next morning. The theme of the sermon was Bright's speech, and at the conclusion Mr. Bright thanked him for his able sermon. As the rector was going home to dinner a friend met him and said, "You have been preaching under distinguished patronage this morning." "No!" said the parson. "Oh, yes, you have," replied the friend. "You had John Bright among the congregation. Didn't you notice him in front, in the middle pew?" "Why," said the rector, "I drove him to the village yesterday in my dogcart and called him a rascal and excoriated him in all the moods and tenses, and he never said a word. I must go and apologize at once."—W. S. Walsh in Lippincott's.

Happy Retrospect.

Ministers have quite as many touching incidents as funny ones in their duty of performing the marriage ceremony for "all sorts and conditions of men." One such is told by a clergyman who lived at some distance from the populous part of the town, and who was therefore accustomed to suggest some conveyance to those couples who did not come in a carriage.

A middle aged man and woman who looked as if life might have been rather hard for them came one night to be married. The ceremony over, the minister said to them:

"Now, I'll tell you where to take a car. You know we are a long distance from everywhere."

The man turned to his bride with a look of sudden sweetness.

"Oh, no," said he gently, "I guess we won't ride! We'll just walk along a spell and talk it over."—Youth's Companion.

A Luminous Creed.

I am a believer in the idea of thought thingness.

In the negative suggestiveness of idea impressionism lies the receptivity of disease, the destructive influences of deterioration and decay undermining house of character and tenement of clay.

Though both dynamic force and static energy are necessary to the completion of things in the worship of homo brutalis of dynamic force alone, we see brutality triumphant in our religious, social, political and industrial affairs; hence sensation mongery as seen in high kicking females on stage boards, Jehovah Zeboath in religious circles, Colonel Mazuma in the political arena and Queen Fashion in all her eccentricities and freakishness in the social whirl.—Freedom.

The name of Peter's Point, Va., given a place because a trader named Peter Jones had a store there, was afterward changed to Petersburg.

AN INTERESTING REPORT

Outlining the Great Work of the Children's Aid Society.

At the annual meeting of the Children's Aid Society held in the Council Chambers on Wednesday afternoon, the secretary, Mr. Hampden Burnham, submitted the following report:

The Society has had a favorable year. The state of the law prior to the recent Dominion and Ontario legislation for the benefit of children was such that some colour was lent to the charge of laws being only for the protection of those who least needed them. The rich and powerful need laws the least. The most defenceless portion of the community is made up of orphaned and unwanted children, and it was for them that this legislation was provided. To the Right Hon. Sir John Thompson and to the Hon. J. M. Gibson great praise is due for the care and solicitation shown by them in thus improving the law regarding children. This law cannot be carried out except by Children's Aid Societies, which are especially mentioned in the acts. There was heretofore not an act on the statute book that allowed the community to say to a judge about to send a child to gaol, "We will take the child, if you will give it to us, and do our best for it. We are confident that if it be given half a chance it will turn out a respectable citizen." The judge may now say, what he could not say before, "Take it, care for it, and report to the Government." If it be sickly or injured we put it in the hospital. When it gets well, and has realised perhaps for the first time, what kindness is, it would, indeed, be a stoney heart that could forbear emotion. The pinched, distressed, hunted look entirely gone and something of the brightness of childhood in its place.

In a few instances it was thought that perhaps the system would be expensive. This is not the case. It does away with misplaced charity and tends to prevent the rapid increase of the number of those who live upon the public, though they are able to work for themselves. Is it not less expensive to rescue children and put them in the way of doing well than to bonus idleness and vice? Our solicitor has for some months been carrying on a correspondence with the Barnardo Home authorities in England, and we are enabled now to announce that there is every prospect that the Peterborough Home for girls and the Toronto Home for boys will within a short time be placed at our disposal as temporary shelters, subject, of course, to a satisfactory arrangement of terms. In this way the Barnardo system is turned to the advantage of children in this country as well as in England. Our children are dealt with in the same way, and all we ask the town and county to pay is a small sum for the accommodation of these children in the shelter until we can find homes for them in suitable private families.

With regard to the jurisdiction of the society unless the case is such that the judge or magistrate would send those concerned to prison if they were brought before him as vagrants, or worse, the society does not step in. It is the humane officer of the courts. The judge or magistrate has the deciding power, the same as hitherto. But how many cases might have been properly dealt with formerly without dragging women and children into prison if there had been such laws as there is now for their protection.

To the county and town councils, the press, the police, the hospital authorities, and our patient friends, the nurses, our especial thanks are due.

The doings of the year may be briefly summed up as per schedule for government report:—

COMPLAINTS.

1. Number of cases of cruelty and cruel ill-treatment—6.
2. Causes of ill treatment—Dislike of children and vice.
3. Number of complaints, all told—31, involving directly and indirectly not less than 60 children.
4. Warnings sent—6 (sufficient.)
5. Cases in court—2.
6. Children given temporary shelter—3.
7. Wards in Society's care—3.
8. In foster-homes—2.

The remaining cases are being investigated as rapidly as possible. The agent, Mr. Finch Miller, is in every respect most satisfactory. The town Council considered our representations and have placed us on a working basis in relation to the town. The county council asked us to confer with each municipality separately, and have shown us every possible consideration and have given us the kindest encouragement.

The Rev. Mr. Starr delivered an excellent lecture in our behalf in December. There have been the required number of general meetings. The Government inspector inspected the books and work and found them satisfactory. No business is in arrear. The appointment of an agent under the Children's Act relieves the Society from other than deliberate work. Funds are urgently needed. The Society must bear all the expenses incurred by it except the small part for temporary shelter referred to. Several cases of distress might have been attended to but for the lack of funds. His Honor Judge McDonald will lecture for the Society in March. Though engaged on commissions for the Dominion Government in addition to his other work, he says that he will surely find time to say a word on behalf of this movement.

With the permission of the authorities, an office has been secured in the Town Buildings, which enables the management to handle the Society's affairs in a regular and business-like way. The agent has office hours, when complaints may be made personally and interviews held. It is necessary to appoint auditors to examine our accounts as usual. Briefly, the receipts were $21, and the expenditure $100. Of this the Society is liable for $90. As you are aware, the Board of Management is the controlling body under the Society.

Examples of cases taken in hand by the Society:

1. Family of four, father, mother and two boys under 14. Father drunken and very cruel, beat his wife frequently, and tried to burn his children; had gone on so for years; husband frequently summoned, but as wife had no friends she was afraid to prosecute; Society investigated, reported to police; husband sent down by magistrate for six months; Society got separation papers for wife, so that she can live by herself, and husband will be trespasser.
2. Father, mother and 6 young children, quite destitute—children rapidly becoming vicious—cause, vice of mother, Society stepped in—cause removed at husband's request—children now orderly and the worst one going to school.
3. Father kicks wife and children out of bed and out of doors—night very cold—father well known for brutality—Society interferes—reports favorable.
4. Father peculiar and frequently in gaol—wife ordered out of town by magistrate as too vicious to be allowed to live here—great depravity—young girl handed over to Society—put in hospital—now in temporary shelter.
5. Case north of Kinmount—mother and father recently dead—two young girls left with helpless old grandfather—men beginning to visit house—shantyman reports imminent danger of girls—Society puts case in hands of Ontario Government—agents sent to rescue.
6. Husband gets drunk—hammers, kicks and turns out wife and children. Warned—keeps quiet now.
7. Boy 4 years old—ill with bronchial pneumonia—doctor says case hopeless if boy not removed from destitute surroundings—Society puts child in hospital—almost well now—once pale and thin, now fat and happy.

Hon. Secretary-Treasurer.

PARADIS MAY FAIL.

He Is Seeking Canadian Funds for Repatriation.

Special to the Times.

HOUGHTON, Mich., Feb. 14.—Over a thousand French-Canadians were packed in the Opera House at Lake Linden on Monday night to receive information from Father Paradis concerning their transportation to Canada.

An official of the Canadian Pacific was expected to represent the railway, but he failed to appear.

Father Paradis was unable to offer them free transportation, and nothing special was done at the meeting.

Father Paradis left for Ottawa on Tuesday to get an appropriation from the immigration fund of $25,000. Unless this is obtained the repatriation scheme will be a failure.

Special to the Times.

LONDON, Feb. 14.—In the House of Commons today John J. Clancy, member for North Dublin, moved that the sentences which had been imposed upon Irish political prisoners be re-considered.

Home Secretary Asquith replied that the various sentences had been fully considered, and he was convinced that the prisoners had been justly and properly convicted. In view of the atrocious character of their crimes, he found himself unable to extend clemency.

Mr. Morley, Chief Secretary for Ireland, denied the assertion that he had ever promised amnesty to dynamiters.

A Patent Snow-Leveller.

Mr. Sam Fox, deputy-reeve of Ops, has invented a snow-leveller for filling pitch-holes and levelling off the drifts. He has constructed one for his own use as an experiment and has since had a second one constructed by Mr. D. Sinclair. The appliance has been thoroughly tested during the past few days and every one who has seen it in operation speaks in the highest terms of the work accomplished by it. Letters patent have been applied for. Reeve Ellis and Councillor Hutton supplied a team of horses yesterday and gave the apparatus a thorough test on the Oakwood road where the drifts were bad. They stated that they did more work in one hour than could be accomplished by ten men in a day.—Watchman.

THE SATURDAY TIMES.

Tomorrow's issue of THE SATURDAY TIMES will contain another list of eligible bachelors among other special features. An eight thousand edition will be printed, but if the rush for copies is as great as on previous publication days, the supply will not last long. This monster edition will circulate in every village and settlement in the county, and advertisers cannot find a better medium through which to reach the country people. Look out for THE SATURDAY TIMES.

MISS GOODWYN AGAIN.

She Bobs Up in Toronto With Charles Stevens as Her Brother.

Miss Louise Goodwyn, a fascinating brunette, who by her versatility and many accomplishments managed to secure an entree into Peterborough society circles, and whose many exploits were exposed by THE TIMES, creating a profound sensation in the aforementioned circles, has once more bobbed up and got her name in public print.

It is fresh in the memories of our readers how Miss Goodwyn ran away with Charles Stevens, her sister's husband, and lived with him as his wife. They took rooms at the Balmoral hotel, and were surprised one night by the appearance of the real wife with hers and Stevens' first-born in her arms.

Miss Goodwyn was shown up in THE TIMES in her true light, and she took wings for Toronto. A few days afterwards Stevens and his wife had a reconciliation. He renounced the sister, and promised to live with and cherish the wife of his bosom forever and a day. Consequently they took up their abode in Ashburnham.

A few weeks ago, however, Stevens again deserted his wife and sought the sister in Toronto. The Toronto News of yesterday, tells something of the latter's career in the Queen city:—

"There appeared in the Division Court to-day Mrs. Duncan Coulson, of 186 Beverley street, wife of the general manager of the Bank of Toronto, as a defendant in a suit brought by Miss Louise Goodwyn for $14 wages. Both were in the court and both told their stories for the edification of many who grew interested in the tale of troubles between mistress and maid.

THE MAID'S TALE OF WOE.

"The maid's story was that she was engaged at $10 a month and was ordered out after three weeks at half an hour's notice. She was offered $4, which she refused. She described the service as harsh. She was not allowed to have gentlemen visitors, had only one night a week out, had to be in early and was not allowed to use the telephone. She was locked out once when she went to her home, and was not given a message which came from a sick friend.

WHY SHE WAS DISCHARGED.

"Mrs. Coulson's story was that Louise was talking to a man at the door every night. On the evening of her discharge she was told not to go, but she insisted upon visiting a sick friend in spite of the consequences. She spoke insolently to her mistress, took off her cap, would not wait on the table and locked herself in her room. Mrs. Coulson said she discharged her because she stayed out till one o'clock one night and spent the rest of the night in the basement.

"The maid said in the rebuttal that her brother was the only man who called on her.

THE MAID LOST HER CASE.

"Judge Morson found that Miss Goodwyne had been properly discharged as she had disobeyed orders, and awarded her the amount paid into court by Mrs. Coulson, $4.

"Miss Goodwyne is a trained nurse, but being unable to secure employment as such took the first thing that was offered her."

There is not the slightest doubt that the man mentioned in the above clipping, whom Miss Goodwyn persisted in seeing every night, was Charles Stevens. Miss Goodwyn palmed him off as her brother. She worked the same racket in Peterborough, and successfully, too, until THE TIMES made the exposure.

Mrs. Stevens was seen by a TIMES' representative and to him she said:

"My husband has deserted me again and is living with my sister in Toronto. If it wasn't for my dear little baby, I think I would go there and shoot them."

C. N. & P. RAILWAY.

Encouraging News as to the Prospect of a Beginning.

The Campbellford Herald says:—On Tuesday morning of last week Reeve W. W. Armstrong received a letter from Mr. Geo. Guillet, M.P., secretary of the C. N. & P. Railway, asking for a meeting of the council to pass a bylaw granting the right of way along and across certain streets within the corporation of Campbellford.

Acting immediately upon the advice contained in the letter, Mr. Armstrong summoned the members of the Council together and a bylaw was passed in accordance therewith. He afterwards took a copy of the bylaw, certified to, and sent to Mr. Guillet by the afternoon mail.

Accompanying the Secretary's letter was a plan of the village showing a profile of the road—the streets along which it will run. According to the route laid out the new railway will cross the Trent River in the neighborhood of the Northumberland Paper Mills and follow Saskatoon avenue to Second street, across which it will run and strike Rear street at the Dominion hotel. From this point it will proceed along Rear street to the Rathbun coal sheds, thence to Ranney street and along this thoroughfare to Front street at the Rathbun mill, where it will cross Front street and take a course due northward along the bank of the river.

In his letter of the 4th inst., the secretary said, "We really expect to have everything completed for active operations within ten days at the farthest." He replied to Mr. Armstrong's letter thanking him for his very prompt and satisfactory attention to this matter.

Having reached this stage in the operations of the road we can now reasonably expect to see a practical move made immediately.

A LIQUOR CASE.

Unbeknown to either the manager of the Opera House or to those in charge of the arrangements for the charity ball, it is alleged that liquor was sold in an adjoining room on Tuesday night last, and that one young man about town, made quite a sum out of the proceeds.

Yesterday subpœnas were issued for a number of young men who are supposed to have purchased liquor on that occasion, and a summons is out for the person who is alleged to have sold liquor. Last night the summons had not been served, the officers being unable to find the person for whom it is intended. The case is set for this morning. It will be an interesting session of the Police Court.

Tied the Teachers Hands

On Wednesday last a fracas took place place in Hastings Public School that should have been dealt with by the magistrate. The trustees however, after due consideration, thought best to notify the parents and give notice what would follow if repeated. The head teacher being sick, notice was given that the children of his department which occupy the first flat, were to go home. All went but two or three, who were joined by two from the Separate school. These continued to occupy the school room and created so much noise that the teacher of the junior department upstairs sent one of the pupils down to get their names, which he did. The boys followed upstairs and demanded from the teacher their names, which she refused to give. They secured her hands so she could not defend herself and then searched for the book in which the names were written.

Newspaper men as a rule do not fight shy of money, but a letter containing a $ bill created a sensation in the Herald office, Stratford, a few days ago. The sender remarked "that the money would have been sent before, but they had had smallpox in the house."

Great excitement was manifested around town on Saturday for a time when the rumor was current that two men with a team of horses had been lost on the lake and were supposed to have lost their lives. The teamster, who had been employed by Mr. R. D. Thexton, in Harvey, arrived in town about 2 p. m., and reported the others at a farm house. The whole party were badly frost-bitten.—Lindsay Watchman.

HELD FOR MANSLAUGHTER.

Conductor Boundy Exonerated and Agent Weighill Arrested.

"We find that John Rigg came to his death by the express train No. 1 running into a snow plow and that Albert Weighill was negligent in not displaying his signal board to hold the express, and are of the opinion that the G.T.R. rules are not specific enough, especially those governing the running of snow plows."

This was the verdict of the coroner's inquest into the death of John Rigg, killed in the accident near Agincourt on Friday last. As a result, Weighill is now in jail charged with manslaughter.

The evidence was of a somewhat contradictory character but the burden of it upheld Conductor Boundy's story that he had asked the agent where the snow plow was.

Albert Weighill was recalled. He swore that he had not tried to use the signal board because it was blocked by snow. He received no message from the plow after it left Unionville, and he was certain that it could not have reached Agincourt before the express drew out of Unionville. He had not spoken to Conductor Boundy. He could not have given Boundy instructions to go ahead unless he had himself heard of the arrival of the plow at Agincourt.

EVIDENCE AGAINST WEIGHILL.

Conductor Boundy was recalled. He said that he had asked Weighill in the presence of Brakeman Topley if all was right and was told "yes." He made it a rule to get verbal instructions from station agents when a plow was running ahead, and he had done so on this occasion. He heard no fog signal before the collision.

George Nimmo, driver of the express, corroborated Boundy' testimony that he was to go out, that the road was clear, that the plow had reached Agincourt to go ahead. He had seen Weighill and Boundy in conversation.

Phil. McCabe, fireman, saw Weighill and Boundy talking.

James Topley deposed that he heard Boundy ask Weighill where the plow was and the latter said it was at Agincourt and that all was right.

James Phillips, express messenger, swore that he saw Boundy and Weighill in conversation.

EVIDENCE OF WEIGHILL.

James Eckard testified that he saw the conductor walk along the track by the train, but not on the platform. He had not seen Weighill and Boundy talking together.

Harry Stevenson said that he had not seen the conductor off the train and Thos. Sharpe, Moses Hemingway, and Edward Sharpe corroborated this.

R. J. Strype, train despatcher, said that the snowplough conductor should book at all stations, and the agents should turn the signal board and block the road, keeping express trains one station behind.

Richard Butler, section foreman, who was on the snow-plow, said that a red light was put out on the rear of the plow, but he did not know of any fog signals being laid.

John Weighill, brother of the station agent, testified that he had spoken to his brother, but he did not see Boundy.

The coroner and Crown Attorney Dewart then addressed the jury, who retired and returned the above verdict, as a result of which J. C. Clarke, J. P., issued a warrant against Albert Weighill, who was arrested.

Weighill was taken to Toronto yesterday morning by Constable Hodge, and his lawyer, T. C. Robinette, is endeavoring to secure bail.

An organizer wanted for every county.

A Metal Breadboard

THE WOMAN WHO HAS BEEN USED to kneading dough on the old fashioned wooden breadboard knows what a bother it is to get them clean and how cumbersome and heavy they are. When they begin to crack or check it is almost impossible to thoroughly cleanse them, and they may easily become dangerous conveyances of disease. It was left for a woman, of course, to remedy this state of affairs, and Mrs. M. M. Everhard, of St. Joseph, Mich., has patented a metal bread board, which is one of the greatest labor-savers imaginable. It is light, does not absorb grease, dough does not adhere to it, and while it possesses all the advantages of the marble bread-board it is much cheaper and, of course, far lighter and easier to handle. If readers want to confer a favor upon their wives that will be forever appreciated, let them send $1 to the manufacturers, 101 Bay street, Toronto, for one of these boards.

THE HYAMS IN JAIL.

THEY ARE KEPT SEPARATE AND NOT ALLOWED TO SEE EACH OTHER.

Was Wells' Body Tampered With at Oshawa—A Suspicion That it Was—Tracing the Pedigree of the Accused.

Special to The Times.

TORONTO, Feb. 15.—Chief among the witnesses for the crown in the case against the Hyams brothers will be Uriah Jones, of Pickering township, an uncle of young Wells and Mrs. H. P. Hyams.

The Wells children lost their parents when young and were under the guardianship of Mr. Jones until they had grown up. When W. C. Wells received $1,400 as his share of his father's estate he at first proposed to buy a small farm. He talked over the matter at Christmas, 1892, when he went out for a visit to his uncle. It was then that the uncle first became aware of the fact that young Wells was carrying nearly $40,000 life insurance.

WELLS' STORY TO MR. JONES.

The story told by Wells to Mr. Jones at that time was as follows: The policy of $30,000 in the New York Life had been taken out as an investment by H. P. Hyams. The latter had promised to pay Wells $2,500 at the end of five years if Wells would consent to this large policy on his life. Hyams of course was to pay all premiums. The policy was on the endowment plan. Wells consented and the policy was made out in the presence of E. W. H. Aylesworth, who is married to a sister of the deceased. Miss Wells was named as sole beneficiary. Aylesworth inquired why both sisters were not included. Hyams replied:

PAID PREMIUMS HIMSELF.

"I am paying the premiums from my own money, and have the right to name the beneficiary."

To secure the payment of the $2,500 to young Wells H. P. Hyam gave a note for that amount. He afterwards gave Wells $800 cash for this note which impressed young Wells favorably with the transaction Mr. Jones, however, had his misgivings.

Wells was still negotiating for the purchase of a small farm when killed. He made several engagements to meet his uncle during the week before his death but strange to say failed to keep any of them. Mr. Jones suspected that the young man was detained or kept away from him for a purpose.

During his Christmas visit in 1892 Wells told his uncle that his sister and H. P. Hyams were going to be married.

THE BODY IN TORONTO.

When the body of Wells reached the city last night, after having been exhumed in the afternoon, it was removed to the undertaking establishment of B. D. Humphrey & Bro., 321 Yonge street.

Every precaution was taken to prevent the bones being tampered with before Dr. John Caven holds the post mortem examination. The coffin was only opened once since the body was taken up, and that was on the edge of the grave, in the presence of Crown Attorney, Dr. Caven, Detective Cuddy and a reporter. No marks or breaks in the skull could be discovered when the body was viewed, but a close scrutiny of the remains could not be had owing to the fact that only the outer lid of the casket was raised and then only for a few moments.

WAS IT TAMPERED WITH?

Rumor had it around Oshawa that there was a suspicion in some quarters that the body had been tampered with during the spring succeeding the young man's death. Whether or not this is true, cannot, of course, be learned until the post mortem is held tomorrow afternoon.

Some time today what there is left of the dead man will be taken to the morgue and prepared for Dr. Caven's examination.

THE HYAMS KEPT APART.

The Hyams brothers who are in jail awaiting their preliminary trial next Wednesday are confined in different wards in the jail and are never given an opportunity to converse one with the other. It is said that they appear very nervous and their sleep is restless. Neither of them have spoken to any person except their lawyer on the subject since their incarceration.

HEIDELBERG GRADUATES.

NEW YORK, Feb. 15.—The Hyams twins, who are graduates of the University of Heidelberg, came to New York from New Orleans in 1881.

Their elder brother, C. H. Hyams, is a millionaire, was for many years principal proprietor of the St. Charles hotel, New Orleans, and was associated with John A. Morris in the Louisiana Lottery.

Another brother, Solomon P. Hyams, who is a cripple, has for years been a familiar figure in the corridors of Gilsey House, where he is better known under his nickname, "The Hermit."

For nearly 60 years the Hyams family have been prominent in Louisiana. An uncle of the accused men was a Lieutenant Governor of the State when it seceded from the Union.

FROM NEW ORLEANS.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Feb. 15.—Chapman Hyams would not be interviewed in connection with the arrest of the Hyams in Toronto. His friends say the men arrested in Toronto are not his brothers.

Chapman Hyams is a leading banker and cotton man, of the firm of Hyams, Moore & Wheeler. He is also the principal owner of the St. Charles hotel. The two accused men are not known here.

SNOWED UNDER

Was Mr. Clancy's Amendment on Behalf of the Dynamiters.

Special to the Times.

LONDON, Feb. 15.—In the House of Commons yesterday the debate on the address in response to the Queen's speech at the opening of the session was resumed. The amendment offered by Mr. Clancy, Parnellite member for North Dublin, declaring that the time had arrived when the cases of the men now in prison under sentence for taking part in dynamite crimes could be advantageously considered by the Government, was rejected by a vote of 111 ayes to 290 noes.

Burglaries.

THORNHILL, Feb. 15.—On Sunday morning, between 2 and 3 o'clock, the shop of H. J. Saunders, tailor, was broken into and clothing and other articles amounting to about $100 were stolen.

TILBURY CENTRE, Feb. 15.—Mr. W. C. Crawford's hardware store was entered on Wednesday night, the thieves prying open the window in the rear of the building. Among the stolen property are a quantity of silverware, pocketknives, revolvers, razors, diamond glass cutters and other small articles.

THIS MAY FIX IT.

Important Cabinet Meeting Called for Saturday.

Special to the Times.

OTTAWA, Feb. 15.—Notices have been sent out to all the Ministers calling a council of the Cabinet for Saturday afternoon. As those notices have been directed to Ministers who are absent from the city, including Sir Frank Smith and Hon. Dr. Montague, without portfolio, as well as to the members of the Cabinet resident here, it is clear that matters of importance are to be discussed. Whether it is the school question or the date of dissolution, or both, is a matter for speculation, but the public are assured that they will hear something drop on Monday morning.

A prominent Conservative member who is opposed to an immediate general election was among a score of others who interviewed Premier Bowell this morning. He afterwards said that nearly every one present represented to Sir Mackenzie Bowell that times were going to get worse instead of better, and it would be well to dissolve immediately. Senator McMillan, Messrs. Geo. Taylor, M. P., chief whip, Donald McIntyre and Capt. Gaskin, Kingston, R. McLennan, M. P., Dr. Bergin, M. P., and Thomas Long, Toronto, were among the Premier's callers. Messrs. Costigan, Ouimet, Patterson and Angers are opposed to a general election, but they are not the governing forces of the Cabinet.

Hon. Peter White, Speaker of the House of Commons, is said to be entirely out of sympathy with the present weak and vacillating Ministry. He has gone so far as to refrain from paying his respects to the new Premier, and omitted to congratulate him on his Imperial honors.

In addition to the announcement that the Ministers are to resume their campaigning in Western Ontario next week it is also given out that Sir Adolphe Caron, Messrs. Haggart, Montague and Wood are to address the electors of Russell County next Monday. Mr. Daly shortly takes the stump in Manitoba.

A WOMAN'S SUICIDE.

She Absorbs Arsenic and Dies in Great Agony.

Special to the Times.

CHATHAM, Ont., Feb. 15.—An unusually sad death occurred last evening at the residence of Mr. Walter Savage, Lorne Ave., it being that of his wife, who had a very painful and sudden end from taking a dose of arsenic it is supposed. For the last eight or ten years Mrs. Savage has been subject to fits of melancholia, and while in this state she twice attempted to take her life, once about nine years ago and again last summer, when she had been in a delicate state of health for some time, and yesterday afternoon, unknown to her sister must have taken some iritant poison when in one of her fits of melancholia. A physician was called and asked her to say what she had taken but she refused to tell. Mrs. Savage lived only about an hour after the doctor saw her, and passed away in great agony at seven o'clock, aged 44 years. An inquest is now in progress.

ONLY TWO MONTHS.

Is What Wm. Brookmeyer Gets for Scalding His Wife.

Special to the Times.

BARRIE, Feb. 15.—William Brookmeyer has been sentenced to two months in jail for scalding his wife with hot tea. He at one time served nine months in Central Prison.

Justice is barely meted out. Two months will soon pass, during which the brute will put in a comparatively easy winter, after which he will come out and again abuse his hard-working wife, who earns a morsel for herself and hungry children by going out washing. She has kept him nearly ever since they moved here from Toronto, and it was her honestly earned money that bought the tea with which the brute scalded her.

A WESTERN CRIME.

A Lethbridge Man Found with His Head Blown Off.

Special to the Times.

LETHBRIDGE, N.W.T., Feb. 15.—A horrible suicide or murder was committed here yesterday. At 6 o'clock last evening Charles Gillies, a driver employed by the Alberta Railway Company, was found in the kitchen of his house dead. The sight was revolting. Pieces of deceased's skull were found all over two rooms, together with other evidence of an awful death. The deceased's three-year-old child was in the house at the time of the affair and was covered with blood. A Winchester rifle was found lying near the body. The Coroner is making thorough enquiries, an inquest having been called for tomorrow.

Special to the Times.

BERLIN, Feb. 15.—The Lokal Anzeiger has this despatch from St. Petersburg: "Since making his declaration of absolutism, the Czar has received almost daily Nihilist proclamations and threatening letters. It is rumored that a palace official has been arrested for placing in his Majesty's study printed pictures of the assassination of Alexander II. One picture is said to have depicted the assassination of the present Czar in the manner in which his grandfather was killed. This and other similar rumors are circulated widely in Russia."

Brusseau Hypnotized.

DETROIT, Feb. 14.—W. Brusseau, the self-confessed murderer of Dr. Horace E. Pope, was hypnotized by Mlle Charcot yesterday at the gaol. She had no trouble in getting almost complete control over him, and he obeyed her commands implicitly. D. S. Donohue, Brusseau's attorney, will make his defence on the theory that his client was hypnotized at the time the murder was committed and hence was not accountable for his action.

A Mother's Awful Crimes.

CROOKSTON, Minn., Feb. 15.—A few days ago Mrs. Albert Peterman gave birth to a child. A physician was called in, but she deceived him as to the cause of her illness. Today he was again called, and the woman confessed to the birth of a child, and said she had burned it. She also said that this was the second time that she had burned a baby.

JAPAN'S TERMS.

LONDON, Feb. 15.—The Standard's correspondent in Berlin says when Pekin shall be seriously threatened the Chinese Emperor will retire to Paiga in Mongolia. When Pekin shall be captured, Prince Kung will be authorized to conclude peace. Japan has altered her terms and declines to inform the powers yet of her views, but suggests that the foreign diplomatist ask what indemnity China is willing to pay and what territory she will cede.

THE JAPAN-CHINA WAR.

The great success of the lecture of the war correspondent, Frederic Villiers, on the recent conflict in the Orient is attributed to his remarkable ability to describe to his audience the actual facts of the details of the various battles. The intense hatred of the combatants for each other has led to many fierce struggles and much shedding of blood, many of which are depicted by the views Mr. Villier has taken on the spot of the several scenes of carnage and notably that of Port Arthur.

H. R. H. ON SKATES.

LONDON, Feb. 15.—A match game of hockey was played on the lake at Buckingham Palace today between the Sandringham team and the House of Commons team. The Sandringham team was captained by the Prince of Wales and the House of Commons team was directed by Mr. Francis Pingham, assisted by Mr. A. J. Balfour, both of whom were in excellent form.

The Prince of Wales acted as "back" and the Duke of York as "forward" in the Sandringham team. Both showed good skating powers and had several heavy falls, but neither were any the worse for his shaking up.

Among the eight of the Commons team falls were numerous, but none of the players were injured. The match was won by the Sandringham team by a score of 8 goals to 5.

The Princess of Wales and daughter and the Duchess of York witnessed the game and enjoyed the spectacle greatly.

DYNAMITE EXPLOSIONS.

ONE MAN KILLED AND THREE INJURED AT HAMILTON AND DUNDAS.

The Fatality Occurred on the Line of the Toronto, Hamilton, and Buffalo Railway—Davis' Body Blown into Many Pieces.

Special to the Times.

HAMILTON, Feb. 14.—Pieces only are all that is left of the body of a workman named Davis, on the Toronto, Hamilton and Buffalo railway. He was blown to atoms by a sudden and unexpected explosion of dynamite this morning.

The explosive is used to open up the road and clear the trees near the Hollow a few miles west of Hamilton, and it is supposed Davis was engaged in thawing the dynamite when it exploded.

The noise of the explosion was heard in all parts of the city, and portions of the remains of the diseased were found lying in all directions in the vicinity of the accident.

Special to the Times.

DERBY, Conn., Feb. 12.—A daring robbery was committed at 10 a.m. today on the iron bridge between this city and Shelton. M. H. Spaulding, thirty years old, a clerk in the office of R. & H. Adams, cotton goods manufacturers, of this city and Paterson, N.J., was robbed of $2,000, the week's pay-roll, which he had just drawn from the Birmingham National Bank and was carrying to the office of the concern.

Spaulding had reached the west end of the bridge when he was knocked down by a severe blow on the head. Then a man jumped from a passing sleigh, grabbed the bag containing the $2,000, and sprang into the sleigh, followed by the man who had struck Spaulding. They drove off at a rapid rate in the direction of Stratford, but after going a mile and a half abandoned the sleigh and took to the woods. The team had been hired at I. E. Alling's livery stable, in this city at 9 a.m.

The ex-aldermen in question will not consent to tell what he knows unless he is assured of immunity from prosecution, and it is on this point that the matter hinges. It is learned also that H. A. Everett is feeling very sore over the way all the odium of improper conduct has been cast upon him. He is said to be determined to make the other directors of the company bear their share of the blame, and he is now considering the best means of attaining that end. The coming session of the investigation promises to be the most startling of all.

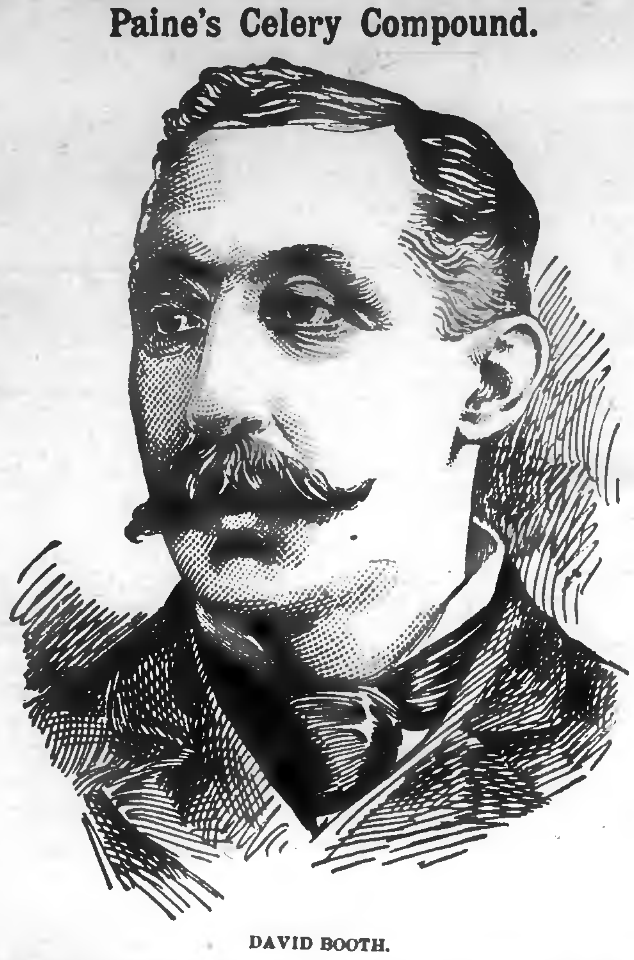
A MONTREAL ELECTROTYPER

He is Raised From Misery to Comfort and Health.

The Wonderful Change Was Wrought By Paine's Celery Compound.



DAVID BOOTH.

Mr. David Booth, manager of the extensive electrotyping department of the Montreal Daily Witness, is known to thousands in the great commercial metropolis.

The rude hand of affliction was laid heavily upon Mr. Booth two years ago. Life was made miserable for him, and he was prevented from enjoying the ordinary blessings which flow to those who can pleasurably take three good meals each day.

Before hearing of the wonderful healing virtues of Paine's Celery Compound, Mr. Booth had experimented with ordinary medicines without any success; even the services of a physician proved useless.

While in a serious condition Mr. Booth was recommended to use Paine's Celery Compound. The first bottle proved magical in its effects; and after a short time Mr. Booth was perfectly cured. He writes as follows, for the benefit of sufferers:—

"Two years ago I had a severe attack of dyspepsia, and thinking it would pass away, I paid no attention to it until it became so bad that I had to see a doctor, whose prescription only gave me temporary relief. I suffered terribly after the lightest meal; the smallest piece of bread gave me pain, and I could not get proper sleep: consequently, I would feel very week and would perspire with the least exertion. I have spent considerable money buying medicines advertised to cure indigestion, but none seemed to meet my case. Every second day after eating meat at dinner. I had a rush of blood to the head. A friend recommended me your Paine's Celery Compound. I bought a bottle, also a second one, and I must say in my case it was magical. I found myself able to eat without any bad after effects. I have used seven bottles, and am pleased to say I can now enjoy a good square meal. I can confidently recommend your medicine to any one suffering from indigestion, in fact I am now quite an enthusiast for Paine's Celery Compound."

THREE KILLED.

Through the Collapse of a Burning Building in Lynn, Mass.—Three Fireman Killed—Volunteers to the Rescue.

Special to the Times.

LYNN, Mass., Feb. 14.—At 8 p. m. tonight fire was discovered in the basement of the hardware store of W. H. Hutchinson, on Monroe street, two alarms were sounded. The firemen found a brisk fire burning and clouds of smoke pouring out of all the lower windows. The building was of wood and was four storeys high. After three-quarters of an hour the flames suddenly appeared through the roof and almost simultaneously the building collapsed like an eggshell. The front on Monroe street fell into the street, and the side fell into an alley way toward the adjoining building, which is of brick. A dozen firemen were buried in the debris in the alley way. Willing volunteers sprang to the rescue. The firemen were dangerously near the spot where they lay buried, and all the available streams of water were brought to bear on this point. The work of rescue went on rapidly, and in half an hour 11 firemen had been taken out. Three of them were dead or died in a few minutes after being out. They were Capt. Henry L. Skinner, of chemical No. 1: Thomas Murray, of engine No. 3: John Donlan, of steamer No. 3. The injured, as far as known, are: A. C. Moody, of hose 3, shoulder dislocated and internally injured; Leo Billor, of hose 4, shoulder dislocated and otherwise injured; George Middleton, of steamer 5, back injured and severely burned; William Minton, of chemical 1, badly crushed; Nicholas Weber, jr., of steamer 3, sprained ankle and internal injuries; William R. Hunt, of hose 4, back injured; Charles Corson, of engine 4, back injured and badly crushed.

The County Commissioners tried to stop them but could not, and after they started to drive away they were brought back by the police. It is reported that 60 teams are on the way here from Custer county for relief supplies.

UP IN NORTH WELLINGTON.

James McMullen, M. P., Supported By His Friends.

Special to the Times.

HARRISTON, Feb. 14.—Yesterday two enthusiastic meetings were held by the Liberals of North Wellington in the interests of the candidature of Mr. James McMullen, M. P. Mr. L. H. Clark is the chosen standard-bearer of the Conservatives, and Mr. Robert Wanborough, a Conservative hitherto, will do battle for Patron principles. Mr. William Paterson, of Brant, and Dr. Macdonald, of Huron, addressed the meetings, and Mr. Hugh Guthrie, Guelph, has been doing practical work in the line of organizing a Young Liberal Club.

Two good meetings were held, and at the conclusion in the evening the visitors were entertained at a dinner at the Collison House by Harriston Liberals.

AN INTERESTING REPORT

Outlining the Great Work of the Children's Aid Society.

At the annual meeting of the Children's Aid Society held in the Council Chambers on Wednesday afternoon, the secretary, Mr. Hampden Burnham, submitted the following report:

The Society has had a favorable year. The state of the law prior to the recent Dominion and Ontario legislation for the benefit of children was such that some colour was lent to the charge of laws being only for the protection of those who least needed them. The rich and powerful need laws the least. The most defenceless portion of the community is made up of orphaned and unwanted children, and it was for them that this legislation was provided. To the Right Hon. Sir John Thompson and to the Hon. J. M. Gibson great praise is due for the care and solicitation shown by them in thus improving the law regarding children. This law cannot be carried out except by Children's Aid Societies, which are especially mentioned in the acts. There was heretofore not an act on the statute book that allowed the community to say to a judge about to send a child to gaol, "We will take the child, if you will give it to us, and do our best for it. We are confident that if it be given half a chance it will turn out a respectable citizen." The judge may now say, what he could not say before, "Take it, care for it, and report to the Government." If it be sickly or injured we put it in the hospital. When it gets well, and has realized perhaps for the first time, what kindness is, it would, indeed, be a stoney heart that could forbear emotion. The pinched, distressed, hunted look entirely gone and something of the brightness of childhood in its place.

In a few instances it was thought that perhaps the system would be expensive. This is not the case. It does away with misplaced charity and tends to prevent the rapid increase of the number of those who live upon the public, though they are able to work for themselves. Is it not less expensive to rescue children and put them in the way of doing well than to bonus idleness and vice? Our solicitor has for some months been carrying on a correspondence with the Barnardo Home authorities in England, and we are enabled now to announce that there is every prospect that the Peterborough Home for girls and the Toronto Home for boys will within a short time be placed at our disposal as temporary shelters, subject, of course, to a satisfactory arrangement of terms. In this way the Barnardo system is turned to the advantage of children in this country as well as in England. Our children are dealt with in the same way, and all we ask the town and county to pay is a small sum for the accommodation of these children in the shelter until we can find homes for them in suitable private families.

With regard to the jurisdiction of the society unless the case is such that the judge or magistrate would send those concerned to prison if they were brought before him as vagrants, or worse, the society does not step in. It is the humane officer of the courts. The judge or magistrate has the deciding power, the same as hitherto. But how many cases might have been properly dealt with formerly without dragging women and children into prison if there had been such laws as there is now for their protection.

To the county and town councils, the press, the police, the hospital authorities, and our patient friends, the nurses, our especial thanks are due.

The doings of the year may be briefly summed up as per schedule for government report:—

COMPLAINTS.

1. Number of cases of cruelty and cruel ill-treatment—6.
2. Causes of ill-treatment—Dislike of children and vice.
3. Number of complaints, all told—31, involving directly and indirectly not less than 600 children.
4. Warnings sent—6 (sufficient.)
5. Cases in court—2.
6. Children given temporary shelter—3.
7. Wards in Society's care—3.
8. In foster-homes—2.

The remaining cases are being investigated as rapidly as possible. The agent, Mr. Finch Miller, is in every respect most satisfactory. The town Council considered our representations and have placed us on a working basis in relation to the town. The county council asked us to confer with each municipality separately, and have shown us every possible consideration and have given us the kindest encouragement.

The Rev. Mr. Starr delivered an excellent lecture in our behalf in December. There have been the required number of general meetings. The Government inspector inspected the books and work and found them satisfactory. No business is in arrear. The appointment of an agent under the Children's Act relieves the Society from other than deliberate work. Funds are urgently needed. The Society must bear all the expenses incurred by it except the small part for temporary shelter referred to. Several cases of distress might have been attended to but for the lack of funds. His Honor Judge McDonald will lecture for the Society in March. Though engaged on commissions for the Dominion Government in addition to his other work, he says that he will surely find time to say a word on behalf of this movement.

With the permission of the authorities, an office has been secured in the Town Buildings, which enables the management to handle the Society's affairs in a regular and business-like way. The agent has office hours, when complaints may be made personally and interviews held. It is necessary to appoint auditors to examine our accounts as usual. Briefly, the receipts were $21, and the expenditure $100. Of this the Society is liable for $90. As you are aware, the Board of Management is the controlling body under the Society.

Examples of cases taken in hand by the Society:

1. Family of four, father, mother and two boys under 14. Father drunken and very cruel, beat his wife frequently, and tried to burn his children; had gone on so for years; husband frequently summoned, but as wife had no friends she was afraid to prosecute; Society investigated, reported to police; husband sent down by magistrate for six months; Society got separation papers for wife, so that she can live by herself, and husband will be trespasser.
2. Father, mother and 6 young children, quite destitute—children rapidly becoming vicious—cause, vice of mother. Society stepped in—cause removed at husband's request—children now orderly and the worst one going to school.
3. Father kicks wife and children out of bed and out of doors—night very cold—father well known for brutality—Society interferes—reports favorable.
4. Father peculiar and frequently in gaol—wife ordered out of town by magistrate as too vicious to be allowed to live here—great depravity—young girl handed over to Society—put in hospital—now in temporary shelter.
5. Case north of Kinmount—mother and father recently dead—two young girls left with helpless old grandfather—men beginning to visit house—shantyman reports imminent danger of girls—Society puts case in hands of Ontario Government—agents sent to rescue.
6. Husband gets drunk—hammers, kicks and turns out wife and children. Warned—keeps quiet now.
7. Boy 4 years old—ill with bronchial pneumonia—doctor says case hopeless if boy not removed from destitute surroundings—Society puts child in hospital—almost well now—once pale and thin, now fat and happy.

HAMPDEN BURNHAM,
Hon. Secretary-Treasurer.

THE MONTREAL END.

A Warrant Against H. P. Hyams Granted in Montreal.

Special to the Times.

MONTREAL, Feb. 14.—H. P. and D. T. Hyams, now under arrest in Toronto, are well enough known in Montreal, where they for some time had an office in the Temple building, and conducted a financial agency business. One of their transactions came before Judge Dugas yesterday, in connection with the application by Wm. Morrison for a warrant against H. P. Hyams, on a charge of altering a note after the maker had signed it. The note was produced before the Judge, the complainant alleging that after he had signed it there was added to it the words "this note to bear interest at ten per cent. per month until paid in full." The note was made to pay off another in a third party's hands, which bore also a very high rate of interest.

Judge Dugas granted the warrant, and a request was telegraphed to Toronto to hold H. P. Hyams for forgery, in case he should be released.

The brothers advertised that they gave loans on salaries, pianos, organs, warehouse receipts, etc. They represented that their office was in Toronto, but that loans could be negotiated in Montreal. For a time they did a rushing business. Last December H. P. Hyams had to pawn a considerable quantity of jewellery, over $1,000 worth. At first the pawnbroker declined to receive it, but when Hyams went off and brought a bank officials to say that it was all right, he gave the money asked for. This was on Dec. 3rd last. Later, Messrs. Ellis & Co., Toronto, sent word to Chief Detective Cullen that Hyams had disposed of jewelry that he owed them for. That officer at once made a round of the pawn shops and found where the goods had been pawned, but also that they had been taken out some days after, as Hyams had sold the ticket to a party who released the goods. Messrs. Ellis were communicated with and their agent in Montreal, Mr. Stevenson, did his best to recover the goods, but so far without success.

WELLS' BODY EXHUMED.

FURTHER DEVELOPMENTS IN THE HYAMS' MURDER CASE.

The Hyams Furniture Sold--Record of the Brothers in New York—They Estreated Bail to the Amount of $5,000.

Special to the Times.

OSHAWA, Feb. 14.—This morning shortly after nine o'clock Crown Attorney Curry of Toronto, Dr. John Caven, Detective Alf. Cuddy, E. W. A. Aylesworth left Toronto for the grave of young William C. Wells, who is alleged to have been murdered by Harry P. Hyams on Jan. 16, 1893.

The party reached Oshawa about eleven o'clock, and Mr. Curry, who was armed with authority from the Attorney-General's department, saw the caretaker of the cemetery, which is three miles from the town, and arranged to have the body of the alleged victim exhumed. Three feet of snow is on the roads about this place, and the cemetery was only reached after plowing through it.

Two grave diggers were put to work removing the deep snow and the solidly frozen earth, and at three o'clock they reached the coffin.

The arrival of the Toronto party in town created a sensation, and many people drov out to the cemetery.

THEIR RECORDS IN NEW YORK.

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—Harry Place and Dallas Hyams have an unenviable reputation in New York. They started a bogus real estate office on Broadway in 1881. They swindled Emmanuel Martinez out of $1,400 and were arrested by Detective Sergeant Heidelberg.

The case was subsequently withdrawn but the pair were arrested again in Jersey City one month later for another real estate swindle, but they jumped their bail of $5,000, and so far as can be ascertained have since remained in Canada.

THE FURNITURE SOLD.

TORONTO, Feb. 14.—A big crowd attended the sale of Dallas T. Hyams' furniture at 57 Gould street today, the house being filled to suffocation. Auctioneer Wm. Dickson was engaged all day selling about $4,000 worth of goods.

The Hyams had evidently spent more money in bric-a-brac than in costly furniture. The latter was of the ordinary kind and not as expensive as had been stated. The house, however, was overstocked with fancy things which went cheap.

ANOTHER VICTIM.

Mrs. Percy Dies From Smallpox – The Blockade Raised.

Special to the Times.

ST. THOMAS, Feb. 12.—Dr. Hodgins, assistant to Dr. Bryce, who has been in the district of Malahide, infected with smallpox, is in the city en route to Toronto. He states that the strictest quarantine has been established, and believes the disease is under control. The second death took place Saturday night. Mrs. H. Percy, whose husband died a couple of weeks ago from the disease, being the victim.

The railroads entering here have recovered from the snow blockade, and trains are running nearly on time. The C.P.R. noon train arrived an hour and a half late, the first train arriving on that road since saturday morning.

CALLED THE JUDGES VILLAINS.

Anarchist Bach Made a Scene in a Belgian Court When He Was Sentenced.

Special to The Times.

LIEGE, Belgium, Feb. 13.—The trial of the German Anarchist Mueller and thirteen others, which began Jan. 14, ended today. Mueller and Westcamp were sentenced to penal servitude for life; Broisch and Bach for ten years; Vossenti, four years; Wilke and Schlebach, three years; Mme. Schlebach, six months' imprisonment. Five were acquitted.

Bach flew into a large on hearing his sentence.

"Scum! Villains!" he shouted at the Judges. "You have committed judicial murder. There is no justice."

Then he leaped out of the dock and struck right and left at the gendarmes. After a severe struggle he was overpowered by five gendarmes, who removed him from the court-room as he continued screaming out insults at the Judges. The other prisoners watched the scene calmly.

The Anarchists were charged with blowing up the Burgomaster's house last April, and trying to blow up the Church of St. Jacques. The leader of the gang, Jagolkovsky, alias Baron Sternberg, disappeared, but was subsequently arrested by the Russian police. The Anarchists say he was an "agent provocateur."

NO HOPE FOR DYNAMITERS.

The Home Secretary Says the Government Declines to Yield to the Pressure.

Special to the Times.

LONDON, Feb. 14.—In the House of Commons today John J. Clancy, member for North Dublin, moved that the sentences which had been imposed upon Irish political prisoners be re-considered.

Home Secretary Asquith replied that the various sentences had been fully considered, and he was convinced that the prisoners had been justly and properly convicted. In view of the atrocious character of their crimes, he found himself unable to extend clemency.

Mr. Morley, Chief Secretary for Ireland, denied the assertion that he had ever promised amnesty to dynamiters.

LIFE IN THE AUTUMN AT ENGLISH COUNTRY HOUSES.

Routine For Entertainers and Guests. How the Time Is Employed by Ladies and Gentlemen of Leisure—When They Have Their Meals and What They Eat.

With the opening days of September the country house parties nominally commence. August gatherings do not amount to "parties" in the strict sense of the word, being principally composed of relatives and intimate friends asked for a pleasant ten days' rather than for a smart five days' visit, but it is during these friendly visits that ceremony is put on one side as far as may be, and every one allowed to do pretty much as he or she likes. Even at the smartest country house parties the modern hostess takes up this line as against the strict discipline formerly in force.

"Do you like paying visits?" is a question frequently put by those who distinctly dislike doing so, on the ground that the restraints of each day are irksome to them. They do not like the method by which they are to be amused—the fixed hours for pastimes, for meals, for riding, driving, shooting and the rest. There is a good deal in this from the point of view of a jaded and tired individual seeking perfect quiet and repose, and also from that of an idle man who likes his own way and to take his own time for amusing himself.

The generality of men feel very much the same on this head—viz, "the liberty of the subject"—although they nevertheless conform to the rules of the house at which they are staying and allow themselves to be taken, say, to luncheon at the houses of people they know only by name in the meekest manner if their hostess so wills it, when they would far rather be left at home to amuse themselves in their own way, whatever that may be, with a favorite pipe for a companion. Ladies, on the contrary, are not averse to plans being made and carried out for their benefit. They readily fall into their hostess' projects and expect to go somewhere and to do something most days, but a hostess knows from experience that these plans must include the company of one or two of the men of a party, or the expedition will fall very flat, and the ladies, left to themselves, will not return in the most cheerful of spirits. The modern hostess invites the guests with due regard to their exigencies, so as not to sacrifice the leisure of the one sex to the demands of the other.

The writer of a recent article in a daily contemporary characterizes a country house breakfast as a "first installment of a day of gorging." It is quite true that many men do "make a good breakfast," but a good breakfast appetite is a sign of a clear conscience and a good digestion, and if a man eats two eggs, half a partridge, two or three rashers of broiled bacon, a muffin and some marmalade and passes by the numerous other breakfast dishes set before him—dressed fish, broiled fowl, omelet, cold ham, cutlets, etc.—he does not consider he has "done himself" too well, taking into account the walking exercise that is before him.

In these days of early rising, walks before breakfast, and the greater portion of the day passed in the open air golfing, playing tennis or croquet, rowing and riding, a breakfast appetite is a natural result, and the question so rife at the present moment as to whether ladies do or do not eat too much answers itself in any case at a country house party.

From 9 to 9:30 is the usual breakfast hour in most houses. Occasionally it is extended to 10, where late hours are kept in the smoking room. Again punctuality at this meal is the rule in some houses. Not so in others, where great latitude is allowed. As to guests shaking hands with each other, this ceremony takes place only in the evening, when good nights are said. In the morning a nod, a smile or a "Good morning!" is all that is said or done by way of greeting.

The next general meeting is at luncheon—1:30—on nonshooting days, or a meeting of ladies only, and though a choice of dishes is offered ladies generally prefer to eat of one dish only in the meat course—say a cutlet, or a help of chicken, or a slice of roast mutton, followed by a sweet. After a long morning spent in walking over stubble in search of partridges men are equal to making a very substantial luncheon out of doors and do not despise Irish stew, mutton pies, cold beef, pigeon pie, sausage, rolls and the like, to say nothing of bitter beer, whisky and soda water, and, not seldom, champagne, this latter being more frequently given by bachelor hosts. It is a well known fact that the ladies of a house party are more than pleased to join the shooters at their outdoor luncheons, but it is whispered that the company of ladies is not equally appreciated by keen sportsmen on these occasions, on the ground of loss of time and vexatious delay in resuming sport, the afternoon hours being all too short in which to shoot the wily partridge.

Five o'clock tea in the country is not "4:30 tea," as in town, and amounts to almost a meal in itself, with its hot cakes, rich cakes and sandwiches. In September the shooters seldom return in time to join the ladies at tea, while in November their presence is generally to be counted upon, as daylight wanes, by 4:30, and within doors is far pleasanter than without doors at this hour, but even then the smoking room, joined to genuine fatigue, is a formidable rival to the drawing room, however fascinating the tea gowns and the wearers thereof may be.

The dinner hour, however, is the signal for the whole of the company to assemble at close upon 8:30. When precedency is strictly followed, the same couples are often sent in to dinner together night after night, but a hostess endeavors to introduce a little variety in this respect as far as possible, so that the companions of the hour may not suffer from monotony. A country house dinner is generally so much to the taste of men that they go through the menu gallantly, but the ladies, as a rule, draw the line, say, at half the menu.

A country house visit lasts four or five days, as the case may be—from Tuesday to Friday or to Saturday—only very intimate friends being asked to remain over Sunday.—London Queen.

Chinese Street Paving.

The street paving in Canton was of loose granite slabs laid crosswise, about 9 inches broad and 6 inches through and as long as the street was wide. Although presenting a somewhat irregular surface, the face of each slab was generally worn smooth by the treading of unshod feet. A drain ran down the center of each street, under the slabs, into which, between the joints, percolated rainwater, fluid refuse and house slops. These liquids ran out into the main tidal canals which intersected the city, and when they did not run, as was not infrequent, the slabs were raised and the drains cleaned out.—Florence O'Driscoll, M. P., in Century.

The Times.

PETERBOROUGH, FEBRUARY 16, 1895.

Good morning!

Sir Richard's himself again. He had begun to fear that the representative for South Oxford was some other fellow.

The cold was so intense last week that the Chief of Police was compelled to take the street cars to and from his home.

Last Saturday was the fifty-fifth anniversary of the marriage of Queen Victoria. Her majesty was less than twenty-two years a wife, and has been more than thirty-three years a widow.

It is estimated that about $10,000,000 has been invested in coffee houses as an antidote of the saloon in England. It is said there are about 7,000 of them, employing 56,000, and they are paying investments.

A French count who is to marry Miss Gould will receive $2,000,000 from the American heiress as part of the marriage contract. There are lots of men who would have married the girl for less than half that sum.

Ex-queen Lil of Hawaii talks of going to the United States. It's getting entirely too warm for her in the little republic where she formerly was the reigning queen. What will Cleveland do when he gets queen Lil and congress both on his hands?

The old delusion to the effect that dogs go mad only in the hot months of summer has been dispelled. An examination of the body of a dog which bit several people at Mt Vernon O., a few days since, it is said, demonstrates the fact that the animal was afflicted with the rabies.

High angle fire gun mountings and turrets tried on the Centurion, Admiral Fremantle's flagship in China, and with electric motors on the Barfleur, have proved satisfactory, and will be applied to the new Renown. The system finds favor because it is independent of steam and hydraulic power, and can be worked by hand.

Opposition to the use of the anti-toxine treatment for diphtheria has already taken an organized form in England. A deputation headed by Lord Coleridge has protested to the authorities against its use in the hospitals on the ground that "public money ought not to be devoted to experiments in psychology."

It is proposed to make the port of Bristol, England, accessible to trans-Atlantic vessels at all times by damming the River Avon at its mouth and using locks. According to the plans of the engineers, a constant depth of thirty-two feet can be obtained, and the necessary docks and breakwaters constructed for $11,000,000.

Scotland is rapidly building up a school of music of its own. A successful Scottish opera, "Jeanie Deans," was brought out this fall, and recently at one concert in Edinburg two new cantatas by Scottish composers were given—Mr. Drydale's "The Kelpie," based on Charles Mackey's well-known ballad, and Mr. Barratt's Sir Patrick Spens."

They are so alarmed in Germany for fear that the next child soon to be born to the Emperor and Empress will be a boy that prayers have been offered in some of the churches by the superstitious, not to say unscientific, subjects of the empire to avert the calamity. According to an old prophecy, the Hohenzollern dynasty will surely fall when an emperor has seven son and William is already the father of six.

In consequence of the snow blocade last Saturday the Toronto papers did not reach Peterborough until Monday. THE TIMES, however, supplied all the news, and so completely filled the bill that the absence of the large city papers was scarcely felt. The fact is this journal is fast approaching the dignity of a leading provincial daily newspaper.

Pocket knife blades are very unevenly tempered. Even in so-called standard cutlery some blades are hard and some are soft. For the latter there is no remedy, but the temper of hard blades can easily be drawn slightly. Take a kitchen poker and heat it red hot, have the blade that is to be drawn bright and hold it on the poker for a moment. When the color runs down to violet blue stick the blade into a piece of tallow or beef suit until cold.

The town has no more use for his henchman that it has for the chief of police himself. The indignity which one of our citizens was subjected to by having a mask torn from his face by officer Stewart, while the former was on his way home from the carnival ball, on Tuesday night, indicates the character of the police force as it now is. The police Supervision Committee should investigate this disgraceful assault, and punish the officer by instant dismissal.

Typewriting by the piece cost at least 50 per cent. here more than in Great Britain. The best women typewriters in New York, those who have little offices of their own, work with remarkable care and accuracy. They are feeling the current hard times, however, and though schedule rates have not been reduced, there is much less work to be done, and some of the boss typewriters, so to speak, have reduced the number of their assistants.

The smallest conscript in France last year was Lucien Mathey, of Asnieres, who was exactly seventy-five centimetres, or about thirty inches high. This year the record has been beaten by a young man in the department of the Seine, who is a centimetre shorter. When his father called at the recruiting office with him to inscribe his name, the clerks thought it was a joke, but the proper documents were produced to show that the youth was over twenty years of age.

This season's crazes in Europe have been collected by an Italian editor. In England it is clay modelling, the chief victims being Mr. Gladstone and Sir William Harcourt; in Paris it is riddles, in Italy and Southern France it is jumping beans, painted to represent prominent persons; they jump best on hot plates. In Belgium they have slow smoking races; the pipes are filled with half an ounce of tobacco each, and the winner is he who can hold out longest without relighting. The record so far is sixty-seven minutes.

There are a dozen vacancies in the Senate and names are constantly being suggested for filling up the gaps, but the Government seems disinclined to make any move in the matter. It is not in evidence that any one would shed more than four or five bitter tears if no attempt should be made to keep the Senate going, allowing it to quietly fade away and die like the blossoms that bloom in the spring tra la. You can count the senators who amount to more than a pinch of snuff on the fingers of one hand, but even if the brainless men in the country were in the Senate it would never be of any real value to the country.

Councillor Mills proposes to place the police force outside the jurisdiction of the ratepayers. He evidently does not believe that the people who pay these men should have any authority over them. This is a mistake, and Mr. Mills may discover that the ratepayers in his ward will resent it next January, should they have an opportunity of doing so. We believe that special legislation will be required to place the force under the control of commissioners, and it is absurd to suppose the town will ask for a special act of Parliament even to oblige Mr. Roszel.

Mr. Cecil Rhodes, according to the Duke of Fife, will certainly be enrolled in the future list of England's great men, and foremost among the makers of the British Empire. A poor youth, he emigrated in weak health to South Africa, grew to be "Diamond King," and one of the richest men in the world, Premier of the Cape, and founder of an addition to the Colonial Empire so vast as to sway the British Isle from a geographical point of view, being about six times their extent in territory.

A leaf of a Gothic Bible of the sixth or seventh century was recently discovered in the archives of the Haute Garonne by an abbe of Toulouse. It contains two chapters of Ecclesiasticus, and is valuable, for only a small portion of the Old Testament translated by Bishop Ulfilas has been preserved; the New Testament has fared better. Fragments of the Gothic Bible have been found in many parts of Europe, the most important and most famous of all being the Codex Argenteus written in silver letters on crimson parchment, now in the library at Upsala, in Sweden.

Well and Stylishly Clothed in the Hard Times

Thousands of women in Canada with very limited means have found the secret of dressing well and stylishly in their homes and for the streets.

These fortunate women have found out that, by spending ten cents for a package of one of the fashionable colors of Diamond Dyes, they can re-color an old and faded dress, and make it look like a new production. A lady recently informed us that she had not purchased new material for a dress in three years. This same lady is always neatly and prettily dressed, because she uses the Diamond Dyes. She has several old dresses and dyes each one twice a year, and produces as good colors with the Diamond Dyes as can be found in new goods. It is wonderful, indeed, the saving in dollars that can be effected by a judicious use of Diamond Dyes.

THE CANALS OF MARS.

Mr. Percival Lowell, who has a well-equipped observatory in Arizona, which has recently been devoted to the study of the planet Mars, delivered a lecture in the Lowell Institute course, Boston, Wednesday evening, upon the so-called canals. Mr. Lowell said that the canals form a network of lines following universally the arcs of great circles. The average width of the lines is fifteen miles, and their length from 1,400 to 1,600 miles. These lines or canals appear to run from points on one sea-coast inland to other coasts. The lecturer suggested that the lines were visible because of the increase of vegetation along irrigating canals. The solution of the problem presented by these lines is most difficult, but it would appear that they are really water channels connecting the polar oceans. The poles of the earth are connected by oceans, but such vast bodies of water are lacking on Mars. Again, canals on such curves as Mr. Lowell describes would be impossible if the surface of Mars were not a dead level. The uniformity of the canals would indicate that they resulted from the operation of natural causes. Unless Mars has been densely populated for hundreds of thousands of years, such canals could not have been constructed. The labor required to dig them is incalculable.

THE "ADVANCED WOMAN."

We agree with the New York Sun, that the "advanced woman" will have to tackle Canon du Moulin of Toronto. He has preached a sermon against her in which he told her that she must totter to her fall, for she is unscriptural, has forsaken her household duties, and has become a keen rival of man. "The time is not far distant," cried the Toronto canon, "when women will be deposed from the throne she has usurped, and be driven back to her own domestic domain." We shall look on quietly while this canon of the Episcopal faith drives her back. As yet, we must doubt whether he or anybody else can do it, whether she can be driven out of politics, the halls of learning, the reform business, the professions, the field of science and philosophy, the ordinary industries, and all the other temptations which beset her. She is entitled to liberty and has a right to pursue happiness in her own way, even outside the domestic domain. It will be a job for a cannon to turn her mind.

It seems to us that the canon is too severe upon the advanced woman. We do not believe he knows her. We hardly think there is any ground for his fear that she is destitute of womanhood or wants to acquire manhood. We are rather disposed to entertain the opinion that after all has been said against her, she is a good deal of a woman, and has in her prime qualities of the original woman. She is often handsome, too

IT WAS MURDER.

It is folly to say that the storm was responsible for Friday's disaster. Stormy weather is a condition that has to be reckoned with in the operation of railways in this country. The Grand Trunk ought either to cancel all trains when the weather ceases to be fine or else run its trains under a system that will ensure the safety of pasengers.

Did the storm compel the Grand Trunk management to send the London train out From Brampton before the arrival of the Chicago train had been reported from Weston? The idea of allowing trains to run even in fair weather on a single track with only ten minutes between them is monstrous. But to send one train out from Brampton in a snowstorm and then send another after it before the track was clear to Weston was a crime.

Perhaps all might have been well if there had been no storm. The signals would have been seen and the disaster averted. Why trust to signals or subject precious lives to the chances of the wet weather? To send trains out one after the other, in the hope that if the front train is disabled or delayed, its crew will protect their train by signals is to gamble on probabilities wit human lives as the stakes. The simple expedient of keeping the second train at Brampton until the first train had reached Weston would have rendered the accident impossible. The Grand Trunk Railway Company has trifled with life when it embodies its happy-go-lucky methods in regulations that permit trains to follow on a single track under ten minutes, headway, and the authorities who make and maintain such regulations ought to be placed on their trial for manslaughter.

THE LIME JUICE CLUB.

REGULAR WEEKLY MEETING OF THIS CHASTE SOCIETY.

Free Trade—A Heavy Fine Imposed—By a Large Majority—Music and its Consequences—Indignation Supreme—Words of Advise.

The Hall of Wisdom was, as usual, crowded to the doors as the President ascended dias and took his seat. Fortypercent Duncefort was telling Talkaway Foulweather all about the heroic battle which took place between the chief of police and a lad on the corner of George and Simcoe streets a few days ago in which the officer's heels flew up in the air while they struck an angle of 45 degrees, and he would have been unable to take the boy to the station had assistance not been forthcoming; Gaspipe Drury was explaining to Bro. Edwards the modus operandi of constructing outfall sewers as practiced in England, while Bro. Carese LeBrun got a drink of water down the wrong pipe and four or five members were slapping him on the back. In a brief moment all tongues ceased to clatter as the President's gavel fell with a sharp clink on the desk, and the regular meeting of the Lime Juice Club was regularly opened for the transaction of business.

FREE TRADE.

A communication was read from the secretary of the Liberal Association, Toronto, asking how the club stood on the question of free trade, and the Secretary had scarcely finished reading it when Bro. Talkaway jumped up and exclaimed

"I move that we stand for free trade!"

"Sit down Bro. Talkaway!" roared the President, as he pounded away with his gavel. "What do you know about free trade? You probably imagine that it means free rent."

"Yes, sir."

"Well, you have that now, for your landlord was telling me you hadn't paid him a cent in 14 years. The Secretary will answer to the effect that this club is sort o' sorter, which means that we stand ready to meet up with whichever is best for the country at large. Just at present we ain't doing any talking."

BY A LARGE MAJORITY.

At this juncture Prof. Plumbago Potts, who hasn't been saying anything all winter offered the following preamble and resolution.

"Whereas, The rich are growing richer and the poor poorer, and the life blood of this country is being drained by capital; now, therefore:

"Resolved, That this club put itself on record, and use all its influence to make a more equal division of wealth."

"Bro. Potts," replied the President, "I was looking for you to break out in some such way as this. You talk about your life blood being drained! Why, sir, you haven't done a square day's work in five years. If it were not for the favors your family get of the rich you would all be in the poor house! You want an equal division. Your share would be about $4, and it would take you about four minutes to get to a saloon and blow it in. I have had reports about you all summer, and I want to say to you right here and now that if you don't take a new tack and become a capitalist yourself, something will happen in this club that will make your heart ache.

A vote was then taken on the resolution, and even Brother Potts voted with the noes.

A HEAVY FINE.

"Mister President," said Bro. Anvil Davis, as he bobbed up like a released bedspring, "I move that the records of our last meeting be corrected."

"In what particular, sir?"

"The chair made use of the expression: 'Elucidate the quinine to our destination.' It was a slip of the tongue. He meant: 'Agitate the equine to our destination.' I move to correct."

"Is that motion supported?" demanded the President as he looked around him.

It was not.

Bro. Davis, sit down! For the past six weeks you have been seeking to make yourself as disagreeable as possible and you have finally reached the limit. I shall now fine you $6,000 and costs!"

"What for?"

"For your meddling presumption, sir!"

"But the chair said 'elucidate' for 'agitate,' and 'quinine' for 'equine.'"

"When this chair said, 'Elucidate that quinine to our destination,' he meant just what he said, and nobody in this room but you misunderstood him. The fine against you will stand, sir, and if you don't sit down I shall double that amount!"

Seeing that he was without support Bro. Anvil sat down, but he privately informed Bro. Harry Phelan, who had the stool beside him, that he would carry the case to the Supreme Court if it cost him a million dollars.

MUSIC.

The following touching lines were contributed by Chief Roszel, and were sung with great effect: They were addressed to Sir Richard McBride, President, of the Lime Juice Club:

O, Richard, dear Richard, please come to our aid,
Or we'll be starting for fair H moin-in,
The people are raising a deuce of a row
And we've no one to help us but you!
We'll never consent to live in this land,
If our job should give out—so you see
Get a move on, dear Richard, and come to our aid
And save your poor Burritt and me!

CHORUS—Oh, come, come, dear Richard come,
And save your Burritt and me!

O, Richard, dear Richard, please come to our aid,
Mayor Kendry will do what he can
To keep the wolves out, and the suckers within He'll stay with us like a good man!
There's no use in talking, the jig is all up.
Unless we can have you step in
For the people are mad and are bound to retrench
And stop the waste of their elegant tin!

There was a dead silence for the space of two full minutes. When Cripes Mulcahey broke out in a war whoop that woke up two policemen at the end of the telephone at the station, and broke four panes of glass. The applause became general, and order was with much difficulty restored.

"The Secretary will reply in red ink on blue paper that this club has no sympathy with the Chief. We believe in every man doing something for a living in this world, besides sitting in his office in the day time, riding free on the street cars and going after prisoners that other men catch, saying nothing at all about other matters that I might talk about. As for his friend I think the less said the better. I may add that if Mozart Dunn leader of the Harmony Club, ever introduces such matter into the club again, he will wish he'd never been born. As it is he is fined $23,000 and costs."

INDIGNATION SUPREME.

Fortypercent Duncefort said that on his return from the south, he had received a letter conveying the intelligence that a gentleman, claiming to be a member of the Bar of Ontario, in good standing, was anxious to conduct the the legal business of the Club. Although he took no stock in the individual in question, yet he thought it was his duty to bring the matter up at this meeting. This gentleman offered to perform his duties for a reasonable compensation. His rates for defending a murderer $20; a burglar, $15; an incendiary, $12; a bigamist, $10; a horse theft, $8; embezzler, $7; selling moxie $3. For defending five common thieves in a cheap, and proving an alibi in each case, $30—half shot cash and balance in 60 days.

The reading of the letter was not interrupted by even a cough, but bushels and bushels of short hair could be seen trying to stand up straight with indignation.

The President had a dangerous look in his eye as he got up and began: "Mr. Secretary, you write to that man with the biggest kind of a pen, and in the plainest language and tell him if he ever strikes this town he'd better keep clear of the Hall of Wisdom."

WORDS OF ADVICE.

"Bro. Talkaway, I am going to send you to Toronto on a mission concerning the wealth of this club. Before you go I want to speak a few further words to you."

"Yes, sir."

"In going among strangers don't be so dignified that people will emagine you own half of Peterborough, and yet on the other hand don't be so free and easy that any one will poke you in the ribs. Seek for the happy medium.

"Don't be too fond of talk. The less you say the more you will be credited with knowing.

"Many a man has broken his leg on the sidewalk because he was ashamed to take a safe path in the middle of the road.

"Treat every man like a gentleman. The cost is a mere trifle, and it tickles their vanity.

"Keep clear of argument. If a stranger wants to bet on his game turn from him in silent contempt. If the cars run off the track trust in the Lord.

"Be careful of your manners at table. Our liking for a man can be killed as dead as a door-nail by the way he eats.

"The use of cuss-words are to be deplored. A man with a clean mouth will be respected, even among rascals. If you fall over a wheel-barrow or saw your neck on a clothesline, devote 5 minutes to expressing your feelings. Then stop short off.

"Don't be ashamed to carry your money in your shoe. Many a member of Parliament has come to grief by prancing around with his wallet in his pocket.

"If you meet a man who says he does not believe in the future state don't waste your breath to argue the matter. He may be a person the Lord created without a soul, just as an experiment."

"The Janitor will now lock up the stove polish in the safe, so as to prevent members using it on their boots, and we will go home for one week."

Market Reports.

PETERBOROUGH.

The market has been exceedingly quiet for the past two weeks, the result, no doubt, of the recent heavy storms. With the favorable change of weather, however, the market has steadily improved, and we may expect a large attendance to-day, both in the market building and on the square. Wednesday's market was fairly well attended. Prices range the same as last week, excepting oats, which have advanced to 33c per bushel, and are still advancing; hay $8 to $9 a ton; dressed hogs $4 75 to $5.25. Wood is more plentiful at former prices.

MONTREAL.

LIVE STOCK MARKET.

February 15.—At the East End Abattoir this morning there was a fair market and a good attendance of butchers. The offerings, particularly of butchers' cattle, were moderately heavy, though calves were rather scarce. The amount of stock offered was as follows:—700 cattle, 200 sheep and lambs and 30 calves. Prices were firm but showed little change from Monday. The principal quotations were good, butchers' cattle at 3½c per lb. live weight; sheep and lambs, 4c per lb. live weight, and calves at $2 to $10 each. The stock was mostly cleared out.

NOT MUCH CHRISTIANITY IN IT.

Respectfully dedicated to the many members of sleighing parties who have left the city on pleasure intent within the last few weeks, some of them being church organizations.

He prayeth best who loveth best,
All things both great and small.

They calls us Christians. Within church each week
We bend the knee, we grace and blessing seek,
We look with horror—with averted glance—
Upon the sinner who we see, perchance
Beating a wretched horse; we see
With loathing eyes man's acts of cruelty,
A beaten dog calls forth our pity; we
From piteous sights and sound would swiftly flee
To call for help to stay the cruel goad
That fain would hasten onward heavy load
By willing horse let stop for want of strength
To drag the burden such a weary length
Of way. We'd speak with bated breath
Of him who heedless worked a horse to death,
Yet we would go far on pleasure bent
With many a song and shout of merriment,
For many miles packed thirty in a sleigh,
With two poor "nags" to drag us all the way;
With panting breath to stagger on the road,
Hasten by blows from cruel whip and goad.
Yet we are Christians (?) please remember, we
Cannot be charged with inhumanity.
Church choirs go, a load within the van,
And Sunday schools and Christian maids and men.
What matter if the two poor wretched nags
Stumble and fall; 'tis fun for silly wags.
Sing on the louder, suff'ring goes before
And mirth behind; there is no stringent law
To teach these Christians charity divine;
It's real, true meaning sure they can't define,
Tho' many a tough bad road, tho' drifted snow,
Panting and tired two poor beasts go.
Heed not their suffering on enjoyment bent,
Think but of self, these poor dumb beasts are meant
But for thy services; drive them mile on mile,
Thirty people in the big sleigh pile.
Twill cost less money, suff'ring's naught to them
Forgotten is thy Christianity.

Piles! Piles! Itching Piles!

SYMPTOMS—Moisture, intense itching and stinging most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form, which often bleed and ulcerate, becoming very sore. SWAYNE'S OINTMENT stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in most cases removes the tumors. At druggists, or by mail, for 50 cents. Dr. Swayne & Son, Philadelphia.

OUR ELIGIBLE BACHELORS

ANOTHER BATCH OF HOMELESS MEN HANDSOME AND HOMELY.

All Able to Keep a Wife, but Either too Shy or Selfish to Do So—Some Choice Catches in This List.

The list of eligible bachelors was crowded out last week, and many of THE SATURDAY TIMES' readers felt real "sore" about it. A great number had sent in names to be published, and they were anticipating a nice, quiet little laugh on their friends. Naturally, when the list did not appear they kicked. The omission was absolutely necessary, as was stated, owing to a rush of "paid matter."

There is a great pile of names of bachelors that have accumulated. Some of them are confirmed, dyed-in-the-wool woman haters. Others are meek little dandies, and the balance are a job-lot. Throughout the list there are some "plums." All of them are eligible, competent to boss a fireside, build fires, match colored silks, or wash poodles. Any one of them would make a kind, affectionate and responsible husband. THE SATURDAY TIMES predicts a matrimonial epidemic in the near future. Everybody will benefit by it. There will be boom in town that the building of seventeen Trent Valley Canals couldn't produce. THE SATURDAY TIMES promoted both enterprises, consequently we will come in for a share of the benefits. Every new home established in Peterborough means a new subscriber, and numerous paid notices as the years roll by. Here is this week's list:

Carton, M.—33 years of age; $20,000. This gentleman is the well-known wholesale grocer. He has dodged Cupid's darts pretty well, so far. Business has occupied all his time, and he has made an enviable success in mercantile lines. Were he to devote the same energy to making a home, no doubt he would make a howling success of it as well. Mr. Carton is one of Peterborough's most respected and popular business men. He is wealthy, good looking and of a good disposition. Here's a chance for some worthy woman.

Clark, John—55 years of age; $15,000. The girl who lands this gentleman will get the finest engagement ring manufactured. Mr. Clark is the well known senior member of the jewellery firm of Clark & Gibson. He has had the notion for a number of years, but is always putting it off. Fatal mistake. He should secure some precious jewel at once to adorn the diadem of home, whose luster would shed rays of happiness and dazzling felicity on his lonely life. He is very popular, every inch a business man, and a good catch in these hard times.

Simons, P. jr.—28 years of age; $6,000. One of the firm of P. Simons & Co., is this young man. Being in the tailoring business, he can sew on his own buttons, and this relieves the girl that gets him of one of the most unpleasant duties of matrimony. Mr. Simons is good looking, and well liked. He is not a confirmed bachelor by any means, and never will be, for a man who can furnish his wife with a tailor made suit every season, is sure to be snapped up. More than this he could take home every week the waste ends of the various cloth used in his business, to his wife for crazy quilts, and what woman wouldn't be in a constant whirl of delight. We predict an early ending of Mr. Simon's bachelor days.

King, Courtney—22 years of age; $5,000. This young gentleman is a medical student and a son of our popular townsmen Dr. King. He has excellent prospects, and is a good risk for any young lady. Mr. King is good looking, possessed of splendid talents and in fact is a chip o' the ol' block. No higher recommendation than this is necessary. He will go soon.

McGill, Vernon—21 years of age; $35,000. He is a delightful young man, at present with the Ontario bank. He plays a lovely game of curling, and is very popular in town. Mr. McGill is an artist of much skill. He can faithfully portray a young lady's profile at a single glance. It is surmised he is equally as adept at "drawing" their hearts. This is only surmissed; of course, from observation. Young, good looking, wealthy and brainy there is no reason why Mr. McGill should not draw a prize-package when he reaches into the matrimonial grab bag.

Workman, Thomas—45 years of age, blessed if he ain't; $5,000. Here is another artist, whose beautiful paintings when exhibited attract more attention than a circus poster. Somehow the fair sex always gets sentimental over artists. They idealize them even as artists make ideals of them. But as far as can be learned no one has idealized Mr. Workman yet, and it's a shame, for a more popular, generous-hearted gentlemen never breathed. He is well liked in town and no doubt will succumb to the inevitable fate of artists at a near date. He has a valuable collection of paintings, worth a great deal of money, and some say he is keeping them until the auspicious occasion arrives. But this is only rumor.

Gladman, F. W.—24 years of age; $5,000. Here is a rising young barrister rapidly growing grey over Blackstone and law reports. He has excellent prospects. Some nice young lady ought to keep him in mind for the coming men of the new century will all be lawyers, doctors, newspaper men and councillors. He is a good catch if taken in time.

Gough, Gus—27 years old; $25,000. Everybody knows Mr. Gough as one of Peterborough's most successful and enterprising young business men, of the firm of Gough Bros. He is a catch if there is one this side of Omemee. Mr. Gough possesses every quality calculated to endear him as a husband. He is extremely good looking, industrious, generous and has a regular ice cream disposition. Such men as Mr. Gough owe themselves and the community in which they live, a duty, and that is to get married. In this case it is sincerely to be desired that he will "Gough" and get married at an early date. THE SATURDAY TIMES extends congratulations in advance.

Morrow, R. F.—30 years; $7,000. The subject of this sketch is a dentist and pulls teeth with or without gas. He has seen so much of women's tongues that he has never married, and is now passing out of the hard shell stage into the next. If he isn't caught before the general elections we fear he never will be. Here is another case of a popular, wealthy, kindly dispositioned creature, who should marry and won't. It is the duty of some nice young lady to catch him. He can't "extract" much pleasure from single blessedness.

Terrill, Alfred—25 years of age; $5,000. We expose this young man at the request of seven young ladies—one in Woodstock. He is a genial young fellow and a very clever writer as is evinced by his excellent work on the Examiner, he being a member of its editorial staff. Mr. Terrill is essentially a lady's man, and in consequence is very popular with them. He is good looking, dresses extremely well and boards at the Grand Central. It is safe to say that he will soon be captured, as newspaper men are always in demand.

LeBrun, Cross—32 years of age; $7,000. Here is a nice man. He is handsome, genial and one of those sort of fellows you can slap on the shoulder without fear of being rebuffed. No gentleman in town has more friends than Mr. LeBrun. He is everybody's friend, and was never known to refuse an oyster fry. Mr. LeBrun is the victim of a misfortune, however. He always has that tired feeling that you read so much about, and in view of this fact, he deserves all the more credit for his unvarying good nature and sweet disposition. At one time Mr. LeBrun was connected with the linen department of a New York establishment, but he prefers Peterborough above all others as a place of residence. He is an ardent hunter, and a devotee of sports of all kinds. At the rink he is a conspicuous figure. Mr. LeBrun would make an excellent husband, but he is shy. Some nice young lady may catch him, though, some day.

Harper, James—30 years of age; $5,000. Mr. Harper is with Adam Hall on George street. He escaped observation, owing to the fact that he has grown a great crop of whiskers since his recent severe sickness. Mr. Harper is a clever, handsome young man, with excellent prospects, and would make a good husband.

Phelan, Walter—23 years of age; $10,000. Here's a cuckoo. Walter is known by everybody. He is handsome and manly, courteous in manner and has an angelic disposition. In dress he is a daily hint from Paris. Mr. Phelan is a great lady's man, and, strange to say, has a partiality for other fellows' girls, which, of course, is real mean of him, in view of the fact that he has several of his own. At present he is with the Peterborough Hardware Company, and has excellent prospects. Possessing rare business ability and unlimited energy, it is safe to say he is one of the coming men. He is a most desirable catch, and will doubtless be snatched in the course of the next year or so.

Sawyers, Gus. Jr.—23 years old; $7,000. Mr. Sawyers is a surveyor. He is an enterprising young man full of energy and hustle. With a good woman to keep him straight, he would no doubt make a good and respectable married man.

Nelson, F. W.—26 years of age; $10,000. Here's a pretty nice chap. Mr. Nelson is with the Ontario Bank, and looks slightly older than he really is on account of a full beard. He's a vocalist of some local renown and can sing "you can't swing on our gate" with the best of them. Mr. Nelson is distinguished looking, amiable and a good match. He is popular in all circles and would be more so if he could play curling better. In this respect he is a poor fist at it, but nobody can be perfect in everything. Mr. Nelson is a decided prize, all things considered, and will be gathered into the fold one of these days.

Hay, Gus—24 years old. $5,000. He doesn't look that old, but he is, having voted for prohibition in 1892. Mr. Hay is with Stratton & Hall, the well known lawyers, and some day will be a bright luminary in the legal firmament. He is a real nice young man, very steady and industrious and would make an A1 husband. In appearance he is handsome, with a sort of feminine cast of countenance, very becoming to him.

Connal, Thomas—22 years old; $15,000. Mr. Connal is with the Peterborough Hardware Company. He is six foot in height, and therefore can light the gas without standing on a chair. He is still growing. Mr. Connal is a very desirable match. The absent minded look which he carries around is misleading. He possesses splendid business abilities and is well able to maintain a wife. He is one of the many young men in Peterborough who should marry, and is exposed with the sole idea that some nice young lady will immediately set her cap for him.

Dickson, Fred—24 years of age; $15,000. This lovely young man is with the Sun Life Insurance company. He has been matrimonially inclined for some time, and carries a large insurance on his life. He is an excellent risk, and well able to pay the premium. It is to be hoped that some Canadian lassie will "write" him in her books in short order. The insurance business is one of the most remunerative, and Mr. Dickson is a success at it. He is handsome, generous and kind, and is tired of boarding.

Shortly, O.—24 years of age; $7,000. Mr. Shortly is with Mr. B. Shortly, harness dealers on George street. He is extremely good looking and quite a lady's man. There is no good reason why he should not marry.

Metheral, James—Age doubtful; $10,000. This gentleman is of the firm of Best & Metheral, machinists. It looks as though he would become a confirmed bachelor. He has never been known to go with a young lady, which is a very peculiar trait in any man living in Peterborough. He is very fond of reading and peruses many literary works with a preference for The North American Review, The Scientific American and THE SATURDAY TIMES. He would make a good husband.

Best, Dixon—35 years of age; $20,000 (prospectively.) This is the senior member of Best & Metheral, and a nice fellow he is. He has never exhibited any matrimonial symptoms, but devotes nearly all his time to reading and inventing. His genius is evidenced in a new patent self-binder without a single cog wheel. Unlike Edison, who married early, he prefers single-blessedness. He would make a good husband and should be looked after.

Kidd, Joseph—29 years of age; $7,000. Mr. Kidd is with B. F. Ackerman & Co., and is one of the high dignitaries in the Oddfellow order. He has been boarding now for about 10 years. He is a most exemplary young man, extremely good looking and possesses no bad habits. He would make a good husband and should be attended to at once.

Wharton, James—29 years of age; $7,300. Here is one of the handsomest men in Peterborough. He is possessed of excellent habits and is a great favorite with the fair sex, but up to date has never showed any signs of matrimony. He sometimes takes trips out of town without telling anyone where he is going, which gives rise to the belief that he has an attraction somewheres in the province. He is a good catch.

NOTES.

Mr. Earnest Wasson's rating is reduced again to $15,000.

Brock street has become quite a favorite promenade for unmarried ladies since the eligible bachelors were published. There are several wealthy M. D.s' on that street.

Purely by error Bear Green's and Mr. McKay's ages were mixed. The former is 28 and the latter 26.

Mr. Peter Corkery reports splendid progress with his Chicago "mash."

THE SATURDAY TIMES' bachelor editor's office hours are between 2 and 3 a. m. This is for the benefit of those who persist in calling in the day time.

The libel suit instituted by W. H. Meredith has fallen through. An order placed with him for a suit of clothes settled it.

A postal card from A. Ostrom asking that his name be left out will be disregarded. Mr. Ostrom's rating will be looked up next week and his name published. We could not get any particulars this week, as he was confined indoors, suffering from a severe cold caught by falling in a tub of water.

BUDGET FROM OTTAWA

TENDERS FOR A SECTION OF THE TRENT VALLEY CANAL.

OTTAWA, Feb. 13.—The Government has decided to call for tenders for the construction of the Peterborough and Lakefield division of the Trent Valley canal. The original plans and specifications for this division have been remodelled as the result of a resurvey. The river route has been decided upon, thus doing away with a cutting some three and a half miles in length and lengthening the cannavigati some six and a half miles. This change is amply warranted by the greater facility of construction and the very considerable diminution in cost which will result from thus making use of a stretch of the River Otonabee. The tenders will have to be in the Department of Railways and Canals by March 23. Mr. R. B. Rogers, the engineer in charge of the canal, is here.

SALE OF A TIMBER LIMIT.

A sale has been consummated by which the property known at Ward's limits, on the Rouge river, some eighty miles northeast of Ottawa, is transferred to Mr. E. J. Swan, of New York, the sum of $100,000 being involved in the transaction. The area is about 220 square miles, the Rouge river running through them for about 68 miles. Mr. Swan purposes erecting mills on the property near the junction of the Rouge and Ottawa rivers, and using the timber on the limits for the manufacture of matches, tooth picks, clothes pins, pulp, furniture of various kinds and lumber generally. There is splendid water-power on the property, and the object of the purchaser is to make use of every piece of timber to be found on the limits. Several city gentlemen are interested in the project, and the main office will be located in this city.

CARNIVAL COMMITTEE.

The Executive Committee of the carnival met last night for the last time. A letter was received from his Excellency the Governor-General, stating that the expenses of Mr. Sims for keeping the rink and slide at Rideau hall in condition would be defrayed by Lord Aberdeen. After much figuring, it was shown that there would be a surplus on hand of $431, without the percentage from the railways. If these are as high as expected, there may be about $1,000 left on hand after everything is cleared up.

THE WATTERS CASE.

In the fighting since Jan. 29 the Japanese have lost 88 killed, 219 wounded, and the Chinese 700 in killed alone.

NOTORIOUS HOUSEHOLD PESTS.

How Buffalo Beetles, Moths and Ants May Be Exterminated.

Those notorious household pests, buffalo beetles, moths and ants, furnished material for a report by State Entomologist C. H. Fernald, an abstract from which will be of great interest to all housekeepers:

"I have tried many methods for the destruction of the buffalo beetle and find no more successful way of keeping a house free from them than by a very careful watch for the beetles on the windows in February and March, a frequent inspection of all woolen clothing not in constant use, a daily examination of pieces of red carpeting on the floors which are liable to be infested and carefully excluding the beetles from flowers brought into the house. It is desirable, before putting down a carpet, to saturate the cracks with benzine and cover the floor very carefully with carpet paper, or even with newspapers, in such a way that the larvae cannot find access to the carpet from beneath.

"The beetles usually lay their eggs, and the larvae attack the carpets under their exposed edges, and these parts may be protected by washing over the edges and a few inches of the undersides with a solution of corrosive sublimate in alcohol in the proportion of 60 grains to one pint. The alcohol quickly evaporates, leaving the corrosive sublimate over all the fibers of the carpet where the application has been made. It must be remembered that corrosive sublimate is a poison and cannot be safely used where children play upon the carpet.

"The larvae of the pitchy carpet beetle are often found feeding on carpets in the same manner as the buffalo carpet beetle and sometimes associated with it. There is but one generation in a year, as indicated by those which I have bred, for larvae found in June did not transform to perfect beetles until the following May. The remedies for this pest are the same as for the buffalo beetle.

"It is desirable where rugs are used instead of carpets to take them up and shake them out of doors frequently during the spring and summer. If carpets are used, and they become infested, it is well to lay wet cloths along the edges and use a hot flatiron on them. If this is properly done, it will force the steam down through the carpets, killing not only moth, but also any carpet beetles that may be feeding beneath.

"All garments liable to be attacked by carpet beetles or clothes moths, if not to be used during the summer, should be thoroughly shaken and then packed away in tight paper bags or in pasteboard boxes, with a strip of paper pasted around the edge of the cover, so as to leave no crack.

"Small red ants often infest dwelling houses and become an intolerable nuisance. The important thing is to find their nests, for it is then a comparatively easy matter to destroy the whole colony. It may be that the removal of a board where they come into a room will expose their headquarters, when a little kerosene poured over it will destroy all the inmates. If they come from some ant hill outside of the house, they can be destroyed by making holes a foot apart in the hill and pouring a tablespoonful of bisulphide of carbon into each and stamping down. The bisulphide of carbon quickly evaporates, and permeating the ground destroys all in the colony."—Boston Transcript.

The Falls of the McKenzie.

McKenzie river is the outflow of twin lakes on the eastern slope of Hackerman's pass. It is a mighty rushing torrent from the beginning. Two miles below Clear lake are the first of two great falls, one at least 75 feet, and probably more, and the other 100 feet. It is something of a task to get to them through the unbroken forest, and over the roughest volcanic rock imaginable.

Nothing concerning the scenery of these rugged regions is likely to be overdrawn. When we stood at the falls, we were amazed at the marvels of grandeur and beauty presented. After Niagara none of us had seen anything approaching these. It is a torrent that is precipitated over the face of a cliff in the heart of an indescribably rugged canyon and leaps without a break to the pool below, filling the gorge and covering the cliffs with spray and causing rank growths of grass and fragrant flowers to spring up on every inch of soil.—Albany Democrat.

"What the Dickens?"

Some genius lately discovered that "What the dickens?" is older than the author of "Pickwick," since it occurs in Gay's "Beggar's Opera." Had he pursued his investigations he might have found it to be older than Gay, since it occurs in "The Merry Wives of Windsor," act 3, scene 2, where Mrs. Page, in answer to Ford's "Whence had you this pretty weathercock?" (to wit, Falstaff's page Robin) replies: "I cannot tell what the dickens his name is my husband had him of. What do you call your knight's name, sirrah?" Quoth Robin, "Sir Falstaff."—Macmillan's Magazine.

Loss of the Cienfuegos at Harbor Island—The Vessel Struck on a Coral Reef and Filled—Passengers all Safe.

Special to the Times.

HALIFAX, N. S., Feb. 11.—A despatch from Liverpool says the schooner Clara E. Friend, of and from Gloucester, while trying to make harbor here Saturday night, went ashore on Neil's Ledges, two miles from here, and became a total loss.

Her crew, consisting of 12 or 14 men, were every one drowned. It is impossible to find their names as the vessel is in a thousand pieces.

PARADIS MAY FAIL.

He is Seeking Canadian Funds for Repatriation.

Special to the Times.

HOUGHTON, Mich., Feb. 14.—Over a thousand French Canadians were packed in the Opera House at Lake Linden on Monday night to receive information from Father Paradis concerning their transportation to Canada.

An official of the Canadian Pacific was expected to represent the railway, but he failed to appear.

Father Paradis was unable to offer them free transportation, and nothing special was done at the meeting.

Blaze at Tilsonburg.

TILSONBURG, Feb. 14.—What might have been a very disastrous fire broke out in D. Zant's dry goods store at an early hour this morning. Considerable damage was done to the building, and a portion of the stock was damaged mostly by water. There is an insurance of $9,500 on the stock which will much more than cover the damage.

Rates on Flour and Grain Reduced.

The C.P.R. and G.T.R. have reduced the rates on flour and grain from all points in Ontario to Quebec and the Maritime Provinces. The reduction amounts to two and a half cents per 100 lbs. and has stiffened the price of flour, oats, millfeed and barley wonderfully.

A New Band.

The members of Queen's Own Lady True Blues No. 48 intend purchasing instruments for a piccalo and drum band, which they propose organizing at an early date. The members are now taking up subscriptions for the purpose, and have nearly the necessary amount subscribed.

A Big Blaze Averted.

About 2 o'clock Friday morning a cry of fire was heard issuing from the throats of several late pedestrians on George street. A small crowd soon gathered in front of the Grand Central hotel and centered their gaze on a fourth storey window from which volumes of smoke was issuing. Some articles in the room had caught fire, and a serious blaze was averted by the prompt application of several buckets of water.

The Better Problem.

Mr. Angers, Dominion Minister of Agriculture, made a very important declaration, before a meeting of the butter and cheese exporters in Montreal yesterday. He said the Government would purchase the winter butter manufactured, between January and April, and that it would be shipped to England and disposed of through the department agent.

Supreme Court for Ontario.

At a meeting of the Supreme Court of Judicature for Ontario held on Saturday last it was ordered as follows: Con. rule 158 is rescinded and the following substituted therefor: "158.—Where only one auditor is appointed his remuneration is hereby fixed at the sum of $500 per annum payable in monthly instalments, for which checks shall be issued, payable out of the general interest account upon the fiat of any Judge of the High Court." J. F. C. Haldane, of Windsor, barrister, was appointed a special examiner for the county of Essex.

A Sharper Caught.

Mr. F. W. Coulson, 24 Macdonell avenue, Toronto, proprietor of the M. V. Lubon Co., was before Police Magistrate Denison a short time since on a charge of having violated the Ontario Medical Act. A number of witnesses were examined, among them two young men, who alleged that they had paid $50 each for treatment, and after being treated by Coulson, found they were getting no better, and refused to pay any more money. Coulson was fined $75 and costs. This fellow is known throughout the country as the M. V. Lubon Company, against whom several judgments have recently been entered for unpaid advertising bills. We ask our brethern of the press to pass him around.

A Patent Snow-Leveller.

Mr. Sam Fox, deputy reeve of Ops, has invented a snow-leveller for filling pitch-holes and levelling off the drifts. He has constructed one for his own use as an experiment and has since had a second one constructed by Mr. D. Sinclair. The appliance has been thoroughly tested during the past few days and every one who has seen it in operation speaks in the highest terms of the work accomplished by it. Letters patent have been applied for. Reeve Ellis and Councillor Hutton supplied a team of horses yesterday and gave the apparatus a thorough test on the Oakwood road where the drifts were bad. They stated that they did more work in one hour than could be accomplished by ten men in a day.—Watchman.

Tied the Teachers Hands

On Wednesday last a fracas took place place in Hastings Public School that should have been dealt with by the magistrate. The trustees however, after due consideration, thought best to notify the parents and give notice what would follow if repeated. The head teacher being sick, notice was given that the children of his department which occupy the first flat, were to go home. All went but two or three, who were joined by two from the Separate school. These continued to occupy the school room and created so much noise that the teacher of the junior department upstairs sent one of the pupils down to get their names, which he did. The boys followed upstairs and demanded from the teacher their names, which she refused to give. They secured her hands so she could not defend herself and then searched for the book in which the names were written.

THE CARNIVAL BALL.

Many Grotesque and Pretty Costumes—Splendid Music.

The opera house Tuesday was coverted into a bower of gay colors by profuse decorations of flags and bunting, that in effect was very pretty. The occasion was the charity carnival ball, the proceeds of which will be used in the dispensation of charity to the deserving poor of Peterborough and the Protestant Home.

The attendance was fairly good, although the affair would have been more successful had there been more present in costume. However, as those who merely went as onlookers contributed towards the receipts as well as those who participated, a considerable sum of money was raised, and as this was the laudable purpose of the ball, it was, financially speaking, an entire success.

Good music, furnished by the Battalion band and Butcher's orchestra, was a feature that added much to the pleasure and success of the affair. The selections by the former, and the dancing numbers by the latter were well rendered, and very much enjoyed.

The costumes were pretty and grotesque, and some of them were ingenious conceptions, carried into magnificent effect. The scene, as the maskers flitted through the figures of the various dances, was certainly pretty.

During the evening refreshments were served in an adjoining hall, under the supervision of Mr. William Bowman, who catered for the affair.

The maskers unmasked at 12 o'clock. The judging began shortly afterwards. The judges were Mrs. Dr. O'Sullivan, Mrs. George Rubidge and Messrs. R. G. Gough and C. LeBrun. The prize winners were:

Best Dressed Lady—Miss Hay. Costumed as a Hungarian Peasant Lady.

Best Dressed Gentleman—Mr. J. P. Hurley. Costumed as a Turk.

Best Comic Costume—Mr. Fred Logan. Costumed as a Tiger.

THAT AGINCOURT DISASTER.

The Conductor and Station Agent Give Contradictory Evidence.

The inquest to enquire into the cause of the collision, by which Engineer Rigg lost his life, was continued at Agincourt Wednesday.

The principal witnesses were Conductor Richard Boundy and Station Agent Weighill, of Unionville. The general impression is that one of these officials is to blame and the testimony of each seemed to display a desire to relieve himself from responsibility and put it upon the other.

County Constable Hobbs testified to the finding of the body of Rigg under the van 21 hours after the accident.

Conductor Boundy of the express train described the journey from Port Hope to Unionville, showing that at every station he had enquired whether the line was clear for him before starting. He said: "When I met the agent at Unionville I asked him if the plow was at Agincourt and he said 'yes,' and that it was all right to go on." Boundy then went on collecting fares and was in the post office car when the accident occurred.

Albert Weighill, the station agent at Unionville, testified that Conductor Boundy did not come to him and inquire about the plow. He swore positively that he gave no orders for Boundy to proceed, and when he found the train moving off he tried to stop it but could not do so, and he looked for an accident after that.

Special to the Times.

PORT HOPE, Feb. 10.—The fire alarm was sounded a few minutes to 12 o'clock last night and it was found that Trinity College School was burning. A terrific gale was blowing from the west and it was some time before help arrived.

The fire which originated in the tower in the west wing is supposed to have caught by the explosion of a lamp, and the flames fanned by the high wind swept completely through the building. The firemen were very much handicapped as one of the pipes of the waterworks had bursted during the severe frost of the last few days. Lines of men were formed and buckets of water handed along. Everything was done to save the building but without success.

In few minutes the fire had spread from the west wing to the centre, and the men were forced to retire, leaving the flames to continue the devastation towards the chapel, and soon nothing but the walls were left standing.

Very little of the contents of the buildings were saved. Teachers and pupils alike lost more than half of their belongings, some of them saving nothing but the garments they are now wearing. The gymnasium and the principal house are not injured in the least, although for some time it was thought Dr. Bethune's would take fire, as the flames were blowing directly towards it.

The pupils are quartered in private houses and at the hotels. School will not be disbanded as the Principal has made arrangements to use the St. Lawrence hotel for that purpose until the easter holidays at least, or until further arrangements are made. The Principal, Rev. Dr. Bethune sent the following telegram to the parents and guardians of the several pupils:

"Boys comfortably quartered with their friends. Arrangements are made to carry on school immediately."

As far as can be learned the loss is fully covered by an insurance of $80,000 in various companies, and it is understood the school is to be rebuilt at once. No lives were lost and nobody was seriously hurt.

AN UNAUTHORIZED SIGNATURE.

Editor of the Times.

SIR,—I notice in the issue of THE TIMES of Feb. 13 an article purporting to be a "statement" of the passengers detained in the snow-up on the Midland Railway near Agincourt on Friday and Saturday last. I saw this statement, or one similar, in the columns of the Globe for the first time, and did not sign it nor authorize the use of my name in such a connection. I heard something incidentally of such a statement being contemplated but I paid little attention to the matter, for I was entirely ingrossed with my own distressing condition, a member of my family being seriously ill upon the train. I had and have not the slightest personal knowledge of the attitude of the Grand Trunk authorities to the snow-bound passengers, but I have a personal knowledge of the extreme kindness, solicitude and courtesy of the train officials who did everything in their power to contribute to the comfort and to mitigate the inconvenience the detained passengers necessarily suffered.

In regard to the description appended my name as printed at the end of the statement in question, those who know me know that I could be trusted not to show the execrable taste of affixing expression of my business relation to the Examiner to my signature (even if I had made it) as a private individual. I had no authority to speak for the Examiner—I was travelling as a private individual in the interests of my personal affairs.

Yours very truly,

F. R. YOKOME.

HELD FOR MANSLAUGHTER

Conductor Boundy Exonerated and Agent Weighill Arrested.

"We find that John Rigg came to his death by the express train No. 1 running into a snow plow and that Albert Weighill was negligent in not displaying his signal board to hold the express, and are of the opinion that the G.T.R. rules are not specific enough, especially those governing the running of snow plows."

This was the verdict of the coroner's inquest into the death of John Rigg, killed in the accident near Agincourt on Friday last. As a result, Weighill is now in jail charged with manslaughter.

The evidence was of a somewhat contradictory character but the burden of it upheld Conductor Boundy's story that he had asked the agent where the snow plow was.

Albert Weighill was recalled. He swore that he had not tried to use the signal board because it was blocked by snow. He received no message from the plow after it left Unionville, and he was certain that it could not have reached Agincourt before the express drew out of Unionville. He had not spoken to Conductor Boundy. He could not have given Boundy instructions to go ahead unless he had himself heard of the arrival of the plow at Agincourt.

EVIDENCE AGAINST WEIGHILL.

Conductor Boundy was recalled. He said that he had asked Weighill in the presence of Brakeman Topley if all was right and was told "yea." He made it a rule to get verbal instructions from station agents when a plow was running ahead, and he had done so on this occasion. He heard no fog signal before the collision.

George Nimmo, driver of the express, corroborated Boundy' testimony that he was to go out, that the road was clear, that the plow had reached Agincourt to go ahead. He had seen Weighill and Boundy in conversation.

Phil. McCabe, fireman, saw Weighill and Boundy talking.

James Topley deposed that he heard Boundy ask Weighill where the plow was and the latter said it was at Agincourt and that all was right.

James Phillips, express messenger, swore that he saw Boundy and Weighill in conversation.

EVIDENCE OF WEIGHILL.

James Eckard testified that he saw the conductor walk along the track by the train, but not on the platform. He had not seen Weighill and Boundy talking together.

Harry Stevenson said that he had not seen the conductor off the train and Thos. Sharpe, Moses Hemingway, and Edward Sharpe corroborated this.

R. J. Strype, train despatcher, said that the snowplough conductor should book at all stations, and the agents should turn the signal board and block the road, keeping express trains one station behind.

Richard Butler, section foreman, who was on the snow-plow, said that a red light was put out on the rear of the plow, but he did not know of any fog signals being laid.

John Weighill, brother of the station agent, testified that he had spoken to his brother, but he did not see Boundy.

The coroner and Crown Attorney Dewart then addressed the jury, who retired and returned the above verdict, as a result of which J. C. Clarke, J. P., issued a warrant against Albert Weigeill, who was arrested.

Weighill was taken to Toronto yesterday morning by Constable Hodge, and his lawyer, T. C. Robinette, is endeavoring to secure bail.

MISS GOODWYN AGAIN.

She Bobs Up in Toronto With Charles Stevens as Her Brother.

Miss Louise Goodwyn, a fascinating brunette, who by her versatility and many accomplishments managed to secure an entree into Peterborough society circles, and whose many exploits were exposed by THE TIMES, creating a profound sensation in the aforementioned circles, has once more bobbed up and got her name in public print.

It is fresh in the memories of our readers how Miss Goodwyn ran away with Charles Stevens, her sister's husband, and lived with him as his wife. They took rooms at the Balmoral hotel, and were surprised one night by the appearance of the real wife with hers and Stevens' first-born in her arms.

Miss Goodwyn was shown up in THE TIMES in her true light, and she took wings for Toronto. A few days afterwards Stevens and his wife had a reconciliation. He renounced the sister, and promised to live with and cherish the wife of his bosom forever and a day. Consequently they took up their abode in Ashburnham.

A few weeks ago, however, Stevens again deserted his wife and sought the sister in Toronto. The Toronto News of yesterday, tells something of the latter's career in the Queen city:—

"There appeared in the Division Court to-day Mrs. Duncan Coulson, of 186 Beverley street, wife of the general manager of the Bank of Toronto, as a defendant in a suit brought by Miss Louise Goodwyn for $14 wages. Both were in the court and both told their stories for the edification of many who grew interested in the tale of troubles between mistress and maid.

THE MAID'S TALE OF WOE.

"The maid's story was that she was engaged at $10 a month and was ordered out after three weeks at half an hour's notice. She was offered $4, which she refused. She described the service as harsh. She was not allowed to have gentlemen visitors, had only one night a week out, had to be in early and was not allowed to use the telephone. She was locked out once when she went to her home, and was not given a message which came from a sick friend.

WHY SHE WAS DISCHARGED.

"Mrs. Coulson's story was that Louise was talking to a man at the door every night. On the evening of her discharge she was told not to go, but she insisted upon visiting a sick friend in spite of the consequences. She spoke insolently to her mistress, took off her cap, would not wait on the table and locked herself in her room. Mrs. Coulson said she discharged her because she stayed out till one o'clock one night and spent the rest of the night in the basement.

"The maid said in the rebuttal that her brother was the only man who called on her.

THE MAID LOST HER CASE.

"Judge Morson found that Miss Goodwyne had been properly discharged as she had disobeyed orders, and awarded her the amount paid into court by Mrs. Coulson, $4.

"Miss Goodwyne is a trained nurse, but being unable to secure employment as such took the first thing that was offered her."

There is not the slightest doubt that the man mentioned in the above clipping, whom Miss Goodwyn persisted in seeing every night, was Charles Stevens. Miss Goodwyn palmed him off as her brother. She worked the same racket in Peterborough, and successfully, too, until THE TIMES made the exposure.

Mrs. Stevens was seen by a TIMES' representative and to him she said:

"My husband has deserted me again and is living with my sister in Toronto. If it wasn't for my dear little baby, I think I would go there and shoot them."

C. N. & P. RAILWAY.

Encouraging News as to the Prospect of a Beginning.

The Campbellford Herald says:—On Tuesday morning of last week Reeve W. W. Armstrong received a letter from Mr. Geo. Guillet, M.P., secretary of the C. N. & P. Railway, asking for a meeting of the council to pass a bylaw granting the right of way along and across certain streets within the corporation of Campbellford.

Acting immediately upon the advice contained in the letter, Mr. Armstrong summoned the members of the Council together and a bylaw was passed in accordance therewith. He afterwards took a copy of the bylaw, certified to, and sent to Mr. Guillet by the afternoon mail.

Accompanying the Secretary's letter was a plan of the village showing a profile of the road—the streets along which it will run. According to the route laid out the new railway will cross the Trent River in the neighborhood of the Northumberland Paper Mills and follow Saskatoon avenue to Second street, across which it will run and strike Rear street at the Dominion hotel. From this point it will proceed along Rear street to the Rathbun coal sheds, thence to Ranney street and along this thoroughfare to Front street at the Rathbun mill, where it will cross Front street and take a course due northward along the bank of the river.

In his letter of the 4th inst., the secretary said, "We really expect to have everything completed for active operations within ten days at the farthest." He replied to Mr. Armstrong's letter thanking him for his very prompt and satisfactory attention to this matter.

Having reached this stage in the operations of the road we can now reasonably expect to see a practical move made immediately.

Newspaper men as a rule do not fight shy of money, but a letter containing a $ bill created a sensation in the Herald office, Stratford, a few days ago. The sender remarked "that the money would have been sent before, but they had had smallpox in the house."

CITY AND COUNTY NEWS

LOCAL AND DISTRICT HAPPENINGS OF THE DAY.

The Weather.

PROBS.—Westerly winds; fine; not much change in temperature.

The Local Delayed.

The 7.40 C.P.R. local did not arrive until 10.40 last night, owing to the breaking down of an engine at Myrtle.

Broke an Arm.

Mrs. Wright, an elderly lady residing on Dublin street, had the misfortune yesterday to fall on the stairs and break her left arm. The accident was a very painful one.

An Alleged Horse Thief.

County Constable Cochrane arrived in town last night with James Macauley whom he locked up in the cells. Macauley was arrested at Tweed on the suspicion of being the man who recently stole a horse, cutter and robes.

Distribution of Bread.

Messrs. H. LeBrun and Ed. Brown recently played a curling match the stake for which was 100 loaves of bread for the poor. Mr. LeBrun was defeated and promptly made arrangements to have the bread distributed at Brown Bros.' store between 4 and 6 o'clock this afternoon. Mr. LeBrun and Mr. Pope will supervise the distribution.

Horses Wanted.

Mr. W. J. Pearson, the well known horse buyer of Montreal, will visit this district next week for the purchasing a carload of good, sound horses, for which the highest prices will be paid. He is billed for the following dates: McGregor's hotel, Norwood, Wednesday and Thursday, Feb. 20th and 21st; Crocker's hotel, Millbrook, Friday, Feb. 22nd; Cavanagh's hotel, Peterborough, Saturday, Feb. 23rd.

Wrong Again.

By an error in our local mention of the Peterborough Conservative meeting last week we made the date Friday evening instead of Thursday, which we might have known was an error, considering the great storm that was approaching, whose chilling blasts never strike the Conservatives. We hope no one was induced to be taken in on Friday night at the McCarthy meeting, thinking it was a genuine old time rally by our mistake.—Millbrook Reporter.

The Business World.

Daniel Genge, furniture, Alvinston, has been succeeded by R. Whiting & Co. J.F. Ross, general store, Coboconk, has assigned to W. A. Campbell. W. F Jones, dry goods, Belleville, is reported financially embarrassed. The creditors of Clarke & Hunter, furniture, Caledon East, meet today. A. Smith, baker, Hepworth, has sold out. J. W. Cathcart, fancy goods, Leamington, has assigned to W. Stares. F. W. Tanner & Co., bankers, Lucan, have been succeeded by McMurrich & Rance. Fred Davis, grocer, Mitchell, has sold out to R. Barley.

Released on Bail.

Before his Honor Judge McDougall in Chambers yesterday, Mr. T. C. Robinette, on behalf of Albert Weighill, station agent at Unionville, held for manslaughter in connection with the recent Grand Trunk accident at Agincourt, made an application for the release of the accused on bail. County Crown Attorney Dewart opposed the application but the Judge granted the request for bail, the amount being fixed at two sureties of $2,000 each, and the accused in the sum of $4,000. The bondsmen were John F. Davidson and R. A. Stiver, general merchants, of Unionville. The investigation into the charge against Weighill will be resumed at the Court House on Tuesday next at 10 a.m., before Justices Graham and Wingfield, Toronto.

Runaway.

On Tuesday night last, while Rev. Mr. Macdonald and Mr. R. Burgis, accompanied by a lady, were returning home from the S.S. convention held in Bridgenorth, they met with an unfortunate experience. They had just got a short distance from Bridgenorth, when the horse ran against a snow bank, upsetting the cutter and throwing the occupants out. The horse being free, made off down the road toward Lakefield at a fast pace, but had not gone very far when it overtook a horse and cutter driven by Mr. T. H. Benson, and before he could turn out of the road, the runaway had collided with his rig with the result that the shafts were completely torn off. The horse was captured in a short time and Mr. Macdonald returned to Bridgenorth, secured another rig, and arrived in Lakefield without further mishap.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES.

Market day.

The License Committee met last night.

The benefit concert in the opera house last evening was largely attended.

It is very probable that a special meeting of the Council will be called next week.

The police have been unable to serve the man who sold liquor in an ante room at the charity ball. He left town suddenly.

The printers' race at the Sons of Canada Carnival promises to be a very exciting one. Come and see it on the 22nd. Prizes in Gough Bros.' window, George street.

The advertisment of the Carling Brewing Company appears in this issue. The Company has an enviable reputation on account of their excellent brands of porter, ale and lager. Their manufacture finds a ready sale in Peterborough on account of the excellence of their brew.

Currie and Craig, Flower Station, cut a fine log for the Rathbun Company the other day. There were six logs in the tree which were perfectly straight. The measurement of the logs was 3,297 feet. In the butt log there were 840 feet.

A new bank check, something like the Chinese laundry check, is being discussed in bank circles, the object being to do away with identification. The check is in two parts, and one is to be sent to the bank upon which it is to be drawn. If on presentation they correspond, you get your dollars—if not, you six months.

WITH THE SPORTS.

Our Hockeyists Will Journey to Kingston at 1 40 this Afternoon.

Through the kindness of Mr. D. O. Pease, Montreal, the Peterborough hockeyists have arranged for a special train to convey them from Belleville to Kingston. The boys and their numerous friends will leave here at 1.40 this afternoon and will arrive in Kingston at 6.30. Had the boys taken the regular train from Belleville they would not have reached Kingston until after 8 o'clock. The Kingston team demanded that the game should start at 8 sharp, and the Executive of the O.H.A. decided in their favor. Through the kindness of Mr. J. P. Hurley and Mr. D. O. Pease, the special from Belleville was arranged. It is to be desired that a large crowd accompany the Peterboroughs on this trip to encourage them.

Messrs. Phelan and Ed. Brown played a friendly game of curling yesterday for a quarter of beef to be given to charity. After a hard fight Mr. Brown won.

A big delegation of Lindsay curlers visited Toronto on Thursday and had a fine time on several city rinks. At Parkdale the score was 50 to 38 in favor of the home team, and at Prospect Park the visitors again lost by 100 to 60. Afternoon and evening at the Granite rink the Toronto men won by a total of 272 to 179, and on the Victoria ice the Lindsay players again lost by 95 to 86.

A STUDENT'S DEATH.

The Son of Warden Pearce Suddenly Passes Away.

The Toronto Mail and Empire gives the following account of the death of Mr. H. Pearce, son of Warden Pearce, of Norwood: Mr. H. Pearce, a third year student at Trinity College, died Thursday. He was twenty-three years of age, and his home was at Norwood, where his parents reside. The cause of death was typhoid fever, and deceased had been ill only one week. At a mass meeting of the students and faculty held Thursday night it was decided to send resolutions of condolence to his relatives, and also to purchase a wreath to be placed on the coffin containing the remains, which was sent on the train to Norwood Friday morning. The faculty and students, in cap and gown, followed the hearse to the station. Mr. Pearce was a favorite with all who knew him, and his loss is keenly felt.

Yesterday's Toronto News gives a further account: An impressive sight was seen this morning when over 300 Trinity medical students, arrayed in cap and gown, walked behind the hearse which conveyed the body of their late fellow student, Harry Pierce, along Parliament, Gerrard, Jarvis, Adelaide, Bay and Front streets to the Union station, where it was put on board the C.P.R. train and taken to Norwood for interment.

The deceased, who was a third-year student, died last night of typhoid fever at his boarding house, 434 Parliament street. As soon as the news of his death was received, a meeting of the faculty and students was held and a resolution of sympathy with his relatives passed.

The pallbearers were A. McKay, H. J. T. Ince, D. M. Anderson, J. T. Clarke, H. Clare and T. H. Bell. They will represent Trinity College at the funeral.

A splendid floral tribute in the shape of a large cross, contributed by the faculty and students, was laid on the casket.

GARVIN VS. McCARTHY.

The following correspondence between Inspector J. W. Garvin and Mr. D'Alton McCarthy, Q. C., M. P., speaks for itself:

INSPECTOR'S OFFICE, Feb. 12.

Mr. D'Alton McCarthy, Q. C., M. P., Toronto, Ont.

MY DEAR SIR,—Will you do me the favor to grant me an opportunity to speak at your meeting in Peterborough and to debate with you on fair terms the public questions of the day? An early reply will oblige.

Yours respectfully,
J. W. GARVIN.

TORONTO, Feb. 14.

J. W. Garvin, Esq., B. A., Peterborough, Ont.

DEAR SIR,—I am in receipt of yours of the 12th inst., asking me to give you an opportunity to speak at the meeting at Peterborough so as to enable you to debate the public questions of the day on fair terms. I do not feel that I have any right to make any arrangement with reference to the Peterborough meeting which is wholly under the control of the gentlemen who invited me to hold the meeting. I may say, however, that I think it would not be practicable to give you the opportunity you desire of debating the public questions of the day as there are to be three other speakers besides myself to address the meeting.

Yours truly,
D'ALTON McCARTHY.

THE CONSTABULARY.

A Convention Called to be Held at Hamilton.

A convention of the County Constables of the Province to be held on March 1 in Hamilton was decided upon by the Provincial Constabulary Organization Committee last night.

The objects of the convention are to draft a scheme for the organization of a provincial constabulary, to be submitted to the Ontario Government during the coming session of the Legislature, and to bring the chief constables and their subordinates throughout the province in touch with one another, with a view to enabling them to arrive at a better understanding as to what is necessary for the coming good.

Each county will send at least three delegates and the local authorities will tender them a reception.

A committee will confer with the Ontario Government with a view to obtaining legislation necessary to the organization of the constabulary.

POLITICS NOT IN IT.

Editor of the Times.

DEAR SIR,—I notice that the congratulatory resolution passed at the annual meeting of the Peterborough County L.O.L. and forwarded to Hon. Sir Mackenzie Bowell, has by some been misconstrued as is manifested by a communication in the Review of the 13th inst. I desire to say, as the mover of the resolution referred to, that nothing was further from my intention than to pledge the support of the Orange Association to Brother Bowell, or the Government of which he is the head. The remarks which I made in moving the resolution will ratify my statement in this respect. Let me here give the exact words which I then used. "Never before in the history of Canada have we had a Past Grand Master and Sovereign of the Orange Association holding the office of Premier of Canada, and whatever opinions we may differ on politically, join in congratulating a brother who has been called upon to fill the highest office in the gift of the Canadian people and received the honor of Knighthood at the hands of his Sovereign." I think this clearly shows the motive with which I was actuated. As for pledging the Orangemen of Peterborough to support a Government that squanders the people's money by paying for requiem masses for the dead and endeavoring to force Separate Schools on the Protestant population of Manitoba and the Northwest, would certainly not be creditable to the members of the Orange Order. As an Orangeman, I am gratified to see a brother so highly honored and also that the fact of being a member of the institution is no longer a barrier to the attainments of these honors, but I must certainly decline to support, politically, an Orangeman who voted against the Orange Bill in the House of Commons, when introduced by the late Bro. John White and against Col. O'Brien's anti-Jesuit resolution, D'Alton McCarthy's dual language and Separate School Bills, and for the Home Rule resolution.

Very truly yours,
W. H. G. ARMSTRONG.

Peterborough, Feb. 15.

A Pitiable Case.

A rather pitiable case presented itself to our citizens on Tuesday. A man named Davidson, belonging to the township of Fenelon, arrived in town with a three weeks' old baby which he wished to dispose of. The mother had died a few hours after the birth of the babe, leaving the father, who is only a laboring man in poor circumstances, with three little children to look after. Some kind-hearted neighbors adopted the two elder children, while the helpless little infant was brought to Lindsay by the father, with the hope that it would be taken in charge by the Children's Aid Society. This object was not effected, however, and the poor man had to return home with the little one. The man's feet were both badly frost bitten The case all round was a sad one. Whoever will adopt this child will be doing a really praiseworthy act.—Lindsay Watchman.

Fire in Millbrook.

About 10 o'clock Thursday forenoon an alarm of fire was given in Millbrook, when it was found that the carriage works of Mr. L. S. Clarry were on fire. The fire brigade was promptly on hand, but the devouring element had attained such headway that nothing could save the building, so the attention of the firemen was confined to the adjoining buildings and the fire was prevented from spreading. Everything was gotten out except a couple of carriages and some lumber and tools. The fire started from the stove. The loss is estimated at about $15,000, partially insured.

A Metal Breadboard

THE WOMAN WHO HAS BEEN USED to kneading dough on the old fashioned wooden breadboard knows what a bother it is to get them clean and how cumbersome and heavy they are. When they begin to crack or check it is almost impossible to thoroughly cleanse them, and they may easily become dangerous conveyances of disease. It was left for a woman, of course, to remedy this state of affairs, and Mrs. M. M. Everhard, of St. Joseph, Mich., has patented a metal bread board, which is one of the greatest labor-savers imaginable. It is light, does not absorb grease, dough does not adhere to it, and while it possesses all the advantages of the marble bread-board it is much cheaper and, of course, far lighter and easier to handle. If readers want to confer a favor upon their wives that will be forever appreciated, let them send $1 to the manufacturers, 161 Bay street, Toronto, for one of these boards.

SHOT DOWN HIS WIFE.

ONTARIO'S FAIR FAME BESMIRCHED BY ANOTHER FOUL MURDER.

An Old Retired Farmer Shoots His Wife in Cold Blood and Then Attempts to Kill His Neice—He Then Shoots Himself—a Tragedy at Tottenham.

Special to the Times.

TOTTENHAM, Ont., Feb. 16.—One of the most horrible tragedies that has ever occurred in this part of Ontario took place in Tottenham this morning about ten o'clock.

Robert Newbury, a man of some 75 years of age, who has lived with his wife and neice, shot his wife in the back of the head while she was arranging some clothes on a dressing case. The bullet passed through her head, coming out at the forehead, killing her instantly. He then chased the little girl out into the back yard, pointing the revolver at her. She pleaded with him not to shoot, but with no effect, and a shot was fired, the bullet crashing through her jaw. The exact course of the bullet has not been found.

NEWBURY SHOOTS HIMSELF.

Newbury next proceeded back to the house and went inside, drew the revolver on himself, the bullet penetrating the skull. A second time he attempted to end his existence, and the wound was made about the temple. He is still alive, but not the slightest hopes are entertained of his recovery. No reason can be assigned for the rash act. Newbury and his wife, who is a few years younger, seemed to get along well, and were very comfortably situated, having retired from farming many years ago. Both have been in rather poor health for some time, but improving.

The little girl does not seem to be seriously hurt and will recover.

AN INQUEST TO BE HELD.

Drs. Wright and Campbell are in attendance and the coroner, Dr. Law, will hold an inquest.

The old man left his watch with an uptown shoemaker last night, saying to keep it until he would call for it. A neighbor was in conversing with the couple for an hour this morning and had only left the house a few minutes when the deed was committed.

Newbury, it is learned in Toronto, had no children. He went to Tottenham 11 years ago from the States, where he made his money. Since coming to Canada he lived on an income derived from money loaned on mortgages. He was married about 15 years ago, at Brantford, to the woman he killed. She was a Miss Martin and has a respectable connection of friends at Beeton.

Newbury was very ill a couple of years ago and his constitution was shattered. Since then he has been somewhat eccentric.

CHAMBERLAIN'S AMENDMENT.

It May Wreck the Government—The Division on Monday.

Special to the Times.

LONDON, Feb. 16.—On the resumption of the debate on the address in reply to the Queen's speech opening the session, Mr. Joseph Chamberlain offered an amendment declaring that it was contrary to the public interest for the time of Parliament to be occupied in the discussion of measures which, according to the Ministers' own statements, had no prospect of passing into law, while proposals involving grave constitutional changes had been announced on which the judgment of Parliament should be taken without delay.

In speaking to his amendment, Mr. Chamberlain said that the Unionists in the House desired to impugn the latest electoral device, consisting of wasting the time of the House in the discussion of measures which were not expected to pass but had been introduced in order to confuse the issues now before the public, and destroy the inevitable condemnation which awaited the primary policy of the Government. The refusal of the Government, declared Mr. Chamberlain, to disclose the terms of their proposed resolution against the House of Lords was disrespectful to the House. The Government was tottering, and could no longer represent the interests of Great Britain in the councils of Europe. Neither could it enact measures for the enforcement of its domestic policy.

Mr. Asquith, the Home Secretary, in reply to Mr. Chamberlain, said that it would not be the Government's fault, but the fault of the House of Lords, if the measures did not become law.

Mr. Henry Labouchere, the Radical leader, said that the members of his party were dissatisfied because a leader (Lord Rosebery) who was a member of the House of Lords, had been planked about it. Mr. Labouchere blamed Lord Rosebery for pandering to the "jingo" party. Continuing, he said there had undoubtedly been a change in the attitude of Liberal officialdom since the retirement of Mr. Gladstone, both in regard to Home Rule and the position of the House of Lords. The change was due to the influence of Lord Rosebery. Mr. Labouchere warned the Government that the country had not changed its views of the question, but demanded the abolition of the House of Lords. He urged the Government not to pursue a course which would only lead to disaster.

Everything is Ready.

TORONTO, Feb. 16.—Herman Brenzell, the New York merchant who is prosecuting the man Frederick Tiedemann for robbing him of eight or nine thousand dollars, arrived from New York yesterday with the necessary papers required to effect the prisoner's extradition. The case comes up next Wednesday before Judge McDougall.

Fred Coleman in London.

LONDON, Eng., Feb. 16.—Frederick J. Coleman, of Toronto, whose slick methods of wire pulling and interviewing aldermen in the interests of individuals and corporations seeking favors from the Toronto City Council, were exposed at the boodle investigation, arrived in London today. He refuses absolutely to be interviewed.

THE POLITICAL SITUATION

THE TELEGRAM SIZES UP THE DIFFERENT CONSTITUENCIES.

Patrons Will Make Trouble in East Hastings—and Haldimand—The Liberals and the Voters' List in Muskoka.

From the Evening Telegram.

TORONTO, Feb. 16.—Isaac J. Gould, of Uxbridge, has been promised Conservative support if he will run as an independent Grit against J. D. Edgar in West Ontario, where the Liberals are hived.

There are indications that the Patrons may give young Northrop trouble in East Hastings, and, with Harry Corby out of it, West Hastings is not sure for the Government, that is, it would not be sure if Mr. Corby had not pledged himself to keep North, East and West Hastings in line for the Conservative cause.

Mackenzie Bowell's old constituency, North Hastings, is looked upon as good fighting ground by some sanguine Grits. They helped an independent Conservative to defeat A. F. Wood, and now expect independent Conservatives to help elect Tom Cross, of Madoc, or some other good Grit.

UP IN MUSKOKA.

Reports from Muskoka are mixed. Pratt, the Liberal nominee, has been inciting Frank Pedley to deeds of appalling industry in enlarging the voters' lists with Liberal names. Dr. Wade, of Dunchurch, the machine Conservative, has been busy on the lists, and Wm. O'Brien, the man of Shanty Bay, has not been idle. There is no telling who will win but the chances are that Col. O'Brien has more strength among Muskoka settlers than either the Grit or Tory politicians credit him with.

Harry Frankland is the livest candidate the Grits have ever had in East York. He is a good type of the young Canadian: honest, able and popular, and if he does not win, his party will at least have the pleasure of knowing that it had better lose with him than win with a worse man.

A PATRON IN HALDIMAND.

All reports from Haldimand indicate that whenever the constituency is opened the Patron, Jacob Baxter, ex Speaker of the House, will be defeated by John Senn, the Patron. Senn is a Tory, and the Grit Patrons are going to stick to him, in the hope that the Tory Patrons will stick to them and swamp Dr. Montague, who would not be secure against an agricultural uprising, even in gerrymandered Haldimand, with its great Conservative majority.

Jim McMullen is bestirring himself to rouse the masses in North Wellington. A Conservative Patron, Wansborough, of Amaranth, and L. H. Clarke, of Toronto, are his opponents. Seeing that the Patron nominee comes from a great Conservative township, his nomination seems to be no aid to Mr. Clarke, whose strength may be overrated. At all events, James McMullen is in the fight bottines, and the man who defeats him has got a warfare on his hands.

Down east Grits apprehend that William Cameron Edwards is in no danger in Russell. Hurtuboise, the Conservative nominee, is hustling, making a demonstration of strength, but on election day old timers calculate that he will be hit by the strength of Edwards in Clarence Township and heard of no more.

Thornton, of Clarke Township, is a Grit, standing as a Patron in West Durham. Walsh, the Government candidate, is a Methodist temperance Conservative. Robt. Beith, the sitting member and successor to Hon. E. Blake, is a live farmer and horse breeder, and the farm boys know him as "Bob," because he is one of them.

WEST ELGIN AND ELGIN.

Among the claimants for the Liberal nomination in the Grit hive of West Elgin was Tom Montague, the Grit brother of Hon. Walter Humphries Montague, M.P. Thomas has some of the family fluency but up in the west they know him only as "Montag," he having not yet attained to dignity of Montague.

West Elgin's loyalty to George Elliott Casey is one of the pleasing chapters in political history. He carried the constituency for the Grits when he was rich and young. It was hard fighting ground then, but it has been reconstructed until it is a hive. Now, Mr. Casey is not so young, and he is poor, but the affection of his constituents has survived all efforts to run him out of Parliament, and now, as in days of yore, the Grit convention is a 'walk-over" for Casey.

TROUBLE AHEAD IN SOUTH RENFREW.

Ferguson, the Conservative member for South Renfrew, has a hard fight ahead of him. That constituency was held by John Lorne Macdougall, now Auditor General, and Robert Campbell, who took the Grit nomination when he dropped out, could not be dislodged save by death. When Campbell died, Duncan McIntyre, the millionaire, who was a South Renfrew boy, and well known as "Dunc," tried to hold it for the Grits. Dr. Ferguson defeated him; he was re-elected in 1891 with the help of the Dowling faction. Young Campbell, son of the old member, defeated Dr. Dowling for the Legislature, and, encouraged by this success, the Liberals are going to make a fight against Ferguson by nominating a Grit Catholic.

A Toronto Woman Burned.

STEUBENVILLE, Feb. 16.—Mrs. Richard Simpson, of Toronto, died last night from burns received. Her dress caught fire from a grate and she ran into the yard, where she rolled in the snow. Neighbors tried to extinguish the blazing clothes but failed.

THE HYAMS MURDER CASE

THEIR TYPEWRITER TELLS OF THE WAY SHE WAS GOT RID OF.

On the Fatal Morning She Was Sent to the Farthest Suburbs—The Big Weight is Not Missing—Detectives Still Looking for Clues.

Special to The Times.

TORONTO, Feb. 16.—There have been scores of applications made to Crown Attorney Curry by citizens for permission to view the body of William C. Wells, the victim of the Colborne street tragedy two years ago, but no person will be allowed to see the body unless they have an order from the Attorney-General's department.

This morning Mr. Curry and Detectives Davis and Cuddy were again to be found at the old Colborne street warehouse making further investigations. Photographer Bryce was there and five photographs of the hoist and its surroundings were taken and will be produced when the trial comes on.

THE WEIGHT NOT MISSING.

It was stated last night that the weight which is alleged to have fallen on Wells' head was missing. Such is not the case; the weight was on the hoist from the day of the tragedy until this morning when it was taken possession of by the Crown.

A post mortem examination is being held this afternoon at the undertaking establishment of B. D. Humphrey & Bro., on Yonge street, by Drs. John Caven and Arthur Jukes Johnson. No outsiders, not even newspaper reporters, will be permitted to be present, and the result of the examination will be closely guarded until the trial comes on.

AN $800 PAIR OF EARRINGS.

The J. E. Ellis Company, on December 17 last, sold D. T. Hyams a pair of $800 diamond earrings, receiving $50 down. Since then only $50 more was paid. Today suit for the $700 balance was commenced.

THE TYPEWRITERS STORY.

A stenographer named Miss Mabel Latimer, engaged at present with the Equitable Life Insurance Co. and who lives at 91 Denison avenue, was in the employ of the Hyams Brothers at the time of the Wells' tragedy.

She states that she was given several letters to deliver on the morning of Jan. 16th, 1893. This was only a few weeks after she went to work for the firm. She had taken the place of Miss Martha Wells, who, it was believed, was leaving in order to prepare for her marriage to Harry Hyams. It was through the personal friendship of the Wells family that Miss Latimer secured the situation. In fact it is stated by friends of the young lady that at the time she went to work on Colborne street she and Willie Wells were engaged to be married.

SENT TO DELIVER LETTERS.

Miss Latimer says that on the Monday morning of the tragedy she was ordered to deliver a letter to a gentleman's house over the Don. Another letter took her out to Deer Park. The gentleman to whom the letter over the Don was addressed had an office on King street but Harry Hyams made the young lady deliver it to his house which seemed to her an unnecessary journey.

It is understood that when Mrs. Hyams life was being so heavily insured the Equitable was not visited and it is stated that Hyams wanted to keep away from there because he was afraid that Miss Latimer might get an inkling of what was going on.

A WARRANT FROM MONTREAL.

High Constable Bissonette, of Montreal, arrived in the city this morning with a warrant for the arrest of Harry P. Hyams on a charge of forgery. The warrant was endorsed by the magistrate here and left in possession of Inspector Stark so that in case Hyams is liberated he will be immediately re-arrested and sent down to Montreal to stand his trial there.

HYAMS' MONTREAL SUITS.

A Technical Point Raised by His Montreal Debtors.

Special to the Times.

MONTREAL, Feb. 16.—Harry P. Hyams figured in a case in the Montreal courts yesterday. When in this city he did a large business as a money lender, and before he was arrested he had entered a number of suits against his debtors in the Circuit Court here. Those actions are still on.

Quebec law obliges persons outside the province to furnish security for costs in suits in which they are the plaintiffs. The question thus arises whether Hyams, whose present domicile is in Toronto jail, really lost his domicile in Quebec, because his absence is not voluntary.

Barrister W. S. Walker, counsel for some of the defendants in one of Hyams' moved yesterday that the plaintiff be asked to furnish a security for costs in his suit, he being no longer a resident of the province. The court granted an adjournment to allow Hyams' counsel to file an affidavit declaring he has still a domicile in the province and is not voluntarily absent.

Drs. Caven and Johnson made a postmortem on the exhumed body of Wm. C. Wells this afternoon at the morgue. Dr. Teskey and another medical man were present in the interests of the accused.

High Constable Bissonette, of Montreal, arrived in the city this morning, having with him a warrant for the arrest of Harry Hyams. The charge is forgery, Hyams being said to have altered a note given to him by a citizen of Montreal. The warrant was left in the hands of the Toronto police to await further developments.

CORRUPTION IN GOTHAM.

Ex-Mayor Gilroy and Several Police Officials Have Been Indicted.

Special to the Times.

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—The following have been indicted by the special grand jury and the papers are being prepared for submission to the court: Thomas Gilroy, formerly mayor of the city; Thos. F. McAver, police inspector; Alexander S. Williams, police inspector; two police captains, names kept secret.

The indictment against Mr. Gilroy does not relate to any act he committed while mayor of the city but it is based on an allegation of official misconduct at the time he was Commissioner of Public Works.

OTTAWA, Feb. 16.—Archbishop Duhamel, of Ottawa, and Rev. Father Allard, of the North West, this morning interviewed Sir Mackenzie Bowell and Sir C. H. The Times.

PETERBOROUGH, FEBRUARY 18, 1895.

Good morning!

The strictest residents of Peterborough in their respect for the sabbath are not in it with the colored congregation of a Shelbina, Me., church, which has given notice that it will prosecute any person running horses, drinking liquor or using cus words within one hundred yards of the sacred edifice.

The prosperity of the agricultural districts of Ontario cannot be very greatly depressed after all we have heard on the subject when the Wentworth County Council is able to show a balance of $26,064, exclusive of uncollected taxes. The year 1894 shows a balance $2,500, although the rate of taxation was reduced.

Rubber roller skates for soldiers in the field as a substitute for bicycles are advocated by an English army gymnasium inspector in the United Service Magazine. A continuous speed of eight miles an hour is easily obtainable with them, and on coming to impassable places, where bicycles would have to be abandoned, the skates can be taken off and flung over the soldiers' shoulders.

The planets Mercury and Venus can be seen in the south-west at 6 o'clock in the evening. Venus is first visible on account of superior brightness, and will be found about fifteen degrees above the horizon a little to the south of the sunset point; Mercury is a few degrees to the northeast of Venus, and shines with a silvery light, like Venus, in the early twilight. Mercury will be visible for more than a week, and can be readily found between 6 o'clock and half-past six, if the sky along the western horizon be reasonably clear.

The great ordnance survey map of England containing over 108,000 sheets and costing during the last twenty years, about a million dollars a year, is nearly compleded The scales vary from 10 and 5 feet to the mile for the towns, through 25 inches 6 inches, 1 inch, ¼ and 1-10 inch to the mile. The details are so minute that the 25 and 6 inch maps show every hedge, fence, ditch, wall, building, and even every isolated tree in the country. The 25-inch map shows in color the material of which every part of a building is constructed. The plan shows not only the exact shape of every building, but porch, area, door step, lamp post, railway, and fire plug."

The Gascogne's performance illustrates a very cheering fact. She shows that in herself a steamship is safe in any weather. Through the failure of her machinery she endured the extreme test in becoming helpless in a great blow and remaining uninjured through it. Blow high as it may, a ship like the Gascogne is safe so far as any strain may be put thereby upon her structure, or as regards the danger of being simply swamped. The sailor's remark that he wondered how people could rest happy ashore when a gale might blow down shutters and chimneys on their heads, while at sea everything was snug and safe, has a substantial basis of reason. A good ship at sea is practically safe, except for the danger of collision and fire, and, in view of the wonderful fate of the Captain and the reputed end of the Narconic, of capsizing can be reasonably put out of calculation. It is very satisfactory to reflect upon this quality of security in ships. As they develop to the enormous mass of modern giants, they still maintain an all-sufficient factor of strength and stability.

INDEPENDENCE IN PARLIAMENT.

What effect would it have on national legislation if members of Parliament voted by ballot instead of standing up to have their names called out and published in the newspapers when the division bell rings? We are all prone to condemn the members who follow the Government blindly, voting one way when the thumbs of the Ministers go up another way when they are turned down. Yet as long as open voting is adhered to it is obvious that there can be no change for the better. To put the matter in bald English the great mass of members are afraid to quarrel with the party heads. They must trot mildly along at the dictates of party knowing that if they do not they will be uncermoniously kicked aside.

Voting by ballot would give the members a chance to exercise their individual judgments in all cases and would inevitably lead to the abolition of party politics and it is now understood. Whether this is desirable is a question worth considering. There is no question that the hard and fast party lines now laid down lead to many evils, not the least of which is the one pointed out above—the absolute sacrifice of independent judgment and independent principles. The man who is sent to Parliament must be prepared to put his most sacred convictions in his pocket or become a political pariah. Only one course or the other is open to him.

Sir John Macdonald summed up the situation tersely enough when he said that he could get followers enough without difficulty when he was in the right, but what he wanted was followers who would follow him when he was in the wrong. That he succeeded in getting them there can be no manner of doubt, and other premiers have had the same good fortune. The result is that the interests of party, and wrongs are constantly perpetrated that fills the soul of honest men with intense indignation. The change from open voting to voting by ballot would necessitate some changes in the form of government, but surely it would a decided adanvce in the direction of pure politics, fair play and good government.

SIR CHARLES TUPPER AND IMMIGRATION.

Among the many ways adopted by Sir Charles Tupper of familiarizing the English mind with Canada, as a means of stimulating immigration, is to get the study of this country made a branch of public school education. In the report of the select standing committee on Agriculture and Colonization, just issued, appears a letter from the High commissioner, stating that in the schools of the United Kingdom increasing attention is given to the history, geography and resources of Canada. "As a result," he says, of any endeavors to bring about this co-operation in our work I am now in frequent communication with more than 2,000 schoolmasters and schoolmistresses in different parts of the country. I have distributed 1,000 copies of the railway map of Canada amongst these schools, on the conditions that the maps were mounted, varnished and hung upon the school room walls. They have been accepted in every case upon these conditions, and it will I am sure, help to make the lessons about the Dominion more inteligent and instructive.

In addition, Sir Charles states that the pamphlets issued by the Canadian Government are used as readers in many of the schools. During the last few years from 50,000 to 100,000 have been distributed for this purpose, and applications for future supplies are coming in daily. The schoolmasters and schoolmistresses, when writing, invariably mention that the children take much more interest in books of this kind than in ordinary dry geographical readers. The children are allowed also to take the books home in connection with the preparation of their lessons, and in this way Canada is brought before a good many householders in which it would hardly otherwise be known.

THE STUDY OF DIPHTHERIA.

Dr. Olbmacher, of Wooster University, Cleveland, thinks he has made revolutionary discoveries in the science of diphtheric bacteriology. He has charge of the experiments on the "anti-toxine horse," which was tapped on Saturday afternoon, and is about to publish the results of his investigation on the action, life, history morphology of the diphtheria bacillus, wherein they modify the views that have thus far been accepted by workers in this branch of biological science.

Heretofore doctors have talked about true diphtheria and pseudo diphtheria, but Dr. Olbmacher's work, he says, shows that such a distinction is unwarranted. It has been supposed that two distinct germs are responsible, respectively, for the two phases of the disease, one less serious, the other malignant, but he claims to have demonstrated beyond a doubt that the two are identical. Again it has been supposed that the one was alkaline in its reaction, the other acid, but he has found, he says, that the distinction does not hold good. The difficulty is, he explains, that the study of diphtheria germs is yet in its infancy. Little is known confidently of the action and life history of these unicellular plants. For the present, he says, no effort should be made to find the types, and nothing be looked upon as typical, but the investigator should look upon his work up to this time as only a study of phrases.

perial Parliament–Australian Cabinet vs. Federation – Admiral Ting and Chinese General Suicide.

Special to the Times.

STOCKHOLM, Feb. 15.—M. Andre, an aeronaut lectured in the Academy of Science last evening on his plan to go in a balloon to the North Pole. He thought that the trip from Spitzbergen would require several months and would cost 175,000 francs.

SYDNEY, N.S.W., Feb. 15.—The Ministry here has approved the main points of Australasian federation in the bill drawn at the Premier's conference in Hobart a few days ago.

SYMPATHY FOR THE WIDOW.

BERLIN, Feb. 15—The crown princess of Sweden has written a letter of condolence and sympathy to Frau Van Goessel, whose husband commanded the Elbe. She and the crown prince once sailed on the S. S. Sachsen under Capt. Van Goessel's command from Genoa to Port Said, and in memory of the voyage the King of Sweden conferred upon Goessel the order of Vasa.

HUNG CHANG RESTORED.

The Central News correspondent in Pekin says: Li Hung Chang has been reinstated and appointed a peace envoy. The Central News correspondent in Shanghai says that after the surrender of the last forts and the Chinese fleet at Wei Hai Wei Admiral Ting and the Chinese General committed suicide.

JAPAN'S TERMS.

LONDON, Feb. 15.—The Standard's correspondent in Berlin says when Pekin shall be seriously threatened the Chinese Emperor will retire to Paign in Mongolia. When Pekin shall be captured, Prince Kung will be authorised to conclude peace. Japan has altered her terms and declines to inform the powers yet of her views, but suggests that the foreign diplomatist ask what indemnity China is willing to pay and what territory she will cede.

THE JAPAN-CHINA WAR.

The great success of the lecture of the war correspondent, Frederic Villiers, on the recent conflict in the Orient is attributed to his remarkable ability to describe to his audience the actual facts of the details of the various battles. The intense hatred of the combatants for each other has led to many fierce struggles and much shedding of blood, many of which are depicted by the views Mr. Villier has taken on the spot of the several scenes of carnage and notably that of Port Arthur.

H. R. H. ON SKATES.

LONDON, Feb. 15.—A match game of hockey was played on the lake at Buckingham Palace today between the Sandringham team and the House of Commons team. The Sandringham team was captained by the Prince of Wales and the House of Commons team was directed by Mr. Francis Pingham, assisted by Mr. A. J. Balfour, both of whom were in excellent form.

The Prince of Wales acted as "back" and the Duke of York as "forward" in the Sandringham team. Both showed good skating powers and had several heavy falls, but neither were any the worse for his shaking up.

Among the eight of the Commons team falls were numerous, but none of the players were injured. The match was won by the Sandringham team by a score of 8 goals to 5.

The Princess of Wales and daughter and the Duchess of York witnessed the game and enjoyed the spectacle greatly.

Is What Wm. Brookmeyer Gets for Scalding His Wife.

BARRIE, Feb. 15.—William Brookmeyer has been sentenced to two months in jail for scalding his wife with hot tea. He at one time served nine months in Central Prison.

Justice is barely meted out. Two months will soon pass, during which the brute will put in a comparatively easy winter, after which he will come out and again abuse his hard-working wife, who earns a morsel for herself and hungry children by going out washing. She has kept him nearly ever since they moved here from Toronto, and it was her honestly earned money that bought the tea with which the brute scalded her.

A WOMAN'S SUICIDE.

She Absorbs Arsenic and Dies in Great Agony.

CHATHAM, Ont., Feb. 15.—An unusually sad death occurred last evening at the residence of Mr. Walter Savage, Lorne Ave., it being that of his wife, who had a very painful and sudden end from taking a dose of arsenic it is supposed. For the last eight or ten years Mrs. Savage has been subject to fits of melancholia, and while in this state she twice attempted to take her life, once about nine years ago and again last summer, when she had been in a delicate state of health for some time, and yesterday afternoon, unknown to her sister must have taken some iritant poison when in one of her fits of melancholia. A physician was called and asked her to say what she had taken but she refused to tell. Mrs. Savage lived only about an hour after the doctor saw her, and passed away in great agony at seven o'clock, aged 44 years. An inquest is now in progress.

MISTAKES OF HISTORY.

The Universally Accepted Records Are Not Always Reliable.

"What is history but universally accepted fable?" said a learned Smithsonian professor. "I quote the great Napoleon. For example, consider Plymouth Rock. In the town of Plymouth is a rock with a fence around it. It is a sort of local fetich. On Forefathers' day every year exercises are held there commemorating the alleged fact that on this rock the pilgrims landed. As a matter of fact, there is no evidence that such was the fact. Professor Channing, the historical expert of Harvard, has traced the story back and believes it to have been started by an old man named Faunce, who many years ago pointed out the rock to some children, saying, 'Here they landed.'

"History states that the pilgrims arrived on Sunday, but refrained from landing until Monday lest they should break the Sabbath. That is pure nonsense. As a matter of fact, the women and children staid on the ship all winter because it was more comfortable.

"The gorgeousness and high civilization of the ancient Mexicans at the time of the Spanish conquest have been permanently embalmed in history. The whole story is a misrepresentation. Cortez naturally wished to give an impression at home that he had conquered a great and rich nation. In reality it was only a half civilised and untutored people. The mode of living was patriarchal, whole families of 100 or more persons living in one house. The communal dwelling was of one story and necessarily of large size. These structures were described by the Spaniards as 'palaces.' The people ate only one cooked meal each day, for the rest of their food depending on a 'grub diet' picked up anyhow. The dinners, partaken of by so many individuals, are reported in history as 'banquets.'

"The schoolboy learns that Columbus was the man who first conceived the idea that the world was round. Nothing could be more nonsensical. The truth is he merely accepted a notion on this subject which had been handed down from classic times by scholarly men. Strabo, the Latin author, was one of these. The conception was for many centuries as a faint light glimmering in darkness.

"Let me call your attention to an instance of the making of fictitious history. There are good reasons for believing that the Norsemen reached the shores of North America before Columbus. The records of their sagas, however, give no notion of the locality where they landed. Only a few such nondescriptive facts are stated as that they found grapes growing. Yet an enthusiast named Horsford, a trustee of Harvard, a few years ago built on the Charles river a tower between Waltham and Newton to commemorate the landing of the Norse voyagers at that point. The sagas tell of going up a river, and Horsford chose to assume that the Charles river was the river referred to. Very likely the notion thus recorded by a monument will gain general credit some day, though there is no more reason to suppose that the river was the Charles than that it was the Delaware or the Hudson or any one of dozens of other rivers.

"I quoted Napoleon a moment ago. You probably know that no battle was ever fought at Waterloo. Waterloo was a post dispatch station some miles distant. Dispatches were sent thence to England, and hence the name given to the battle.

"Sherman's ride to Winchester was not 20 miles—not over ten miles, I think. There never was any foundation in fact for the story of Barbara Freitchie. The same is true of the yarn about Pocahontas and John Smith."—Washington Star.

A Card Mishap.

"I made the mistake of my lifetime the other day," complained a young woman to a friend in a street car as the two rode down town together.

"What did you do, dear?" asked her friend sympathetically.

"Oh, it's too stupid to think of. I feel crushed over it. You know I called on Mrs. Blank, who has met with a recent affliction. I had just one card, and as I did not expect she would see me I wrote 'condolence' in the corner and had it ready to leave."

"Why, that was correct, dear."

"Wait till I tell you all. Mrs. B. saw me and told me her troubles, and we talked and talked, and I didn't leave any card. But I went from there direct to return a call I owed in that neighborhood on a bride."

"You poor thing."

"Yes. You've guessed it. She was out, and I left that card and never once thought of the word I had written on it. I hardly know her at all, so she will not take it as a joke, and —well, there's only one hope I have left."

"What is that, dear?"

"That the writing was so bad that she can't read it and will think it's some kind of a new fad."

Napoleon's Corsican Associates.

Bonaparte's natural associates were the younger men—Masseria, son of a patriot line; Pozzo di Borgo, Peraldi, Cunoe, Bussolini and others less influential. The only Corsican with French military training, he was, in view of uncertainties and probabilities already on the horizon, a person of considerable consequence. His contribution to the schemes of the young patriots was insignificant. It consisted in a proposal to support the central committee which his friends so ardently desired by a body of local militia. The plan was promptly adopted by the associates, the radicals seeing in it a means to put arms once more into the hands of the people, the others having no doubt in mind the storming of the Bastille and the possibility of similar movements in Ajaccio and elsewhere.

Bonaparte, the only trained officer among them, may have dreamed of abandoning the French service and of a supreme command in Corsica. Many of the people who appeared well disposed toward France had from time to time received permission from the authorities to carry arms. Many carried them secretly and without license, but proportionately there were so few in both classes that vigorous or successful armed resistance was in most places impracticable. The attitude of the department of war at Paris was regulated by Buttafuoco and was of course hostile to the insidious scheme of a local militia. The minister of war would do nothing but submit the suggestion to the body against whose influence it was aimed, the hated council of 12 nobles. The stupid sarcasm of such a step was well nigh criminal.—"New Life of Napoleon" in Century.

The First Stagecoach.

The first stagecoach between the two capitals, London and Edinburgh, appears to have been started in 1658. It ran once a fortnight, and the fare was £4. The time taken to the journey is not accurately known, but between York and London it was four days. This lavish system of communication was not, however, kept up, as in 1763 the coach ran between London and Edinburgh once a month only, taking a fortnight, if the weather was favorable, to the journey.

In the days of stagecoaches people sometimes clubbed together and hired a post chaise for their journey as being quicker and less expensive, and Scottish newspapers occasionally contained advertisements to the effect that a person about to proceed to London would be glad to hear of a fellow "adventurer" or two bent on the same journey to share the expense.

In 1754 a heroic effort was made to improve the London and Edinburgh coach. The Edinburgh Courant for that year contained the following advertisement: "The Edinburgh stagecoach, for the better accommodation of passengers, will be altered to a genteel two end glass coach, being on steel springs, exceeding light and easy, to go in ten days in summer and 12 in winter, to set out the first Tuesday in March and continue it from Hosea Eastgate's, the Coach and Horses, in Dean street, Soho, London, and from John Somerville's, in the Canongate, Edinburgh, etc. Passengers to pay as usual. Performed, if God permits, by your dutiful servant, Hosea Eastgate."—Chambers' Journal.

The Friendly Brigands.

A German lady told me that about four years ago a family of compatriots of hers rented a villa for the season near Palermo All the elders were imperatively and quite unexpectedly summoned home, but a convalescent daughter could only leave the south at the risk of her life. What were these poor people to do? Every one said that the country "was so unsafe," life and property were "not respected at all." My friend's friends consulted a neighbor who knew Sicily long and well, and they received this strange advice: "Call upon the brigands. Say that you confide in their honor; that you leave your villa and the young lady in their keeping. All will then be well." And all was well!

Nightly one or other of the dreaded band would call to inquire after the health of the convalescent. Fresh flowers were presented on each occasion. After awhile the brigands sang a serenade. Judging it to have been appreciated, from time to time they repeated their musical attention. The girl felt that these indeed must be "the mildest mannered (men) that ever cut a throat." Needless to say, the gentle brigands never troubled any person and never appropriated any property belonging to that villa. When, two years later, the signorina tedesca was about to be married, her friendly outlaws sent her a pretty and valuable present!—Gentleman's Magazine.

Field Signaling by the Dog.

It is no doubt a startling conclusion, but Dr. Louis Robinson, who has been investigating the mysteries of canine language, has practically set up the theory that a dog speaks with his tail tip. In the case of all hunting dogs which pack together the tail is carried aloft and is very free in movements. There is no doubt that foxhounds habitually watch the tails of those in front of them when drawing a covert. If a faint drag is detected, suggestive of the presence of a fox, but not sufficient to be sworn to vocally, the tail of the finder is set in motion, and the warmer the scent the quicker does it wag. Others seeing the signal instantly join the first, and there is an assemblage of waving tails before even the least whimper is heard. Should the drag prove a doubtful one the hounds separate again, and the waving ceases, but if it grows stronger when followed up the wagging becomes more emphatic until one after another the hounds begin to whine and give tongue and stream off in Indian file along the line of scent. When the pack is at full cry upon a strong scent, the tails cease to wave, but are carried aloft in full view.—London Dispatch.

Do Bostonians Chew Gum Like This?

Æsthetic persons in Boston, U. S. A., are groaning over the habit indulged in by literary ladies of chewing gum while reading their papers to the various societies. On the other hand, lecturers complain that the view from the platform of a whole audience diligently chewing gum, with all the varied facial distortions attendant upon the practice, is as disagreeable as it is distracting to the thoughts. One peculiarly sensitive man, a reciter, declares that he often feels in danger of breaking down through disappointment. Whether he gives them tragedy, comedy or farce, the assembly goes on chewing gum all the time.—London News.

A Defensive Law.

Little Ethel—Do they?

"Do they! Eagles carry off babies, don't they?"

"Yes."

"Well, there's a law against shooting eagles."—Good News.

NAPOLEON AND ROUSSEAU.

The Theories of the Latter Had Great Charms For the Former.

In one sense it is true that the first emperor of the French was a man of no age and of no country. In another sense he was, as few have been, the child of his surroundings and of his time. The study of politics was his own motion. The matter and method of the study were conditioned by his relations to the thought of Europe in the last century. He evidently hoped that his military and political studies would one day meet in the culmination of a grand career. Those years of his life which appear like a realization of the plan were, in fact, the least successful. The unsoundness of his political instructors and the temper of the age combined to thwart this ambitious purpose.

Rousseau had every fascination for the young of that time—a captivating style, convincing logic, the sentiment of a poet, the intensity of a prophet. A young Corsican would be doubly drawn to him by his interest in that romantic island. Sitting at the feet of such a Gamaliel, the young scholar would learn through convincing argument the evils of a passing social state as they were not taught elsewhere. He would discern the dangers of ecclesiastical authority, of feudal privilege, of absolute monarchy. He would see their disastrous influence in the prostitution not only of social but of personal morality. He would become familiar with the necessity for renewing institutions as the only means of regenerating society. All these lessons would have a value not to be exaggerated. On the other hand, when it came to the substitution of positive teaching for negative criticism, he would learn nothing of value and much that was most dangerous. In utter disregard of a sound historical method there was set up as the cornerstone of the new political structure a fiction of the most dangerous kind. Bonaparte, in his notes, written as he read, shows his contempt for it in an admirable refutation of the fundamental error of Rousseau as to the state of nature by this remark: "I believe man in the state of nature had the same power of sensation and reason which he now has." But if he did not accept the premises there was a portion of the conclusion which he took with avidity, the most dangerous point in all Rousseau's system—namely, the doctrine that all power proceeds from the people not because of their nature and their historical organization into families and communities, but because of an agreement by individuals to secure public order, and that consequently, the consent given, they can withdraw; the order they have created they can destroy. In this lay not merely the germ but the whole system of extreme radicalism, the essence, the substance and the sum of the French revolution on its extreme and doctrinaire side.—Professor William M. Sloane's "Life of Napoleon" in Century.

Talmage on Heredity.

Now, the longer I live the more I believe in blood—good blood, bad blood, proud blood, humble blood, honest blood, thieving blood, heroic blood, cowardly blood, writes the Rev. T. De Witt Talmage in The Ladies' Home Journal. The tendency may skip a generation or two, but it is sure to come out, as in a little child you sometimes see a similarity to a great-grandfather whose picture hangs on the wall. That the physical and mental and moral qualities are inheritable is patent to any one who keeps his eyes open. The similarity is so striking sometimes as to be amusing. Great families, regal or literary, are apt to have the characteristics all down through the generations, and what is more perceptible in such families may be seen on a smaller scale in all families. A thousand years have no power to obliterate the difference. The large lip of the house of Austria is seen in all the descendants and is called the Hapsburg lip. The house of Stuart always means in all generations cruelty and bigotry and sensuality. Witness queen of Scots. Witness Charles I and Charles II. Witness James I and James II and all the others of that imperial line.

Scotch blood means persistence. Dutch blood means cleanliness and good breeding. English blood means reverence for the ancient. Welsh blood means religiosity. Danish blood means fondness for the sea. Indian blood means roaming disposition. Celtic blood means fervidity. Roman blood means conquest. The Jewish faculty for accumulation you may trace clear back to Abraham, of whom the Bible says, "He was rich in silver and gold and cattle," and to Isaac and Jacob, who had the same family characteristics.

Parents and Children.

About the worst thing parents can do is to discuss the failings of children before them. The next worst thing is for one parent to attempt to punish the child and the other parent protest against it. Either action will damage the respect of the child for one or the other of its parents, and if there is one thing more than another that parents want to preserve it is their dignity before their children. A child who gets the idea that one parent is at variance with the other on the question of discipline will make both unhappy and render itself decidedly objectionable by playing off one parent against the other. If you want to have any harmony in the family, get together on the question of disciplining the children—at least in their presence—and then if you want to quarrel on methods do it in the privacy of your own apartments, where you can have it out without lowering yourselves in the eyes of the children.—Washington Star.

Effective, if Not Responsive.

A bright youth undergoing examination for admission to one of the government departments found himself confronted with the question:

"What is the distance from the earth to the sun?"

Not having the exact number of miles with him, he wrote in reply:

"I am unable to state accurately, but I don't think the sun is near enough to interfere with a proper performance of my duties if I get this clerkship."

He got it.—Queenslander.

Uncertainty.

"She is determined to be a musician, but can't decide whether to make a specialty of the violin or the piano."

"Has she no positive predilection for either?"

"Oh, yes, but some of her friends think she looks better standing, and others that sitting is more becoming to her."—Detroit Tribune.

Charles I of England was ruined by his marriage, for his French queen persuaded him to attempt the French system of government that ended in his downfall.

Defrauded Colored People.

Seals, a colored preacher, representing himself as the agent for the International Emigration Society of Birmingham, Alabama, proposed to transport emigrants to Africa for $41 each. He collected $4,600, told the negroes the ship would sail on Saturday, 20th, and then disappeared. He was caught, and may be lynched.

Coal Oil on Board.

LONDON, Feb. 15.—A paraffine lamp was overturned on board the Flushing mail steamer Princess Elizabeth, in Queenboro harbor last evening, setting fire to the vessel and killing two persons. The flames were extinguished before the ship was greatly damaged.

Fell on the Ice.

NIAGARA FALLS, Feb. 15.—While skating on the rink in the Queen Victoria Park yesterday Miss Maud Morse, a young lady living in Drummondville, was in some manner tripped up. In the fall her head struck violently on the ice, fracturing the skull. She is now lying in a precarious condition at her home.
